

Tol. II. page 286.

Publishid as the Act directs by 1 Walter 1, June 1785.

THE WHOLE

LIFE

AND STRANGE SURPRISING

ADVENTURES

Q F

Robinson Crusoe,

Of Y O R K, Mariner:

Who lived Eight and Twenty Years all alone in an uninhabited Ifland, on the Coaft of AMERICA, near the Mouth of the Great River of Oroonoque;

AND HIS

STRANGE SURPRIZING ACCOUNT

OF HIS

Travels round three Parts of the Globe.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.

VOLUME II.

L O N D O N. PRINTED AT THE Logographic Breis,

AND SOLU BY

J. WALTER, PRINTING-HOUSE-SQUARE, BLACK, FRIARS; T. HOOKHAM, NEW BOND STREET; W. RICHARD-SON, UNDER THE ROYAL EXCHANGE; AND M. WILSON, NO. 45, LOMBARD-STREET.

MDCCLXXXV.

ТНЕ

P R E F A C E.

THE fuccefs the former part of this work has met with in the world, has yet been no other than is acknowledged to be due to the furprizing variety of the fubject, and to the agreeable manner of the performance.

All the endeavours of envious perfons to reproach it with being a romance, to fearch it for errors in geography, inconfistency in the relation, and contradictions in the fact, have proved ineffectual, and as impotent as malicious.

The just application of every incident, the religious and useful inferences drawn from every part, are so many testimonies to the good design of making it public, and must legitimate all the part that may be called invention, or parable in the story.

The second part, if the editor's opinion may pass, is (contrary to the usage of second parts) every way as entertaining as the first, contains as strange and surprizing incidents, dents, and as great a variety of them; nor is the application lefs ferious, or fuitable; and doubtlefs will, to the fober, as well as ingenuous reader, be every way as profitable and diverting; and this makes the abridging this work as fcandalous as it is knavish and ridiculous, feeing, while to shorten the book, that they may seem to reduce the value, they strip it of all those reflections, as well religious as moral, which are not only the greatest beauties of the work, but are calculated for the infinite advantage of the reader.

By this they leave the work naked of its brighteft ornaments; and if they would, at the fame time pretend, that the author has fupplied the flory out of his invention, they take from it the improvement, which alone recommends that invention to wife and good men.

The injury these men do the proprietor of this work, is a practice all honest men abhor; and he believes he may challenge them to shew the difference between that and robbing on the high-way, or breaking open a house.

If they cannot shew any difference in the crime, they will find it hard to shew why there should be any difference in the punishment: and he will answer for it that nothing shall be wanting on his part to do them justice.

THE

A D V E N T U R E S of ROBINSON CRUSOE.

HAT homely proverb used on fo many occafions in England, viz. " That what is " bred in the bone, will not go out of the flefh," was never more verified, than in the ftory of my Any one would think, that after thirtylife. five years affliction, and a variety of unhappy circumftances, which few men, if any, ever went through before, and after near feven years of peace and enjoyment in the fulnefs of all things, grown old, and when, if ever, it might be allowed me to have had experience of every flate of middle life, and to know which was most adapted to make a man compleatly happy: I fay, after all this, any one would have thought that the native propenfity to rambling, which I gave Vol. II.  $\mathbf{B}$ 2N an account of in my first setting out in the world, to have been so predominate in my thoughts, should be worn out, the volatile part be fully evacuated, or at least condensed, and I might at fixty-one years of age have been a little inclined to stay at home, and have done venturing life and fortune any more.

'Nay faither, the common motive of foreign adventures was taken away in me. for I had no fortune to make, I had nothing to feek: If I had gained ten thousand pound, I had been no richer; for I had already fufficient for me, and for those I had to leave it to: and that I had was vifibly increasing; for having no great family, I could not spend the income of what I had, unlefs I would fet up for an expensive way of living, fuch as a great family, fervants, equipage; gaiety, and the like, which were things I had no notion of, or inclination to: fo that I had nothing indeed to do, but to fit ftill, and fully enjoy what I had got, and fee it encreafe daily upon my hands. Yet all thefe things had no effect upon me, or at least, not enough to refift the frong inclination I had to go abroad again; which hung about me like a chronical diftemper; particularly the defire of feeing my new plantation in the ifland, and the colony I left there, run in my head continually: I dreamed of

of it all night; and my imagination run upon it all day; it was uppermost in all my thoughts, and my fancy worked to fteadily and ftrongly upon it, that I talked of it in my fleep; in fhort, nothing could remove it out of my mind; it even broke to violently into all my diffeourfes, that it made my conversation tirefome; for I could talk of nothing elfe; all my diffeourfe run into it, even to impertinence, and I faw it myfelf.

I have often heard perfons of good judgment fay, that all the ftir people make in the world about ghosts and apparitions; is owing to the ftrength of imagination, and the powerful operation of fancy in their minds; that there is no fuch thing as a fpirit appearing; or a ghost walking, and the like: The people's poring affectionately upon the past conversation of their deceased friends, so realizes it to them; that they are capable of fancying upon some extraordinary circumstances, that they see them, talk to them, and are answered by them; when in truth there is nothing but shadow and vapour in the thing; and they really know nothing of the matter:

For my part; I know not to this hour, whether there are any fuch things as real apparitions, fpectres, or walking of people after they are B 2 dead, dead, or whether there is any thing in the ftories they tell us of that kind, more than the product of vapouts, fick minds, and wandering fancies: But this I know, that my imagination worked up to fuch a height, and brought me into fuch extailes of vapours, or what elfe I may call it, that I actually supposed myself often upon the fpot, at my old caftle, behind the trees; faw my old Spaniard, Friday's father, and the reprobate failors I left on the ifland; nay, I fancied I talked with them, and looked at them fo fteadily, though I was broad awake, as at perfons just before me; and this I did till I often frighted myfelf with the images my fancy reprefented to me. One time in my fleep I had the villany of three pirate failors fo lively related to me by the first Spaniard and Friday's father, that it was furprizing; they told me how they barbaroufly attempted to murder all the Spaniards, and that they fet fire to all the provisions they had laid up, on purpose to diffress and flarve them; things that I had never heard of, and that indeed were never all of them true, in fact; but it was fo warm in my imagination, and fo realized to me, that to the hour I faw them, I could not be perfuaded, but that it was or would be true; alfo how I refented it, when the Spaniards complained to me, and how I brought them to juftice, and tried them before me, and ordered them them all three to be hanged : what there was really in this shall be feen in its place: for however, I came to form fuch things in my dream, and what fecret converse of fpirits injected it, yet there was much of it true. I fay, I own, that this dream had nothing in it literally and specifically true; but the general part was fo true, the bafe villanous behaviour of these three hardened rogues was fuch, and had been fo much worfe than all I can defcribe, that the dream had too much fimilitude of the fact, and as I would afterwards have punifhed them feverely; fo if I had hanged them all, I fhould have thought myfelf in the right, and even justifiable, both by the laws of God and man. But to return to my ftory; in this kind of temper I lived fome years, I had no enjoyment of my life, no pleafant hours, no agreeable diversion, but what had fomething or other of this in it; fo that my wife, who faw my mind wholly bent upon it, told me very ferioufly one night, that fhe believed there was fome fecret powerful impulse of providence upon me, which had determined me to go thither again; and that fhe found nothing hindered my. going, but my being engaged to a wife and children. She told me that it was true she could not think of parting with me; but as fhe was affured, that if she was dead, it would be the first thing I would do: fo, as it feemed to her, that В 3 that the thing was determined above, fhe would not be the only obstruction; for if I thought fit, and refolved to go ---- here fhe found me very intent upon her words, and that I looked very earnestly at her; fo that it a little difordered her, and fhe ftopped. I asked her why she did not go on, and fay out what fhe was going to fay? But I perceived that her heart was too full, and fome tears flood in her eyes; fpeak out, my dear, faid I, are you willing I fhould go? No, fays fhe, very affectionately, I am far from willing: but if you are refolved to go, fays fhe, and rather than I would be the only hindrance, I will go with you; for though I think it a most preposterous thing for one of your years, and in your condition, yet, if it must be, faid she again weeping, I won't leave you; for if it be of heaven, you must do it. There is no refisting it; and if heaven makes it your duty to go, he will' alfo make it mine to go with you, or otherwife difpole of me, that I may not obstruct it.

This affectionate behaviour of my wife's brought me a little out of the vapours, and I began to confider what I was a doing; I corrected my wandering fancy, and began to argue with myfelf fedately, what bufinefs I had after threefcore years, and after fuch a life of tedious fufferings ferings and difafters, and clofed in fo happy and easy a manner, I fay, what bufiness I had to rush into new hazards, and put myself upon adventures, fit only for youth and poverty to run into.

WITH those thoughts, I confidered my new engagement, that I had a wife, one child born, and my wife then great with child of another; that I had all the world could give me, and had no need to feek hazards for gain, that I was declining in years, and ought to think rather of leaving what I had gained, than of feeking to encreafe it; that as to what my wife had faid, of its being an impulse from heaven, and that it should be my duty to go, I had no notion of that : fo after many of these cogitations, I struggled with the power of my imagination, reasoned myself out of it, as I believe people may always do in like cafes, if they will; and in a word, I conquered it; compofed myfelf with fuch arguments as occurred to my thoughts, and which my prefent condition furnished me plentifully with, and particularly, as the most effectual method, I refolved to divert myfelf with other things, and to engage in fome bufinefs that might effectually tye me up from any more excursions of this kind; for I found that thing return upon me chiefly when I was idle, had nothing to do, nor any thing thing of moment immediately before me. To this purpofe I bought a little farm in the county of Bedford, and refolved to remove myfelf thither. I had a little convenient houfe upon it, and the land about it I found was capable of great improvement, and that it was many ways fuited to my inclination, which delighted in cultivating, managing, planting, and improving of land; and particularly, being an inland country, I was removed from converfing among fhips, failors, and things relating to the remote parts of the world.

In a word, I went down to my farm, fettled my family, bought me ploughs, harrows, a cart, waggon, horfes, cows, fheep; and fetting feri oufly to work, became in one half year, a mere country gentleman; my thoughts were entirely taken up in managing my fervants, cultivating the ground, enclofing, planting, &c. and I lived, I thought, the most agreeable life that nature was capable of directing, or that a man always bred to misfortunes was capable of being retreated to.

I farmed upon my own land, I had no rent to pay, was limited by no articles; I could pull up or cut down as I pleafed: what I planted was for myfelf, and what I improved, was for my family; ly; and having thus left off the thoughts of wandering, I had not the leaft difcomfort in any part of life, as to this world. Now I thought indeed, that I enjoyed the middle flate of life, that my father fo early recommended to me, and lived a kind of heavenly life, fomething like what is defcribed by the poet upon the fubject of a country life.

> "----- Free from vices, free from care, Age has no pain, and youth no fnare."

But in the middle of all this felicity, one blow from unforeseen providence unhinged me at once; and not only made a breach upon me inevitable and incurable, but drove me by its confequences, into a deep relapfe of the wandering disposition, which, as I may fay, being born in my very blood, foon recovered its hold of me, and like the return of a violent diftemper, came on with an irrefiftible force upon me; fo that nothing could make any more imprefiion upon me. This blow was the lofs of my wife. It is not my bufinefs here to write an elegy upon my wife, give a character of her particular virtues, and make my court to the fex by the flattery of a funeral fer-She was, in a few words, the flay of all mon. my affairs, the center of all my enterprizes, the engine, that by her prudence reduced me to that happy 10 happy compais I was in, from the moft extravagant and ruinous project that fluttered in my head, as above; and did more to guide my rambling genius than my mother's tears, a father's inftructions, a friend's counfel, or all my own reafoning powers could do; I was happy in liftening to her tears, and in being moved by her entreaties, and to the laft degree defolate and diflocated in the world by the lofs of her.

