Recurrence and Resilience
The Third Wave of the 1918-19 Influenza Pandemic in Hamilton

The second wave of the "Spanish Influenza" pandemic swept the globe in the autumn of 1918, killing over 500 people in Hamilton, Ontario. Little is known about the third wave of the pandemic, which resurged during the winter of 1919, and began taking lives again. Written by fourth-year Anthropology students at McMaster University, this book tells the stories of the third wave of influenza in Hamilton and of the resilience of its people as they faced another epidemic, just a few months after the deadly second wave.

Cover Photo Credits:
Front Cover
Title: Archie convalescent
Photographer: Jessie Bell Dixon
Collection: Jessie B. Dtum Collection
Date: April 1909
Record Name: 32022191101688.jpg
Title: The Fountain in Gore Park
Collection: Thompson's Photo Post Cards
Date: September 8, 1906

Back Cover
Group photo: Emily Waugh
Cover Design: Richard Zazulak

Edited by:
D. Ann Herring and Sally Carraher