WHEN fhe was gone the world looked aukwardly round me; I was as much a stranger in it, in my thoughts, as I was in the Brafils, when I firit went on fhore there; and as much alone, except as to the affiliance of fervants, as I was in my island, I knew neither what to think, nor what to do. I faw the world bufy round me, one part labouring for bread, another part fouandering in vile exceffes or empty pleafures, equally miferable, because the end they proposed still fled from them; for the man of pleafure every day furfeited of his vice, and heaped up work for forrow and repentance; and the men of labour fpent their ftrength in daily ftruggles for bread to maintain the vital ftrength they laboured with, fo living in a daily circulation of forrow, living but to work, and working but to live, as if daily bread were the only end of wearifome life, and a wearifome life the only occasion of daily bread.

THIS

THIS put me in mind of the life I lived in my kingdom the ifland; where I fuffered no more corn to grow, becaufe I did not want it; and bred no more goats, becaufe I had no more ufe for them: Where the money lay in the drawer till it grew mouldy, and had fcarce the favour to be looked upon in twenty years.

ALL these things, had I improved them as I ought to have done, and as reason and religion had dictated to me, would have taught me to fearch farther than human enjoyments for a full felicity, and that there was something which certainly was the reason and end of life, superior to all these things, and which was either to be possessed or at least hoped for on this fide the grave.

But my fage counfellor was gone, I was like a fhip without a pilot, that could only run afore the wind: my thoughts run all away again into the old affair, my head was quite turned with the whimfies of foreign adventures, and all the pleafant innocent amufements of my farm, and my garden, my cattle, and my family, which before entirely poffeffed me, were nothing to me, had no relifh, and were like mufick to one that has no ear, or food to one that has no tafte; in a word, I refolved to leave off houfe-keeping, let my farm, and and return to London; and in a few months after, I did fo.

WHEN I came to London, I was still as uneafy as I was before, I had no relifh to the place, no employment in it, nothing to do but to faunter about like an idle perfon, of whom it may be faid, he is perfectly useles in God's creation; and it is not one farthing matter to the rest of his kind, whether he be dead or alive. This alfo was the life, which of all circumstances of life was the most my aversion, who had been all my days used to an active life; and I would often fay to myself, "a state of idleness is the very dregs of life;" and indeed I thought I was much more fuitably employed, when I was twenty-fix days a making me a deal board.

It was now the beginning of the year 1693, when my nephew, who as I have obferved before, I had brought up to the fea, and had made him commander of a fhip, was come home from a fhort voyage to Bilboa, being the first he had made; and he came to me, and told me, that iome merchants of his acquaintance had been proposing to him to go a voyage for them to the East-Indies and to China, as private traders: "And now uncle," fays he, " if you will go ", to fea with me, I will engage to land you upon " your " your old habitation in the island, for we are to " touch at the Brafils."

Mr nephew knew nothing how far my diftemper of wandering was returned upon me, and I knew nothing of what he had in his thought to fay, when that very morning before he came to me, I had in a great deal of confusion of thought. and revolving every part of my circumftances in my mind, come to this refolution, viz. That I would go to Lifbon, and confult with my old fea-captain'; and fo if it was rational and practicable, I would go and fee the ifland again, and fee what was become of my people there. I had pleafed myfelf with the thoughts of peopling the place, and carrying inhabitants from hence, getting a patent for the pofferfion, and I knew not what; when in the middle of all this, in comes my nephew, as I have faid, with his project of carrying me thither, in his way to the Faft-Indies.

I paufed a while at his words, and looking fleadily at him, what devil, faid I, fent you of this unlucky errand? My nephew flared as if he had been frighted at first; but perceiving that I was not much difpleafed with the proposal, he recovered himfelf, "I hope it may not be an un-"lucky proposal, Sir," fays he, "I dare fay you "would ₹4 " would be pleafed to fee your new colony there; " where you once reigned with more felicity, " than most of your brother monarchs in the " world."

In a word, the scheme hit so exactly with my temper, that is to fay, the prepofferfion I was under, and of which I have faid fo much, that I told him in few words, if he agreed with the merchants, I would go with him : but I told him, I would not promife to go any farther than my own island. " Why, Sir," fays he, " you don't " want to be left there again, I hope?" Why? faid I, can you not take me up again in your return? He told me, it could not be poffible that the merchants would allow him to come that way with a loaden fhip of fuch value, it being a month's fail out of his way, and might be three or four : " Befides, Sir, if I should miscarry," faid he, " and not return at all, then you would " be just reduced to the condition you were in " hefore."

This was very rational; but we both found out a remedy for it; which was to carry a framed floop on board the fhip, which being taken in pieces, and fhipped on board the fhip, might by the help of fome carpenters, whom we agreed to carry with us, be fet up again in the ifland; and finisfied, fit to go to fea in a few days.

I was not long refolving; for indeed the importunities of my nephew joined in fo effectually with my inclination, that nothing could oppose me: on the other hand, my wife being dead, I had no body concerned themselves so much for me, as to perfuade me to one way or the other, except my ancient good friend the widow, who earneftly ftruggled with me to confider my years, my eafy circumstances, and the needlefs hazards of a long voyage; and above all, my young children: but it was all to no purpofe, I had an irrefiftible defire to the voyage; and I told her, I thought there was fome thing fo uncommon in the impressions, I had upon my mind for the voyage, that it would be a kind of refifting providence, if I should attempt to stay at home; after which, she ceased her expostulations, and joined with me, not only in making provision for my voyage, but also in fettling my family affairs for my abfence, and providing for the education of my children.

In order to this, I made my will and fettled my eftate I had, in fuch a manner for my children, and placed in fuch hands, that I was perfectly eafy and fatisfied they would have juffice done them, whatever might befall me: and for their education, I left it wholely to my widow, with a fufficient maintenance to herfelf for her care:

care : all which the richly deferved; for no mother could have taken more care in their education. or understand it better: and as she lived till I came home, I also lived to thank her for it.

My nephew was ready to fail about the beginning of January 1694-5, and I with my man Friday went on board in the Downs the 8th, having befides that floop which I mentioned above, a very confiderable cargo of all kinds of neceffary things for my colony, which if I did not find in good condition, I refolved to leave fo.

First, I carried with me some fervants, whom I purposed to place there, as inhabitants, or at least to fet on work there upon my account while I flayed, and either to leave them there, or carry them forward as they would appear willing, particularly I carried two carpenters, a fmith, and a very handy ingenious fellow who was a cooper by trade, but was also a general mechanic; for he was dextrous at making wheels, and hand mills to grind corn, was a good turner, and a good pot-maker; he also made any thing that was proper to make of earth, or of wood; in a word, we called him our jack of all trades. With these I carried a taylor, who had offered himself to go a paffenger to the Eaft Indies with my nephew, but afterwards confented to flay on our new plantation, and proved a most necessary handy dy fellow, as could be defired in many other bufineffes, befides that of his trade, for as I obferved formerly, "Neceffity arms us for all em-" ployments."

My cargo, as near as I can collect, for I have not kept an account of the particulars, confifted of a fufficient quantity of linen, and fome Englifh thin stuffs for cloathing the Spaniards that I expected to find there, and enough of them, as by my calculation might comfortably fupply them for feven years; if I remember right, the materials I carried for cloathing them with gloves, hats, fhoes, flockings, and all fuch things as they could want for wearing, amounted to above 200 pounds, including fome beds, bedding and houshold stuff, particularly kitchenutenfils, with pots, kettels, pewter, brafs, &c. and near'a hundred pound more in iron-work, nails, tools of every kind, ftaples, hooks, hinges. and every neceffary thing I could think of.

I carried alfo an hundred fpare arms, mufkets, and fufees, befides fome piftols, a confiderable quantity of fhot of all fizes, and two pieces of brafs cannon; and becaufe I knew not what time and what extremities I was providing for, I carried an hundred barrels of powder, befides fwords, cutlaffes, and the iron part of fome pikes, and halberts; fo that in fhort we had a large Vol. II. C magazine magazine of all forts of ftores; and I made my nephew carry two fmall quarter deck guns more than he wanted for his fhip, to leave behind if there was occafion; that when we came there, we might build a fort, and man it againft all forts of enemies: and indeed, I at first thought there was need enough for it all, and much more, if we hoped to maintain our possession of the island, as shall be feen in the course of that ftory.

I had not fuch bad luck in this voyage as I had been used to meet with; and therefore shall have the less occasion to interrupt the reader, who perhaps may be impatient to hear how matters went with my colony; yet fome odd accidents, cross winds, and bad weather happened, on this first fetting out, which made the voyage longer than I expected it at first; and I who had never made but one voyage, (viz.) my first voyage to Guinea, in which I might be faid to come back again, as the voyage was as first defigned, began to think the fame ill fate attended me; and that I was born to be never contented with being on shore, and yet to be always unfortunate at fea.

CONTRARY winds first put us to the northward, and we were obliged to put in at Galway in Ire-I land, land, where we lay wind bound two and twenty days : but we had this fatisfaction with the difafter, that provisions were here exceeding cheap, and the utmost plenty; fo that while we lay here, we never touched the thip's flores, but rather added to them here alfo, I took in feveral live hogs, and two cows, and calves, which I refolved if I had a good paffage, to put on fhore in my island, but we found occasion to dispose otherwife of them.

WE fet out the 5th of February from Ireland, and had a very fair gale of wind for fome days, as I remember, it might be about the 20th of February in the evening late, when the mate having the watch, came into the roundhoufe. and told us he faw a flash of fire, and heard a gun fired, and while he was telling us of it, a boy came in, and told us the boatfwain heard another. This made us all run out upon the quarter-deck, where for a while we heard nothing, but in a few minutes we faw a very great light, and found that there was fome very terrible fire at a distance; immediately we had recourfe to our reckonings, in which we all agreed, that there could be no land that way, in which the fire shewed itself, no not for 500 leagues, for it appeared at W. N. W. Upon this we concluded it must be some ship on fire at sea; and as bγ C 2 by our hearing the noife of guns juft before, we concluded that it could not be far off: we flood directly towards it, and were prefently fatisfied we fhould difcover it, becaufe the further we failed, the greater the light appeared; though the weather being hazy, we could not perceive any thing but the light for a while; in about half an hour's failing, the wind being fair for us, though not much of it, and the weather clearing up a little, we could plainly difcern that it was a great fhip on fire in the middle of the fea.

I was most fensibly touched with this difaster, though not at all acquainted with the perfons engaged in it; I prefently recollected my former circumstances, and in what condition I was in, when taken up by the Portugal captain; and how much more deplorable the circumstances of the poor creatures belonging to that ship must be, if they had no other ship in company with them: Upon this I immediately ordered that five guns should be fired, one foon after another, that, if possible, we might give notice to them, that there was help for them at hand, and that they might endeavour to fave themselves in their boat; for though we could fee the flame of the ship, yet they, it being night could fee nothing of us.

2Q

WE lay by fome time upon this, only driving. as the burning thip drove, waiting for day-light, when on a fudden, to our great terror, though we had reafon to expect it, the fhip blew up in the air; and immediately, that is to fay, in a few minutes all the fire was out, that is to fay, the reft of the ship sunk: This was a terrible, and indeed, an afflicting fight, for the fake of the poor men, who, I concluded muft be either all deftroyed in the fhip, or be in the utmost distress in their boat, in the middle of the ocean, which at prefent, by reason it was dark, I could not fee: however, to direct them as well as I could, I caufed lights to be hanged out in all the parts of the fhip where we could, and which we had lanthorns for, and kept firing guns all the night long, letting them know by this, that there was a ship not far off.

About eight o'clock in the morning we difcovered the fhip's boat by the help of our perfpective glaffes, found there were two of them both thronged with people, and deep in the water. We perceived they rowed, the wind being against them, that they faw our fhip, and did their utmost to make us fee them.

WE immediately fpread our antient to let them know we faw them, and hung a waft out as a fignal for them to come on board, and then made more fail, ftanding directly to them. In little more than half an hour we came up with them, and in a word took them all in, being no lefs than fixty-four, men, women, and children, for there were a great many paffengers.

more

UPON the whole, we found it was a French merchantship of 300 ton, homeward-bound from Quebeck, in the river of Canada. The master gave us a long account of the distress of his ship, how the fire began in the steerage by the negligence of the steers but on his crying out for help, was, as every body thought, entirely put out, when they found that some sparks of the first fire had gotten into some part of the ship, so difficult to come at, that they could not effectually quench it, till getting in between the timbers, and within the cieling of the ship, it proceeded into the hold, and mastered all the shill, and all the application they were able to exert.

THEY had no more to do then but to get into their boats, which to their great comfort were pretty large, being their long-boat, and a great fhallop, befides a fmall fkiff, which was of no great fervice to them, other than to get fome fresh water and provisions into her, after they had fecured their lives from the fire. They had indeed fmall hopes of their lives, by getting getting into their boats at that diftance from any land, only, as they faid well, that they escaped from the fire, and had a poffibility that fome fhip might happen to be at fea, and might take them in. They had fails, oars, and a compass, and were preparing to make the best of their way back to Newfoundland, the wind blowing pretty fair, for it blew an eafy gale at S. E. by E. They had as much provisions and water, as with fparing it, fo as to be next door to ftarving, might fupport them about twelve days, in which, if they had no bad weather, and no contrary winds, the captain faid, he hoped he might get to the banks of Newfoundland, and might perhaps take fome fifh to fuftain them till they might go on fhore. But there were fo many chances against them in all thefe cafes; fuch as, ftorms to overfet and founder them, rains and cold to benumb and perifh their limbs, contrary winds to keep them out and flarve them, that it must have been next to miraculous if they had efcaped.

In the midft of their confultations, every one being hopelefs and ready to defpair, the captain with tears in his eyes told me, they were on a fudden furprized with the joy of hearing a gun fire, and after that four more, thefe were the five guns which I caufed to be fired at firft feeing the light. This revived their hearts and gave them C4 the the notice, which, as above, I defired it fhould, viz. that there was a fhip at hand for their help. It was upon the hearing of thefe guns, that they took down their mafts and fails, the found coming from the windward, they refolved to lie by till morning. Some time after this, hearing no more guns, they fired three mufkets, one a confiderable while after another, but thefe, the wind being contrary, we never heard.

Some time after that again they were ftill more agreeably furprized with feeing our lights, and hearing the guns, which, as I have faid, I caufed to be fired all the reft of the night; this fet them to work with their oars to keep their boats a head, at leaft, that we might the fooner come up with them; and at laft to their inexpreffible joy, they found we faw them.

It is impossible for me to express the feveral gestures, the strange extances, the variety of postures which these poor delivered people run into, to express the joy of their souls at so unexpected a deliverance. Grief and sear are easily described; sighs, tears, groans, and a very few motions of the head and hands make up the sources of its variety; but an excess of joy, a surprize of joy has a thousand extravagancies in it; there were fome in tears, fome raging and tearing themfelves, felves, as if they had been in the greateft agonies of forrow, fome ftark raving, and downright lunatic, fome ran about the fhip ftamping with their feet, others wringing their hands; fome were dancing, fome finging, fome laughing, more crying; many quite dumb, not able to fpeak a word; others fick and vomiting, feveral fwooning, and ready to faint; and a few were croffing themfelves, and giving God thanks.

I would not wrong them neither, there might be many that were thankful afterwards, but the paffion was too ftrong for them at first, and they were not able to master it, they were thrown into extasses and a kind of frenzy, and it was but a very few that were composed and serious in their joy,

PERHAPS the cafe may have fome addition to it from the particular circumftances of that nation they belonged to, I mean the French, whofe temper is allowed to be more volatile, more paffionate, and more fprightly, and their fpirits more fluid than in other nations. I am not philofopher enough to determine the caufe, but nothing I had ever feen before came up to it. The extanties poor Friday, my trufty favage, was in when he found his father in the boat, came the neareft to it, and the furprize of the mafter and his his two companions, whom I delivered from the villains that fet them on fhore in the ifland, came a little way towards it, but nothing was to compare to this, either that I faw in Friday, or any where elfe in my life.

Ir is further observable, that these extravagancies did not fhew themselves in that different manner I have mentioned in different perfons only : but all the variety would appear in a fhort fuccession of moments in one and the fame perfon. A man that we faw this minute dumb, and as it were stupid and confounded, should the next minute be dancing and holloing like an antic; and the next moment be tearing his hair or pulling his cloaths to pieces, and ftamping them under his feet like a madman : a few moments after that, we should have him all in tears, then fick, fwooning, and had not immediate help been had, would in a few moments more have been dead : and thus it was not only with one or two, or ten or twenty, but with the greatest part of them : and if I remember right, our furgeon was obliged to let above thirty of them blood.

THERE were two priefs among them, one an old man, and the other a young man; and that which was ftrangeft was, the oldeft man was the worft. As foon as he fet his foot on board our fhip, ship, and faw himself safe, he dropt down as stone dead, not the least fign of life could be perceived in him; our furgeon immediately applied proper remedies to recover him, and was the only man in the fhip that believed he was not dead; at length he opened a vein in his arm, having first chaffed and rubbed the part so as to warm it as much as poffible; Upon this the blood, which only dropped at first, flowed something freely, in three minutes after the man opened his eyes, and about a quarter of an hour after that he fpoke, grew better, and quite well : after the blood was stopped he walked about, told us he was perfectly well, took a dram of cordial which the furgeon gave him, and was what we called come to himfelf; about a quarter of an hour after they came running into the cabbin to the furgeon who was bleeding a French woman that had fainted, and told him the prieft was gone flark mad; it feems he had begun to revolve the change of his circumstances, and again this put him into an extafy of joy, his fpirits whirled about faster than the veffels could convey them; the blood grew hot and feverifh, and the man was as fit for Bedlam as any creature that ever was in it; the furgeon would not bleed him again in that condition, but gave him fomething to dofe and put him to fleep, which after fome 28 fome time operated upon him, and he waked the next morning perfectly composed and well.

26

THE younger prieft behaved with great command of his paffions, and was really an example of a ferious well-governed mind; at his firft coming on board the fhip, he threw himfelf flat on his face, proftrating himfelf in thankfulnefs for his deliverance, in which I unhappily and unfeafonably diffurbed him, really thinking he had been in a fwoon; but he fpoke calmly, thanked me, told me he was giving God thanks for his deliverance, and begged me to leave him a few moments, and that next to his maker he would give me thanks alfo.

I was heartily forry that I diffurbed him, and not only left him, but kept others from interrupting him alfo; he continued in that poffure about three minutes or little more, after I left him, then came to me, as he had faid he would, and with a great deal of ferioufnefs and affection, but with tears in his eyes, thanked me that had under God, given him and fo many miferable creatures their lives: I told him, I had no room to move him to thank God for it, rather than me, but I added, that it was nothing but what reafon and humanity dictated to all men, and that we had as much reafon as he to give thanks to God, who had bleffed us fo far as to make us the inftruments of his mercy to fo many of his creatures.

AFTER this the young prieft applied himfelf to his country-folks; laboured to compose them; perfuaded, entreated, argued, reasoned with them, and did his utmoss to keep them within the exercise of their reason, and with some he had success, though others were for a time out of all government of themselves.

I CANNOT help committing this to writing, as perhaps it may be useful to those into whose hands it may fall, for the guiding themselves in all the extravagancies of their passions, for if an excess of joy can carry men out to such a length beyond the reach of their reason, what will not the extravagancies of anger, rage, and provoked mind carry us to; and indeed here I saw reason for keeping an exceeding watch over our passions of every kind, as well those of joy and fatisfaction, as those of forrow and anger.

WE were fomething difordered by thefe extravagancies among our new guefts for the first day, but when they had been retired, lodgings provided for them as well as our ship would allow, and they had slept heartily, as most of them did, they they were quite another fort of people the next day.

NOTHING of good manners or civil acknow. ledgments for the kindnefs fhewn them was wanting; the French, it is known, are naturally apt enough to exceed that way. The captain and one of the priefts came to me the next day, and defired to fpeak with me and my nephew, the commander began to confult with us what should be done with them, and first they told us, that as we had faved their lives, fo all they had was little enough for a return to us for that kindnefs received. The captain faid, they had faved fome money and fome things of value in their boats, catched hastily up out of the flames, and if we would accept it, they were ordered to make an offer of it all to us; they only defired to be fet on shore somewhere in our way, where if possible they might get a paffage to France. My nephew was for accepting their money at first word, and to confider what to do with them afterwards: but I over-ruled him in that part, for I knew what it was to be fet on fhore in a ftrange country; and if the Portugal captain that took me up at fea had ferved me fo, and took all I had for my deliverance, I muft have ftarved, or have been as much a flave at the Brafils as I had been at Barbary; the mere being fold to a Mahometan excepted; cepted; and pethaps a Portugueze is not a much better mafter than a Turk, if not in fome cafes, a much worfe.

30

I THEREFORE told the French captain that we had taken them up in their diffres, it was true. but that it was our duty to do fo as we were fellow creatures; and we would defire to be fo delivered if we were in the like or any other extremity; that we had done nothing for them but what we believed they would have done for us, if we had been in their cafe, and they in ours; but that we took them up to fave them not to plunder them; and it would be a most barbarous thing to take that little from them which they had faved out of the fire, and fet them on shore and leave them; that this would be first to fave them from death, and then kill them ourfelves, fave them from drowning, and abandon them to ftarving; and therefore I would not let the leaft thing be taken from them: as to fetting them on fhore, I told them indeed that was an exceeding difficulty to us, for that the fhip was bound to the East Indies, and though we were driven out of our courfe to the weftward a very great way, and perhaps were directed by heaven on purpole for their deliverance, yet it was impoffible for us wilfully to change our voyage on this particular account, nor could my nephew the captain an fwer fwer it to the freighters, with whom he was under charter-party to purfue his voyage by the way of Brafils, and all I knew we could do for them, was to put ourfelves in the way of meeting with other fhips homeward bound from the Weft Indies, and get them paffage if poffible to England or France.

THE first part of the proposal was fo generous and kind, they could not but be very thankful for it, but they were in a very great constructure of the passes of the passes of the the notion of being carried away to the East Indies, and they then entreated me, that feeing I was driven fo far to the westward before I met with them, I would at least keep on the fame course to the banks of Newfoundland, where it was probable I might meet with fome ship or floop that they might hire to carry them back to Canada from whence they came.

I THOUGHT this was but a reafonable requeft on their part, and therefore I inclined to agree to it, for indeed I confidered, that to carry this whole company to the Eaft Indies, would not only be an intolerable feverity upon the poor people, but would be ruining our whole voyage by devouring all our provisions; fo I thought it no breach of charter-party, but what an unforefeen feen accident made abfolutely neceffary to us, and in which no one could fay we were to blame, for the laws of God and nature would have forbid that we fhould refufe to take up two boats full of people in fuch a diftreffed condition, and the nature of the thing, as well refpecting ourfelves as the poor people, obliged us to fet them on fhore foinewhere or other for their deliverance; fo I confented that we would carry them to Newfoundland if wind and weather would permit, and if not, that I would carry them to Martinico in the Weft Indies.

THE wind continued fresh easterly, but the weather pretty good, and as the winds had continued in the points between N.E. and S.E.a long time, we miffed feveral opportunities of fending them to France; for we met feveral fhips bound to Europe, whereof two were French from St. Chriftopher's, but they had been fo long beating up against the wind, that they durst take in no paffengers for fear of wanting provisions for the voyage, as well for themfelves as for those they fhould take in; fo we were obliged to go on. It was about a week after this that we made the banks of Newfoundland, where, to fhorten my ftory, we put all our French people on board a bark, which they hired at fea there, to put them on fhore, and afterwards to carry them to France VOL. II. D if

if they could get provisions to victual themfelves with. When, I fay, all the French went on fhore, I fhould remember that the young prieft I fpoke of, hearing we were bound to the Eaft Indies, defired to go the voyage with us, and to be fet on fhore on the coaft of Coromandel, which I readily agreed to, for I wonderfully liked the man, and had very good reason, as will appear afterwards; also four of the feamen entered themfelves on our fhip, and proved very useful fellows.

FROM hence we directed our courfe for the Weft Indies, steering away S. and S. by E. for about twenty days together, fometimes little or no wind at all, when we met with another subject for our humanity, to work upon, almost as deplorable as that before.

It was in the latitude of 27 degrees 5 minutes north, and the 19th day of March, 1694-5, when we fpied a fail, our courfe S. E. and by S. we foon perceived it was a large veffel, and that fhe bore up to us, but could not at first know what to make of her, till after coming a little nearer, we found fhe had lost her main top-mass, foremass, and boltsprit, and presently she fired a gun as a fignal of distres; the weather was pretty good, wind at N. N. W. a fresh gale, and we foon came to speak with her.

WE found her a fhip of Briftol, bound home from Barbadoes, but had been blown out of the road at Barbadoes, a few days before the was ready to fail, by a terrible hurricane, while the captain and chief mate were both gone on fhore; fo that befide the terror of the ftorm, they were in an indifferent cafe, for good artifts to bring the thip home. They had been already nine weeks at fea, and had met with another terrible ftorm after the hurricane was over, which had blown them quite out of their knowledge to the weftward, and in which they loft their mafts; as above; they told us, they expected to have feen the Bahama Islands, but were then driven away again to the fouth-eaft, by a ftrong gale of wind N. N. W. the fame that blew now; and having no fails to work the thip with but a main courfe, and a kind of a fouare fail upon a jury foremast which they had fet up; they could not lie hear the wind; but were endeavouring to fland away for the Canaries.

But that which was worft of all, was; that they were almost flarved for want of provisions; befides the fatigues they had undergone; their bread and flesh was quite gone; they had not one ounce left in the ship; and had none for eleven days; the only relief they had was; their water was not all spent; and they had about half a barrel of flour left; they had fugar enough: fome fuccades D a or or fweet-meats they had at first, but they were devoured, and they had feven casks of rum.

THERE was a youth and his mother and a maid fervant on board, who were going paffengers, and thinking the fhip was ready to fail, unhappily came on board the evening before the hurricane began, and having no provifions of their own left, they were in a more deplorable condition than the reft, for the feam-on being reduced to fuch an extreme neceffity themfelves, had no compaffion (we may be fure) for the poor paffengers, and they were indeed in a condition that their mifery is very hard to defcribe.

I HAD perhaps not known this part, if my curiofity had not led me, the weather being fair and the wind abated, to go on board the fhip; the fecond mate, who upon this occafion commanded the fhip, had been on board our fhip, and he told me indeed, they had three paffengers in the great cabbin, that they were in a deplorable condition, nay, fays he, I believe they are dead, for I have heard nothing of them 'for above two days, and I was afraid to inquire after them, faid he, for I have nothing to relieve them with.

We immediately applied ourfelves to give them what relief we could fpare; and indeed I had fo far over ruled things with my nephew, that I would have victualled them, though we had gone away to Virginia, or any part of the coaft of America, to have fupplied ourfelves, but there, was no neceffity for that.

BUT now they were in a new danger; for they were afraid of eating too much, even of that little we gave them; the mate or commander brought fix men with him in his boat, but thefe poor wretches looked like fkeletons, and were fo weak, that they could hardly fit to their oars; the mate himfelf was very ill, and half flarved, for he declared he had referved nothing from the men, and went fhare and fhare alike with them in every bit they eat.

I CAUTIONED him to eat fparingly, but fet meat before him immediately, and he had not eaten three mouthfuls before he began to be fick, and out of order; fo he ftopt a while, and our furgeon mixed him up fomething with fome broth, which he faid would be to him both food and phyfic; and after he had taken it, he grew better: in the mean time I forgot not the men, I ordered victuals to be given them, and the poor creatures rather devoured than eat it: they were fo exceeding hungry, that they were in a kind ravenous, and had no command of themfelves; and two of them cat with fo much greedinefs, that they were in danger of their lives the next morning.

ſo

THE fight of these people's diffress was very moving to me, and brought to mind what I had a terrible profpect of at my first coming on shore in the island, where I had neither the least mouthful of food, or any profpect of procuring any, befides the hourly apprehention I had of being made the food of other creatures: But all the while the mate was thus relating to me the miferable condition of the ship's company, I could not put out of my thoughts the flory he had told me of the three poor creatures in the great cabbin, viz. the mother, her fon, and the maid fervant, whom he heard nothing of for two or three days, and whom he feemed to confess they had wholly neglected, their own extremities being fo great; by which I understood, that they had really given them no food at all, and that therefore they must be perished, and be all lying dead perhaps on the floor, or deck of the cabbin,

As I therefore kept the mate, whom we then called captain, on board with his men to refresh them, fo I alfo forgot not the starving crew that were were left on board, but ordered my own boat to go on board the fhip, and with my mate and twelve men to carry them a fack of bread, and four or five pieces of beef to boil. Our furgeon charged the men to caufe the meat to be boiled while they ftayed, and to keep guard in the cook-room, to prevent the men taking it to eat raw, or taking it out of the pot before it was well boiled, and then to give every man but a very little at a time; and by this caution he preferved the men, who would otherwife have killed themfelves with that very food that was given them, on purpofe to fave their lives.

At the fame time, I ordered the mate to go into the great cabbin, and fee what condition the poor paffengers were in, and if they were alive, to comfort them, and give them what refreshment was proper, and the furgeon gave him a large pitcher with fome of the prepared broth which he had given the mate that was on board, and which he did not question would reftore them gradually.

I was not fatisfied with this, but as I faid above, having a great mind to fee the fcene of mifery, which I knew the fhip itfelf would prefent me with, in a more lively manner than I could have it by report, I took the captain of the D 4 fhip, 40 fhip, as we now called him, with me, and went myfelf a little after, in their boat.

I FOUND the poor men on board almost in a tumult, to get the victuals out of the boiler before it was ready: But my mate observed his orders, and kept a good guard at the cook-room door, and the man he placed there, after using all poffible perfuafion to have patience, kept them off by force; however, he caufed fome bifcuit cake to be dipped in the pot, and foftened with the liquor of the meat, which they call brewis, and gave them every one fome, to flay their stomachs, and told them it was for their own fafety that he was obliged to give them but little at a time : but it was all in'vain ; and had I not come on board, and their own commander and officers with me, and with good words and fome threats also of giving them no more, I believe they would have broke into the cookroom by force, and tore the meat out of the furnace: for words are indeed of very small force to a hungry belly: however, we pacified them, and fed them gradually and cautioufly for the first time, and the next time gave them more, and at last filled their bellies, and the men did well enough.

But the mifery of the poor paffengers in the cabbin was of another nature, and far beyond the reft; for as first the ship's company had so little for themfelves, it was but too true that they had at first kept them very low, and at last totally neglected them; fo that for fix or feven days it might be faid, they had really had no food at all, and for feveral days before very little. The poor mother, who as the men reported, was a woman of fense and good breeding, had spared all she could, fo affectionately for her fon, that at last she entirely funk under it; and when the mate of our fhip went in, fhe fat upon the floor, or deck, with her back up against the fide, between two chairs, which were lashed fast, and her head funk in between her fhoulders, like a corpfe, though not quite dead. My mate faid all he could to revive and encourage her, and with a fpoon put fome broth into her mouth : She opened her lips, and lifted up one hand, but could not speak; yet she underftood what he faid, and made figns to him, intimating, that it was too late for her, but pointed to her child, as if fhe would have faid, they should take care of him. However, the mate, who was exceedingly moved with the fight, endeavoured to get fome of the broth into her mouth, and, as he faid, got two or three fpoonfuls down, though I question whether he could be 42 be fure of it or not; but it was too late, and fhe died the fame night.

THE youth, who was preferved at the price of his most affectionate mother's life, was not fo far gone, yet he lay in a cabbin-bed, as one ftretched out, with hardly any life left in him; he had a piece of an old glove in his mouth, having eaten up the reft of it; however, being young, and having more ftrength than his mother, the mate got fomething down his throat, and he began fenfibly to revive, though by giving him fome time after but two or three fpoonfuls extraordinary he was very fick, and brought it up again.

But the next care was the poor maid, fhe lay all along upon the deck, hard by her miftrefs, and juft like one that had fallen down with an apoplexy, and ftruggled for life: Her limbs were difforted; one of her hands was clafped round the frame of a chair, and fhe griped it fo hard that we could not eafily make her let it go; her other arm lay over her head, and her feet lay both together, fet faft againft the frame of the cabbin table; in fhort, fhe lay juft like one in the laft agonies of death, and yet she was alive too. THE poor creature was not only flarved with hunger, and terrified with the thoughts of death, but, as the men told us afterwards, was broken hearted for her miftrefs, whom the faw dying for two or three days before, and whom the loved most tenderly.

WE knew not what to do with this poor girl, for when our furgeon, who was a man of very great knowledge and experience, had with great application recovered her as to life, he had her upon his hands as to her fenfes, for fhe was little lefs than diffracted for a confiderable time after, as shall appear prefently.

WHOEVER shall read these memorandums must be defired to confider, that visits at sea are not like a journey into the country, where sometimes people stay a week or a fortnight at a place: our bufiness was to relieve this distressed shough they were willing to steer the same course with us for fome days, yet we could carry no fail to keep pace with a ship that had no mass; however, as their captain begged of us to help him to set up a main-top-mass, and a kind of a top-mass to his jury fore-mass, we did, as it were, lie by him for three or four days, and then having given him five barrels of beef, a barrel of pork, two hogsheads hogfheads of bifcuit, and a proportion of peas, flour, and what other things we could fpare; and taking three cafks of fugar, fome rum, and fome pieces of eight of them for fatisfaction, we left them, taking on board with us, at their own earneft requeft, the youth, and the maid, and all their goods.

THE young lad was about feventeen years of age, a pretty well-bred, modeft and fenfible youth, greatly dejected with the lofs of his mother, and, as it feems, had loft his father but a few months before at Barbadoes: he begged of the furgeon to fpeak to me to take him out of the fhip, for he faid the cruel fellows had murdered his mother, and indeed fo they had, that is to fay, paffively, for they might have fpared a fmall fuftenance to the poor helplefs widow, that might have preferved her life, had it been but enough to keep her alive: but hunger knows no friend, no relation, no juffice, no right, and therefore is remorfelefs, and capable of no compaffion.

THE furgeon told him how far we were going, and that it would carry him away from all his friends, and put him perhaps in as bad circumftances almost as those we found him in, that is to fay, ftarving in the world. He faid, he mattered tered not whither he went, if he was but delivered from the terrible crew he was among; that the captain, (by which he meant me, for he could know nothing of my nephew) had faved his life, and he was fure he would not hurt him ; and as for the maid, he was fure, if the came to herfelf, she would be very thankful for it, let us carry them where we would. The furgeon reprefented the cafe fo affectionately to me, that I vielded, and we took them both on board with all their goods, except eleven hogsheads of fugar, which could not be removed or come at, and as the youth had a bill of lading for them, I made his commander fign a writing, obliging himfelf to go, as foon as he came to Briftol, to one Mr. Rogers, a merchant there, to whom the youth faid he was related, and to deliver a letter which I wrote to him, and all the goods he had belonging to the deceafed widow; which I fuppofe was not done, for I could never learn that the ship came to Bristol, but was, as is most probable, loft at fea, being in fo difabled a condition, and fo far from any land, that I am of opinion, the first storm she met with afterwards she might founder in the fea, for fhe was leaky, and had damage in her hold when we met with her.

I was now in the latitude of 19 deg. 32 min. and had hitherto a tolerable voyage as to wea-2 ther, though at first the winds had been contrary: I shall trouble nobody with the little incidents of wind, weather, currents, &c. on the rest of our voyage, but, to shorten my story for the fake of what is to follow, shall observe, that I came to my old habitation, the island, on the 10th of April, 1695. It was with no small difficulty that I found the place; for as I came to it, and went from it before, on the south and east fide of the island, as coming from the Brassils, so now coming in between the main and the island, and having no chart for the coast, or any landmark, I did not know it when I faw it, or know whether I faw it or no.

We beat about a great while, and went afhore on feveral islands in the mouth of the great river Oronooque, but none for my purpofe; only this I learned by my coafting the fhore, that I was under one great miftake before, viz. that the continent which I thought I faw from the island I lived in, was really no continent, but a long island, or rather a ridge of islands reaching from one to the other fide of the extended mouth of that great river, and that the favages that came to my island were not properly those which we call Caribees, but islanders, and other barbarians of the fame kind, who inhabited fomething nearer to our fide than the reft.

In fhort, I vifited feveral of thefe islands to no purpofe; fome I found were inhabited, and fome were not: on one of them I found fome Spaniards, and thought they had lived there, but speaking with them, found they had a floop lay in a small creek hard by, and they came hither to make falt, and to catch fome pearl mufcles, if they could, but that they belonged to the isle de Trinidad, which lay farther north in the latitude of 10 and 11 degrees.

But at laft coafting from one island to another, fometimes with the fhip, fometimes with the Frenchmen's fhallop, which we had found a convenient boat, and therefore kept her with their very good will, at length I came fair on the fouth fide of my island, and I prefently knew the very countenance of the place; fo I brought the fhip fafe to anchor, broad-fide with the little creek where was my old habitation.

As foon as I faw the place I called for Friday, and afked him if he knew where he was; he looked about a little, and prefently clapping his hands, cryed, O yes, O there, O yes, there, pointing to our old habitation, and fell a dancing and capering like a mad fellow, and I had 4 much much to do to keep him from jumping into the fea, to fwim afhore to the place.

WELL, Friday, fays I, do you think we fhall find any body here or no? And what do you think, shall we see your father? The fellow stood mute as a flock a good while, but when I named his father, the poor affectionate creature looked dejected, and I could see the tears run down his cheeks very plentifully. What is the matter, Friday? fays I, are you troubled because you may fee your father? No, no, fays he, fhaking his head, no fee him more, no never more fee again. Why fo, faid I, Friday, how do you know that? Ono, Ono, fays Friday, he long ago die, long ago; he much old man. Well. well, fays I, Friday, vou don't know; but shall we fee any one elfe then? The fellow, it feems, had better eves than I, and he points just above my old houfe; and though we lay half a league off, he cries out, We fee, we fee, yes, we fee much men there, and there and there. I looked, but I could fee no body, no not with a perfpective glafs, which was, I fuppofe, becaufe I could not hit the place; for the fellow was right, as I found upon inquiry the next day, and there were five or fix men all together, who flood to look at the fhip, not knowing what to think of us.

As foon as Friday told me he faw the people. we caufed the English antient to be spread, and fired three guns, to give them notice we were friends. and in about half a quarter of an hour after we perceived a fmoke arife from the fide of the creek, fo I immediately ordered a boat out. taking Friday with me, and hanging out a white flag, or flag of truce, I went directly on shore, taking with me the young friar I mentioned, to whom I had told the whole flory of my living there, and the manner of it, and every particu. lar both of myfelf and those I left there, and who was on that account, extremely defirous to go with me. We had befide about fixteen men very well armed, if we had found any new guefts there which we did not know of; but we had no need of weapons.

As we went afhore upon the tide of flood, near high water, we rowed directly into the creek, and the first man I fixed my eye upon was the Spaniard whose life I had faved, and who I knew by his face perfectly well; as to his habit I shall deferibe it afterwards. I ordered no body to go ashore at first but myself, but there was no keeping Friday in the boat, for the affectionate creature had spied his father at a distance, a good way off of the Spaniards, where indeed I saw nothing of him, and if they had not let him go Vol. II. E ashore, 50 ashore, he would have jumped into the fea. He was no fooner on fhore, but he flew away to his father, like an arrow out of a bow. It would have made any man shed tears, in spite of the firmest resolution, to have seen the first transports of this poor fellow's joy when he came to his father; how he embraced him, kiffed him, ftroked his face, took him up in hisarms, fet him down upon a tree and lay down by him, then flood and looked at him, as any one would look at a ftrange picture, for a quarter of an hour together, then lie down on the ground, and ftroke his legs, and kifs them, and then get up again and flare at him; one would have thought the fellow bewitched. But it would have made a dog laugh to fee how the next day his paffion run out another way; in the morning he walked along the fhore, to and again, with his father feveral hours, always leading him by the hand, as if he had been a lady, and every now and then he would come to fetch fomething or other for him to the boat, either a lump of fugar, a dram, a bifcuit cake, or fomething or other that was good. In the afternoon his frolicks run another way; for then he would fet the old man down upon the ground and dance about him, and make a thousand antic postures and geftures; and all the while he did this, he would be talking to him, and telling him one ftory or other of his travels, and of what had happened pened to him abroad, to divert him. In fhort, if the fame filial affection was to be found in chriftians to their parents, in our part of the world, one would be tempted to fay, there would hardly have been any need of the fifth commandment.

But this is a digreffion: I return to my landing. It would be needlefs to take notice of all the ceremonies and civilities that the Spaniards received me with. The first Spaniard, whom as I faid, I knew very well, was he whofe life I had faved; he came towards the boat, attended by one more, carrying a flag of truce alfo; and he did not only not know me at first, but he had no thought, no notion of its being me that was come, till I spoke to him. Seignior, faid I in Portugueze, do you not know me? At which he fpoke not a word, but giving his musket to the man that was with him, threw his arms abroad, faying fomething in Spanish that I did not perfectly hear, came forward and embraced me, telling me he was inexcufeable, not to know that face again, that he had once feen as if an angel from heaven fent to fave his life : he faid abundance of very handfome things, as a well bred Spaniard well enough knows how, and then beckoning to the perfon that attended him, bad him go and call out his comrades. He then afked me if I would E 2 walk walk to my old habitation, where he would give me poffeffion of my own houfe again, and where I fhould fee they had made but mean improvements; fo I walked along with him, but alas I could no more find the place again than if I had never been there, for they had planted fo many trees, and placed them in fuch a pofture, fo thick and clofe to one another, and in ten years time they were grown fo big, that in fhort the place was inacceffible, except by fuch windings and blind ways as they themfelves only, who made them, could find.

I ASKED them what put them upon all these fortifications; he told me, I would fay there was need enough of it, when they had given me an account how they had paffed their time fince their arriving in the ifland, especially after they had the misfortune to find that I was gone: he told me he could not but have fome fatisfaction in my good fortune, when he heard that I was gone away in a good fhip, and to my fatisfaction, and that he had oftentimes a ftrong perfuafion that one time or other he fhould fee me again; but nothing that ever befel him in his life, he faid, was fo furprifing and afflicting to him at first, as the difappointment he was under when he came back to the island, and found I was not there.

As to the three barbarians (fo he called them) that were left behind, and of whom, he faid, he had a long flory to tell me; the Spaniards all thought themfelves much better among the favages, only that their number was fo fmall; and, fays he, had they been ftrong enough, we had been all long ago in purgatory; and with that he croffed himfelf on the breaft. But Sir, fays he, I hope you will not be difpleafed when I shall tell you, how forced by neceffity we were obliged, for our own prefervation, to difarm them, and make them our fubjects, who would not be content with being moderately our masters, but would be our murtherers. I answered, I was heartily afraid of it when I left them there, and nothing troubled me at my parting from the ifland, but that they were not come back, that I might have put them in poffeffion of every thing first, and left the others in a state of subjection, as they deferved; but if they had reduced them to it, I was very glad, and fhould be very far from finding any fault with it, for I knew they were a parcel of refractory, ungoverned villains, and were fit for any manner of mischief.

WHILE I was faying this, came the man whom he had fent back, and with him eleven men more. In the drefs they were in, it was impoffible to guefs what nation they were of; but he made all E 3 clear clear both to them and to me. First he turned to me, and pointing to them, faid, thefe, Sir, are fome of the gentlemen who owe their lives to you; and then turning to them, and pointing to me, he let them know who I was; upon which they all came up, one by one, not as if they had been common failors and ordinary fellows, and I the like, but really as if they had been ambaffadors of noblemen, and I a monarch or great conqueror; their behaviour was to the laft degree obliging and courteous, and yet mixed with a manly majeftic gravity, which very well became them; and, in fhort, they had fo much more manners than I, that I fcarce knew how to receive their civilities, much lefs how to return them in kind.

THE hiftory of their coming to, and conduct in the ifland, after my going away, is fo very remarkable, and has fo many incidents, which the former part of my relation will help to understand, and which will in most of the particulars, refer to that account I have already given, that I cannot but commit them with great delight to the reading of those that come after me.

I SHALL no longer trouble the ftory with a relation in the first perfon, which will put me to the expence of ten thousand faid I's, and he's, and and he told me's, and I told him's, and the like, but I shall collect the facts historically as near as I can gather them out of my memory from what they related to me, and from what I met with in my conversing with them and with the place,

In order to do this fuccinctly, and as intelligibly as I can, I muft go back to the circumftance in which I left the ifland, and in which the perfons were of whom I am to fpeak. And firft, it is neceffary to repeat that I had fent away Friday's father and the Spaniard, the two whofe lives I had refcued from the favages; I fay, I had fent them away in a large canoe to the main, as I then thought it, to fetch over the Spaniard's companions that he had left behind him, in order to fave them from the like calamity that he had been in, and in order to fuccour them for the prefent, and that, if poffible, we might, together find fome way for our deliverance afterwards,

WHEN I fent them away I had no vifible appearance of, or the leaft room to hope for my own deliverance, any more than I had twenty years before, much lefs had I any fore-knowledge of what afterward happened, I mean of an Englifh fhip coming on fhore there to fetch me off; and it could not but be a very great furprize to them when they came back, not only to find that I was E 4 gone, gone, but to find three ftrangers left on the fpot, poffeffed of all that I had left behind me, which would otherwife have been their own.

THE first thing, however, which I inquired into, that I might begin where I left off, was of their own part; and I defired he would give me a particular account of his voyage back to his countrymen with the boat, when I fent him to fetch them over. He told me there was little variety in that part, for nothing remarkable happened to them on the way, they having very calm weather and a fmooth fea; for his country. men it could not be doubted, he faid, but that they were overjoyed to fee him; (it feems he was the principal man among them, the captain of the veffel they had been fhipwrecked in, having been dead fome time) they were, he faid, the more furprifed to fee him, becaufe they knew that he was fallen into the hands of the favages, who, they were fatisfied, would devour him as they did all the reft of their prifoners; that when he told them the flory of his deliverance, and in what manner he was furnished for carrying them away, it was like a dream to them, and their aftonishment, they faid, was fomewhat like that of Joseph's bretheren, when he told them who he was, and told them the ftory of his exaltation in Pharaoh's court; but when he flewed them the arms, arms, the powder, the ball, and provisions, that he brought them for their journey or voyage, they were reftored to themfelves, took a juft fhare of the joy of their deliverance, and immediately prepared to come away with him.

THEIR first bufines was to get canoes, and in this they were obliged not to flick fo much upon the honest part of it, but to trespass upon their friendly favages, and to borrow two large canoes or perriagues, on pretence of going out a fishing, or for pleasure. In these they came away the next morning; it seems they wanted no time to get themselves ready, for they had no baggage, neither clothes nor provisions, or any thing in the world but what they had on them, and a few roots to eat, of which they used to make their bread.

THEY were in all three weeks absent, and in that time, unluckily for them, I had the occafion offered for my escape, as I mentioned in my other part, and to get off from the island, leaving three of the most impudent, hardened, ungoverned, difagreeable villains behind me that any man could defire to meet with, to the poor Spaniards great grief and disappointment, you may be fure.

THE only just thing the rogues did, was, that when the Spaniards came ashore they gave my letter to them, and gave them provisions and other relief, as I had ordered them to do; alfo they gave them the long paper of directions which I had left with them, containing the particular method which I took for managing every part of my life there, the way how I baked my bread, bred up tame goats, and planted my corn; how I cured my grapes, made my pots, and in a word, every thing I did, all this being written down, they gave to the Spaniards, two of whom understood English well enough: nor did they refuse to accommodate the Spaniards with every thing elfe, for they agreed very well for fome time. They gave them an equal admission into the houfe or cave, and they began to live very fociably; and the head Spaniard, who had feen pretty much of my methods, and Friday's father together, managed all their affairs; for, as for the Englishmen, they did nothing but ramble about the island, shoot parrots and catch tortoifes; and when they came home at night the Spaniards provided their fuppers for them.

THE Spaniards would have been fatisfied with this, would the others but have let them alone, which, however, they could not find in their hearts to do long, but, like the dog in the manger, ger, they would not eat themfelves, and would not let others eat neither : the differences, neverthelefs, were at first but trivial, and fuch as are not worth relating, but at laft it broke out into open war; and it begun with all the rudenefs and infolence that can be imagined, without reafon, without provocation, contrary to nature, and even to common fenfe; and though it is true, the first relation of it came from the Spaniards themfelves, whom I may call the accufers, yet when I came to examine the fellows, they could not deny a word of it.

But before I come to the particulars of this part, I must supply a defect in my former relation, and this was, that I forgot to fet down among the reft, that just as we were weighing the anchor to fet fail, there happened a little quarrel on board our ship, which I was afraid once would have turned to a fecond mutiny; nor was it appeafed till the captain roufing up his courage, and taking us all to his affiftance, parted them by force, and making two of the most refractory fellows prifoners, he laid them in irons; and as they had been active in the former diforders, and let fall fome ugly dangerous words the fecond time, he threatened to carry them in irons to England, and have them hanged there for mutiny, and running away with the fhip.

59

THIS

THIS it feems, though the captain did not intend to do it, frighted fome other men in the fhip, and fome of them had put it into the heads of the reft, that the captain only gave them good words for the prefent, till they fhould come to fome English port, and that then they should be all put into goal, and tried for their lives.

THE mate got intelligence of this, and acquainted us with it, upon which it was defired that I, who still passed for a great man among them, fhould go down with the mate and fatisfy the men, and tell them, that they might be affured, if they behaved well the reft of the voyage, all they had done for the time past should be pardoned. So I went, and after paffing my honour's word to them, they appeared eafy, and the more fo when I caufed the two men that were in irons to be releafed, and forgiven. But this mutiny had brought us to an anchor for that night, the wind also falling calm next morning, we found that our two men who had been laid in irons, had ftole each of them a mufket, and fome other weapons, what powder or fhot they had we know not, and had taken the fhip's pinnace, which was not yet haled up, and ran away with her to their companions in roguery on fhore. As foon as we found this, I ordered the longboat on fhore, with twelve men and the mate, and and away they went to feek the rogues; but they could neither find them or any of the reft, for they all fled into the woods when they faw the boat coming on fhore. The mate was once refolved, in justice to their roguery, to have deftroyed their plantations, burned all their houfhold fluff and furniture, and left them to shift without it; but having no orders, he let it all alone, left every thing as they found it, and bringing the pinnace away, came on board without them. Thefe two men made their number five, but the other three villains were fo much wickeder than they, that after they had been two or three days together, they turned the two new-comers out of doors to thift for themfelves, and would have nothing to do with them; nor could they for a good while be perfuaded to give them any food; as for the Spaniards, they were not yet come.

WHEN the Spaniards came first on shore, the business began to go forward; the Spaniards would have perfuaded the three English brutes to have taken in their two countrymen again, that, as they faid, they might be all one family; but they would not hear of it; fo the two poor fellows lived by themselves, and finding nothing but industry and application would make them live comfortably, they pitched their tents on the north shore of the island, but a little more to the u west, west, to be out of the danger of the favages; who always landed on the east parts of the island;

HERE they built them two huts, one to lodge in, and the other to lay up their magazines and ftores in, and the Spaniards having given them fome corn for feed, and especially some of the peas which I had left them, they dug and planted, and enclosed, after the pattern I had fet for them all, and began to live pretty well. Their first crop of corn was on the ground, and though it was but a little bit of land which they had dug up at first, having had but a little bit of time, yet it was enough to relieve them, and find them with bread and other eatables; and one of the fellows, being the cooks-mate of the ship, was very ready at making foup, puddings, and fuch other preparations as the rice and the milk, and fuch little flefh as they got, furnished him to do.

THEY were going on in this little thriving pofture when the three natural rogues, their own countrymen too, in mere humour, and to infult them, came and bullied them, and told them, the ifland was theirs, that the governor, meaning me, had given them pofferfion of it, and no body elfe had any right to it; and, damn them, they fhould build no houfes upon their ground unlefs they would pay them rent for them.

THE two men thought they had jefted at first, afked them to come in and fit down, and fee what fine houses they were that they had built, and to tell them what rent they demanded; and one of them merrily told them, if they were groundlandlords, he hoped, if they built tenements upon their land, and made improvements, they would, according to the cuftom of landlords, grant them a long leafe, and bad them go fetch a fcrivenor to draw the writings. One of the three, damning and raging, told them, they fhould fee they were not in jeft, and going to a little place at a distance, where the honest men had made a fire to drefs their victuals, he takes a fire-brand and claps it to the outfide of their hut, and very fairly fet it on fire, and it would have been all burned down in a few minutes if one of the two had not run to the fellow, thrust him away, and trod the fire out with his feet, and that not without fome difficulty too.

The fellow was in fuch a rage at the honeft man's thrufting him away, that he returned upon him with a pole he had in his hand, and had not the man avoided the blow very nimbly, and run into the hut, he had ended his days at once; his comrade feeing the danger they were both in, run in after him, and immediately they came both out with their muskets, and the man that was was first struck at with the pole knocked the fellow down that had begun the quarrel, with the stock of his musket, and that before the other two could come to help him, and then seeing the rest come at them, they stood together, and prefenting the other ends of their pieces to them, bad them stand off.

THE others had fire-arms with them too; but one of the two honeft men, bolder than his comrade, and made desperate by his danger, told them, if they offered to move hand or foot they were dead men, and boldly commanded them to lay down their arms. They did not indeed lay down their arms, but feeing him fo refolute it brought them to a parley, and they confented to take their wounded man with them and be gone; and indeed it feems the fellow was wounded fufficiently with the blow; however, they were much in the wrong, fince they had the advantage, that they did not difarm them effectually, as they might have done, and have gone immediately to the Spaniards, and given them an account how the rogues had treated them; for the three villains studied nothing but revenge, and every day gave them fome intimation that they did fo.

But not to croud this part with an account of the leffer part of their rogueries, fuch as treading down down their corn, shooting three young kids and a fhe goat, which the poor men had got to breed up tame for their ftore, and, in a word, plagueing them night and day in this manner, it forced the two men to fuch a defperation that they refolved to fight them all three, the first time they had a fair opportunity; in order to this they refolved to go to the caffle, as they called it, that was my old dwelling, where the three rogues and the Spaniards all lived together. at that time intending to have a fair battle, and the Spaniards should stand by to fee fair play; fo they got up in the morning before day, and came to the place and called the Englishmen by their names, telling a Spaniard that answered, that they wanted to fpeak with them.

It happened that the day before, two of the Spaniards having been in the woods, had feen one of the two Englishmen, whom, for diffinction, I call the honeft men, and he had made a fad complaint to the Spaniards of the barbarous ufage they had met with from their three countrymen, and how they had ruined their plantation and deftroyed their corn that they had laboured fo hard to bring forward, and killed the milch goat and their three kids, which was all they had provided for their fuffenance, and that if he and his friends, meaning the Spaniards, Vol. II. did not affift them again they fhould be ftarved. When the Spaniards came home at night, and they were all at fupper, he took the freedom to reprove the three Englifhmen, though in very gentle and mannerly terms, and afked them how they could be fo cruel, they being harmlefs inoffenfive fellows, and that they were only putting themfelves in a way to fubfift by their labour, and that it had coft them a great deal of pains to bring things to fuch perfection as they had.

ONE of the Englishmen returned very brickly, what had they to do there? That they came on shore without leave, and that they should not plant or build upon the ifland, and it was none of their ground. Why, fays the Spaniard, very calmly, Seignior Inglefe, they must not starve. The Englishman replied, like a true rough-hewn tarpawling, they might flarve and be damn'd, they fhould not plant nor build. But what muft they do then feignior? faid the Spaniard. Another of the brutes returned, Do?-d-n them, they should be fervants and work for them. But how can you expect that of them? fays the Spaniard, they are not bought with your money; you have no right to make them fervants. The Englishmen answered, the island was theirs, the governor had given it to them, and no man had any thing to do there but themfelves, and with that.

that, fwore by his maker that they would go and burn all their new huts, they fhould build none upon their land.

WHY, feignior, fays the Spaniard, by the fame rule we must be your fervants too. Ay, fays the bold dog, and fo you shall too, before we have done with you, mixing two or three G-d d--n me's in the proper intervals of his speech; the Spaniard only smiled at that, and made him no answer. However, this little difcourse had heated them, and starting up, one fays to the other, I think it was he they called Will Atkins. Come, Jack, let's go and have t'other brush with 'em, we'll demolish their castle, I'll warrant you, they shall plant no colony in our dominions.

UPON this they went all trooping away, with every man a gun, a piftol, and a fword, and muttered fome infolent things among themfelves, of what they would do to the Spaniards too, when opportunity offered; but the Spaniards, it feems, did not fo perfectly underftand them as to know all the particulars, only that, in general, they threatened them hard for taking the two Englishmen's parts,

WHITHER they went, or how they beftowed their time that evening, the Spaniards faid they F 2 did did not know; but it feems they wandered about the country part of the night, and then lying down in the place which I ufed to call my bower, they were weary and overflept themfelves. The cafe was this; they had refolved to flay till midnight, and fo to take the two poor men when they were affeep, and, as they acknowledged afterwards, intended to fet fire to their buts while they were in them, and either burn them in them, or murder them as they came out; as malice feldom fleeps very found, it was very frange they frould not have been kept awake.

However, as the two men had allo a defign upon them, as I have faid, though a much fairer one than that of burning and murdering, it happened, and very luckily for them all, that they were up and gone abroad, before the bloody minded rogues came to their buts,

WHEN they came there and found the men gone, Atkins, who it feems was the forwardeft man, called out to his comrades, ha, Jack, here's the neft, but d...mn them the birds are flown; they mufed a while to think what should be the occasion of their being gone abroad fo soon, and suggested prefently that the Spaniards had given them notice of it, and with that they shook hands and swore to one another that they would be revenged venged of the Spaniards; as foon as they had made this bloody bargain they fell to work with the poor men's habitation, they did not fet fire indeed to any thing, but they pulled down both their little houses, and pulled them fo limb from limb, that they left not the least flick flanding, or fcarce any figm on the ground where they flood; they tore all their little collected houshold fuff in pieces, and threw every thing about in fuch a manner, that the poor men afterwards found fome of their things a mile off of their habitation.

WHEN they had done this, they pulled up all the young trees the poor men had planted, pulled up an enclosure they had made to fecure their cattle and their corn; and in a word, facked and plundered every thing, as compleatly as a horde of Tartars would have done.

THE two men were at this juncture gone to find them out, and had refolved to fight them wherever they had been, though they were but two to three; fo that had they met, there certainly would have been blood field among them, for they were all flour refolute fellows, to give them their due.

Bur providence took more care to keep them afunder, than they themfelves could do to meet; for, as if they had dog'd one another, when the three were gone thither, the two were here, and afterwards when the two went back to find them. the three were come to the old habitation again; we shall see their different conduct presently; When the three came back like furious creatures flushed with the rage which the work they had been about had put them into, they came up to the Spaniards and told them what they had done, by way of fcoff and bravado; and one of them ftepping up to one of the Spaniards, as if they had been a couple of boys at play, takes hold of his hat as it was upon his head, and giving it a twirl about, fleering in his face, fays he to him, " and " you Seignior Jack Spaniard, fhall have the " fame fauce if you do not mend your manners." The Spaniard, who though a quiet civil man, was as brave as a man could be defired to be, and withal a firong well made man, looked fleadily at him for a good while, and then having no weapon in his hand, ftept gravely up to him. and with one blow of his fift knocked him down, as an ox is felled with a pole axe, at which one of the rogues as infolent as the first, fired his pistol at the Spaniard immediately; he miffed his body indeed, for the bullets went through his hair, but one of them touched the tip of his ear, and he

he bled pretty much. The blood made the Spaniard believe he was more hurt than he really was, and that put him into fome heat, for before he acted all in a perfect calm, but now refolving to go through with his work he ftooped to take the fellow's mufket whom he had knocked down, and was juft going to fhoot the man, and had prefented at him, when the reft of the Spaniards being in the cave came out, and calling to him not to fhoot, they ftepped in, fecured the other two, and took their arms from them.

WHEN they were thus difarmed, and found they had made all the Spaniards their enemies, as well their own countrymen, they began to cool, and giving the Spaniards better words, would have had arms again, but the Spaniards confidering the feud that was between them and the other two Englishmen, and that it would be the beft method they could take to keep them from killing one another, told them they would do them no harm, and if they would live peaceably, they would be very willing to affift and affociate with them as they did before, but that they could not think of giving them their arms again, while they appeared to refolved to do mifchief with them to their own countrymen, and had even threatened them all to make them their fervants.

F 4

 $\mathbf{T}_{\mathsf{HE}}$

The rogues were now no more capable to hear reason than to act with reason, and being refused their arms they went raving away and raging like mad men, threatening what they would do, though they had no fire-arms. But the Spaniards defpifing their threatening, told them they fhould take care how they offered any injury to their plantation or cattle, for if they did, they would fhoot them as they would ravenous beafts, wherever they found them, and if they fell into their hands alive, they should certainly be hanged. However, this was far from cooling them, but away they went raging and fwearing like furies of hell. As foon as they were gone, came back the two men in paffion and rage enough alfo, though of another kind, for having been at their plantation, and finding it all demolifhed and deftroyed, as above, it will eafily be supposed they had provocation enough; they could fcarce have room to tell their tale, the Spaniards were fo eager to tell them theirs; and it was ftrange enough to find three men thus bully nineteen, and receive no punifhment at all.

THE Spaniards indeed defpifed them, and efpecially having thus difarmed them, made light of their threatnings; but the two Englishmen refolved to have their remedy against them, what pains soever it cost to find them out. But the Spaniards Spaniards interposed here too, and told them, that as they had difarmed them, they could not confent that they (the two) should purfue them with fire-arms and perhaps kill them; but faid the grave Spaniard, who was their governor, we will endeavour to make them do you justice if you will leave it to us, for as there is no doubt but they will come to us again when their paffion is over, being not able to fubfift without our affistance, we promife you to make no peace with them without having a full fatisfaction for you; upon this condition, we hope you will promife to use no violence with them, other than in your own defence. The two Englishmen yielded to this very aukwardly and with great reluctance ; but the Spaniards protested, they did it only to keep them from bloodfhed, and to make all eafy at last; for faid they, we are not fo many of us, here is room enough for us all, and it is a great pity we fhould not be all good friends; at length they did confent and waited for the iffue of the thing, living for fome days with the Spaniards: for their own habitation was destroyed.

In about five days time the three vagrants, tired with wandering, and almost starved with hunger, having chiefly lived on turtles eggs all that while, came back to the grove, and finding my Spaniard, who, as I have faid, was the governor, and and two more with him, walking by the fide of the creek; they came up in a very fubmiffive, humble manner, and begged to be received again into the family. The Spaniards used them civilly, but told them they had acted fo unnaturally by their countrymen, and fo very grofly by them (the Spaniards) that they could not come to any conclusion without confulting the two Englishmen and the rest; but, however, they would go to them and discourse about it, and they should know in half an hour. It may be gueffed, that they were very hard put to it, for it feems, as they were to wait this half hour for an anfwer, they begged he would fend them out fome bread in the mean time, which he did, and fent them at the fame time a large piece of goat's flefh, and a broiled parrot, which they eat very heartily, for they were hungry enough.

AFTER half an hour's confultation they were called in, and a long debate had among them, their two countrymen charging them with the ruin of all their labour, and a defign to murder them; all which they owned before, and therefore could not deny now; upon the whole, the Spaniard acted the moderator between them, and as they had obliged the two Englifhmen not to hurt the three while they were naked and unarmed, fo they now obliged the three to go and build their their fellows two huts, one of the fame, and the other of larger dimensions than they were before; to fence their ground again where they had pulled up their fences, plant trees in the room of those pulled up, dig up the land again for planting corn, where they had spoiled it; and in a word, to reftore every thing in the fame state as they found it, as near as they could, for entirely it could not be, the seafon for the corn, and the growth of the trees and hedges not being possible to be recovered.

WELL, they fubmitted to all this, and as they had plenty of provisions given them all the while. they grew very orderly, and the whole fociety began to live pleafantly and agreeably together, only that these three fellows could never be perfuaded to work, I mean for themfelves, except now and then a little, just as they pleafed; however, the Spaniards told them plainly, that if they would but live fociably and friendly together, and fludy the good of the whole plantation, they would be content to work for them, and let them walk about and be as idle as they pleafed; and thus having lived pretty well together for a month or two, the Spaniards gave them arms again, and gave them liberty to go abroad with them as before.

It was not above a week after they had these arms and went abroad, but the ungrateful creatures began to be as infolent and troublesome as before; but, however, an accident happened presently upon this, which endangered the safety of them all, they were obliged to lay by all private resentment and look to the preservation of their lives.

Ir happened one night, that the Spaniard governor, as I call him, that is to fay, the Spaniard whofe life I had faved, who was now the captain, or leader, or governor of the reft, found himfelf very uneafy in the night, and could by no means get any fleep; he was perfectly well in body, as he told me the ftory, only found his thoughts tumultuous, his mind run upon men fighting and killing of one another, but was broad awake, and could not by any means get any fleep; in fhort, he lay a great while, but growing more and more uneafy he refolved to rife. As they lay; being fo many of them, upon goat's fkins, laid thick upon fuch couches and pads as they made for themfelves, not in hammocks and thip-beds. as I did, who was but one, fo they had little to do, when they were willing to rife, but to get up upon their feet, and perhaps put on a coat, fuch as it was, and their pumps, and they were ready ready for going any way that their thoughts guided them.

BEING thus gotten up he looked out, but being dark he could fee little or nothing, and befides the trees which I had planted, as in my former account is defcribed, and which were now grown tall, intercepted his fight, fo that he could only look up, and fee that it was a clear ftar-light night, and hearing no noife he returned and laid him down again; but it was all one, he could not fleep, nor could he compose himfelf to any thing like reft, but his thoughts were to the last degree uneasy, and yet he knew not for what.

HAVING made fome noife with rifing and walking about, going out and coming in, another of them waked, and calling, afked who it was that was up? The governor told him how it had been with him. Say you fo, fays the other Spaniard, fuch things are not to be flighted, I affure you; there is certainly fome mifchief working, fays he, near us, and prefently he afked him, where are the Englifhmen? They are all in their huts, fays he, fafe enough. It feems the Spaniards had kept pofferfion of the main apartment, and had made a place where the three Englifhmen, fince their laft mutiny always quartered by themfelves, and and could not come at the reft; well, fays the Spaniard, there is fomething in it, I am perfuaded from my own experience; I am fatisfied our fpirits embodied, have a converfe with, and receive intelligence from the fpirits unembodied and inhabiting the invifible world, and this friendly notice is given for our advantage, if we knew how to make ufe of it. Come, fays he, let us go and look abroad, and if we find nothing at all in it to juftify the trouble, I'll tell you a ftory to the purpofe that fhall convince you of the juftice of my propofing it.

In a word, they went out, to go up to the top of the hill, where I ufed to go, but they being ftrong and a good company, not alone, as I was, ufed none of my cautions, to go up by the ladder, and then pulling it up after them, to go up a fecond ftage to the top, but were going round through the grove unconcerned and unwary, when they were furprized with feeing a light as of fire, a very little way off from them, and hearing the voices of men, not of one or two, but of a great number.

In all the difcoveries I had made of the favages landing on the ifland, it was my conftant care to prevent them making the leaft difcovery of there being any inhabitant upon the place; and when by by any occafion they came to know it, they felt it fo effectually, that they that got away, were fcarce able to give any account of it, for we difappeared as foon as poffible, nor did ever any that had feen me, efcape to tell any one elfe, except it was the three favages in our laft encounter, who jumped into the boat, of whom I mentioned that I was afraid they fhould go home and bring more help.

WHETHER it was the confequence of the efcape of those men that so great a number came now together, or whether they came ignorantly and by an accident on their usual bloody errand, they could not it seems understand; but whatever it was, it had been their business, either to have concealed themselves, as not to have seen them at all, much less to have let the favages have feen that there were any inhabitants in the place, or to have fallen upon them so effectually as that not a man of them should have escaped, which could only have been by getting in between them and their boats; but this prefence of mind was wanting to them, which was the ruin of their tranquillity for a great while.

WE need not doubt, but that the governor and the man with him, furprized with this fight, run back immediately and raifed their fellows, giving giving them an account of the imminent danger they were all in, and they again as readily took the alarm, but it was impoffible to perfuade them to ftay clofe within where they were, but that they must run all out to fee how things ftood.

WHILE it was dark indeed, they were well enough, and they had opportunity enough for fome hours to view them by the light of three fires they had made at a diffance from one another; what they were doing they knew not, and what to do themfelves they knew not. For first, the enemy were too many; and fecondly, they did not keep together, but were divided into feveral parties, and were on fhore in feveral places.

THE Spaniards were in no fmall confernation at this fight, and as they found that the fellows ran ftragling all over the fhore, they made no doubt, but firft or laft, fome of them would chop in upon their habitation, or upon fome other place where they would fee the token of inhabitants, and they were in great perplexity alfo for fear of their flock of goats, which would have been deftroyed; fo the firft thing they refolved upon, was to difpatch three men away before it was light, viz. two Spaniards and one Englifhman, to drive all the goats away to the great valley, valley, where the cave was, and if need were, to drive them into the very cave itfelf.

COULD they have feen the favages all together in one body, and at any diffance from their canoes, they refolved, if they had been an hundred of them to have attacked them; that could not be obtained, for they were fome of them two miles off from the other, and as it appeared afterwards, were of two different nations.

AFTER having mused a great while on the courfe they fhould take, and beating their brains in confidering their prefent circumstances, they refolved at last, while it was still dark, to fend the old favage, Friday's father, out as a fpy, to learn if poffible fomething concerning them, what they came for, and what they intended to do; the old man readily undertook it, and ftripping himfelf quite naked, as most of the favages were, away he went; after he had been gone an hour or two, he brings word, that he had been among them undifcovered, that he found they were two parties, and of two feveral nations, who had war with one another, and had had a great battle in their own country, and that both fides having had feveral prifoners taken in the fight, they were by mere chance landed all in the fame ifland for the devouring their prifoners and making merry; VOL. II. but G but their coming fo by chance to the fame place had fpoiled all their mirth; that they were in a great rage at one another, and that they were fo near that he believed they would fight again as foon as day-light began to appear, but he did not perceive that they had any notion of any body's being on the ifland but themfelves. He had hardly made an end of telling his ftory, when they could perceive, by the unufual noife they made that the two little armies were engaged in a bloody fight.

FRIDAY's father used all the arguments he could to perfuade our people to lie clofe and not to be feen; he told them their fafety confifted in it, and that they had nothing to do but lie ftill, and the favages would kill one another to their hands. and then the reft would go away; and it was fo. to a tittle. But it was impossible to prevail, efpecially upon the Englishmen, their curiofity was fo importunate upon their prudentials, that they must run out and fee the battle : however, they used fome caution too, viz. they did not go openly, just by their own dwelling, but went farther into the woods, and placed themfelves to advantage, where they might fecurely fee them manage the fight, and, as they thought, not be feen by them, but it feems the favages did fee them, as we shall find hereafter.

THE battle was very fierce, and if I might believe the Englishmen, one of them faid, he could perceive that fome of them were men of great bravery, of invincible fpirits, and of great policy in guiding the fight. The battle, they faid, held two hours before they could guess which party would be beaten; but then that party which was nearest our people's habitation began to appear weakeft, and after fome time more, fome of them began to fly; and this put our men again into a great confernation, left any of those that fled fhould run into the grove before their dwelling for shelter, and thereby involuntarily difcover the place; and that by confequence the purfuers would do the like in fearch of them. Upon this, they refolved that they would fland armed within the wall, and whoever came into the grove they fhould fally out over the wall and kill them; fo that if possible not one of them fhould return to give an account of it : they ordered alfo, that it should be done with their fwords, or by knocking them down with the ftocks of their mufkets, but not by fhooting them, for fear of the noife.

As they expected it fell out, three of the routed army fled for life, and croffing the creek, ran directly into the place, not in the leaft knowing whither they went, but running as into a thick  $\mathbf{G}_2$  wood wood for shelter; the fcout they kept to look abroad gave notice of this within, with this addition, to our men's great fatisfaction, viz. that the conquerors had not purfued them, or feen which way they were gone: upon this the Spaniard governor, a man of humanity, would not fuffer them to kill the three fugitives, but fending three men out by the top of the hill, ordered them to go round and come in behind them, furprize and take them prifoners, which was done; the refidue of the conquered people fled to their canoes and got off to fea; the victors retired, made no pursuit, or very little, but drawing themselves into a body together gave two great fkreaming fhouts, which they fuppofed was by way of triumph, and fo the fight ended. And the fame day, about three o'clock in the afternoon, they alfo marched to their canoes. And thus the Spaniards had their ifland again free to themfelves, their fright was over, and they faw no favages in feveral years after.

AFTER they were all gone, the Spaniards came out of their den, and viewing the field of battle, they found about two and thirty dead men on the fpot; fome were killed with great long arrows, fome of which were found flicking in their bodies, but most of them were killed with great wooden fwords, fixteen or feventeen of which they they found in the field of battle, and as many bows, with a great many arrows. These fwords were ftrange great unweildy things, and they must be very ftrong men that used them; most of those men that were killed with them had their heads mashed to pieces, as we may fay, or as we call it in English, their brains knocked out, and feveral of their arms and legs broken; fo that it is evident they fight with inexpressible rage and fury. We found not one wounded man that was not ftone dead, for either they ftay by their enemy till they have quite killed him, or they carry all the wounded men that are not quite dead away with them.

THIS deliverance tamed our Englishmen for a great while; the fight had filled them with horror, and the confequences appeared terrible to the last degree, even to them, if ever they should fall into the hands of those creatures, who would not only kill them as enemies, but kill them for food, as we kill our cattle. And they professed to me, that the thoughts of being eaten up like beef or mutton, though it was supposed it was not to be till they were dead, had fomething in it fo horrible that it nausfeated their very stomachs, made them fick when they thought of it, and filled their minds with such unufual terror, that they were not themselves for some weeks after.

Ţніs,

THIS, as I faid, tamed even the three English brutes I have been speaking of, and for a great while after they were very tractable, and went about the common business of their whole society well enough, planted, fowed, reaped, and began to be all naturalized to the country. But some time after this, they all fell into such meafures which brought them into a great deal of trouble.

THEY had taken three prifoners, as I obferved. and thefe three being lufty flout young fellows, they made them fervants, and taught them to work for them, and as flaves they did well enough, but they did not take their measures with them as I did by my man Friday, viz. to begin with them upon the principle of having faved their lives, and then inftruct them in the rational principles of life, much lefs of religion, civilizing and reducing them by kind ulage and affectionate arguings; but as they gave them their food every day, fo they gave them their work too, and kept them fully employed in drudgery enough; but they failed in this, by it, that they never had them to affift them and fight for them as I had my man Friday, who was as true to me as the very flefh upon my hones.

But to come to the family part. Being all now good friends, for common danger, as I faid above, had effectually reconciled them, they began to confider their general circumftances, and the firft thing that came under their confideration was, whether feeing the favages particularly haunted that fide of the ifland, and that there were more remote and retired parts of it equally adapted to the way of living, and manifeftly to their advantage, they fhould not rather remove their habitation and plant in fome more proper place for their fecurity, and effecially for the fecurity of their cattle and corn ?

UPON this, after long debate, it was concluded, that they would not remove their habitation, because that some time or other, they thought, they might hear from their governor again, meaning me; and if I should send any one to seek them, I should be fure to direct them to that fide, where, if they should find the place demolisshed, they would conclude, the favages had killed us all, and we were gone, and so our supply would go too.

But as to their corn and cattle, they agreed to remove them into the valley where my cave was, where the land was as proper for both, and where indeed there was land enough; however, upon  $G_4$  fecond fecond thought, they altered one part of that refolution too, and refolved only to remove part of their cattle thither, and plant part of their corn there; and fo if one part was deftroyed, the other might be faved. And one part of prudence they ufed, which it was very well they did, viz. That they never trufted thofe three favages, which they had prifoners, with knowing any thing of the plantation they had made in that valley, or of any cattle they had there, much lefs of the cave there, which they kept, in cafe of neceffity, as a fafe retreat, and whither they carried alfo the two barrels of powder which I had fent them at my coming away.

Bur, however, they refolved not to change their habitation, yet they agreed, that as I had carefully covered it firft with a wall or fortification, and then with a grove of trees, fo feeing their fafety confifted entirely in their being concealed, of which they were now fully convinced, they fet to work to cover and conceal the place yet more effectually than before. To this purpofe, as I had planted trees, or rather thruft in flakes, which in time all grew up to be trees, for fome good diffance before the entrance into my apartment, they went on in the fame manner, and filled up the first of that whole fpace of ground, from the trees I had fet quite down to the the fide of the creek, where, as I faid, I landed my floats, and even into the very ouze where the tide flowed, not fo much as leaving any place to land, or any fign that there had been any landing thereabout; these stakes also being of a wood very forward to grow, as I have noted formerly, they took care to have them generally very much larger and taller than those which I had planted; and as they grew apace, fo they planted them fo very thick and clofe together, that when they had been three or four years grown, there was no piercing with the eye any confiderably way in the plantation. And as for that part which I had planted, the trees were grown as thick as a man's thigh, and among them they placed fo many other fhort ones, and fo thick, that, in a word, it ftood like a pallifado a quarter of a mile thick, and it was next to impoffible to penetrate it, but with a little army to cut it all down; for a little dog could hardly get between the trees, they ftood fo clofe.

But this was not all, for they did the fame by all the ground to the right hand and to the left, and round even to the top of the hill, leaving no way, not fo much as for themfelves to come out, but by the ladder placed up to the fide of the hill, and then lifted up and placed again from the first stage up to the top; which ladder, when it

THE ADVENTURES OF

90

it was taken down, nothing but what had wings or witchcraft to affift it, could come at them.

This was excellently well contrived, nor was it lefs than what they afterwards found occafion for, which ferved to convince me, that as human prudence has the authority of providence to juftify it, fo it has doubtlefs the direction of providence to fet it to work; and would we liften carefully to the voice of it, I am fully perfuaded we might prevent many of the difafters which our lives are now, by our own negligence, fubjected to; but this by the way.

I RETURN to the flory. They lived two years after this in perfect retirement, and had no more vifits from the favages. They had indeed an alarm given them one morning which put them into a great confternation, for fome of the Spaniards being out early one morning on the weft fide, or rather end of the ifland, which by the way, was that end where I never went, for fear of being difcovered, they were furprifed with feeing above twenty canoes of Indians juft coming on fhore.

THEY made the beft of their way home in hurry enough, and giving the alarm to their comrades, they kept close all that day and the next, going out out only at night to make obfervation; but they had the good luck to be miftaken, for wherever the favages went, they did not land that time on the ifland, but purfued fome other defign.

AND now they had another broil with the three Englishmen, one of which, a most turbulent fellow, being in a rage at one of the three flaves, which I mentioned they had taken, becaufe the fellow had not done fomething right which he bid him do, and seemed a little untractable in his fhewing him, drew a hatchet out of a frogbelt in which he wore it by his fide, and fell upon the poor favage, not to correct him but to kill him. One of the Spaniards, who was by, feeing him give the fellow a barbarous cut with the hatchet, which he aimed at his head, but ftruck into his fhoulder, fo that he thought he had cut the poor creature's arm off, ran to him, and intreating him not to murder the poor man. clapt in between him and the favage, to prevent the mischief,

THE fellow being enraged the more at this, ftruck at the Spaniard with his hatchet, and fwore he would ferve him as he intended to ferve the favage, which the Spaniard perceiving, avoided the blow, and with a fhovel which he had in his hand, for they were all working in the field about about their corn-land, knocked the brute down. Another of the Englishmen running at the fame time to help his comrade, knocked the Spaniard down; and then two Spaniards more came in to help their man, and a third Englishman fell in upon them. They had none of them any firearms, or any other weapons but hatchets and other tools, except this third Englishman, he had one of my old rufty cutlaffes, with which he made at the two laft Spaniards and wounded them both. This fray fet the whole family in an up. roar, and more help coming in they took the three Englishmen prisoners. The next question was, what fhould be done with them? They had been fo often mutinous, and were fo furious, fo defperate, and fo idle withal, that they knew not what course to take with them, for they were mischievous to the highest degree, and valued not what hurt they did to any man; fo that, in ffiort, it was not fafe to live with them.

THE Spaniard, who was governor, told them in fo many words, that if they had been of his own country, he would have hanged them; for all laws and all governors were to preferve fociety, and those who were dangerous to the fociety ought to be expelled out of it; but as they were Englishmen, and that it was to the generous kindnels of an Englishman that they all owed their prefervation fervation and deliverance, he would use them with all possible lenity, and would leave them to the judgment of the other two Englishmen, who were their countrymen.

ONE of the two honeft Englishmen stood up, and faid, they defired it might not be left to them; for, fays he, I am fure we ought to fentence them to the gallows; and with that he gives an account how Will. Atkins, one of the three, had proposed to have all the five Englishmen join together, and murder all the Spaniards when they were in their sleep.

WHEN the Spanish governor heard this he called to William Atkins, how Seignior Atkins, fays he, would you murder us all? What have you to fay to that? The hardened villain was fo far from denying it, that he faid it was true, and G—d d—n him, they would do it ftill before they had done with them. Well, but Seignior Atkins, fays the Spaniard, what have we done to you, that you will kill us; and what would you get by killing us; and what must we do to prevent you killing us? Must we kill you, or you will kill us? Why will you put us to the neceffity of this, Seignior Atkins, fays the Spaniard, very calmly and fmiling. SEIGNIOR ATKINS was in fuch a rage at the Spaniard's making a jeft of it, that had he not been held by three men, and withal had no weapons near him, it was thought he would have attempted to have killed the Spaniard in the middle of all the company.

THIS hair-brained carriage obliged them to confider ferioufly what was to be done; the two Englishmen and the Spaniard who faved the poor favage were of the opinion, they should hang one of the three for an example for the rest, and that particularly it should be he that had twice attempted to commit murder with his hatchet; and indeed there was some reason to believe he had done it, for the poor favage was in such a miserable condition with the wound he had received, that it was thought he could not live.

But the governor Spaniard ftill faid, no, it was an Englishman that had faved all their lives, and he would never confent to put an Englishman to death, though he had murdered half of them; nay, he faid, if he had been killed himfelf by an Englishman, and had time left to speak, it should be that they should pardon him.

THIS was fo pofitively infifted on by the governor Spaniard, that there was no gainfaying it; and and as merciful councils are most apt to prevail, where they are fo earneftly preffed, fo they all came into it: but then it was to be confidered. what fhould be done to keep them from doing the mifchief they defigned, for all agreed, governor and all, that means were to be used for preferving the fociety from danger. After a long debate it was agreed, first, that they should be difarmed, and not permitted to have either gun. powder, fhot, fword, or any weapon, and fhould be turned out of the fociety, and left to live where they would, and how they would, by themfelves, but that none of the reft, either Spaniards or English should converse with them, fpeak with them, or have any thing to do with them; that they fhould be forbid to come within a certain diftance of the place where the reft dwelt; and if they offered to commit any diforder, fo as to fpoil, burn, kill, or deftroy any of the corn, plantings, building, fences, or cattle belonging to the fociety, they fhould die without mercy, and they would fhoot them wherever they could find them.

THE governor, a man of great humanity, mufing upon the fentence, confidered a little upon it, and turning to the two honeft Englishmen faid, hold, you muft reflect that it will be long e'er they can raife corn and cattle of their own, 2 and and they muft not ftarve; we muft therefore allow them provifions; fo he caufed to be added, that they fhould have a proportion of corn given them to laft them eight months, and for feed to fow, by which time they might be fuppofed to raife fome of their own; that they fhould have fix milch goats, four he goats, and fix kids given them, as well for prefent fubfiftence as for a ftore; and that they fhould have tools given them for their work in the fields, fuch as fix hatchets, an axe, a faw, and the like; but they fhould have none of thefe tools or provifions, unlefs they would fwear folemnly, that they would not hurt or injure any of the Spaniards with them, or of their fellow Englifhmen.

THUS they difmiffed them the fociety, and turned them out to fhift for themfelves. They went away fullen and refractory, as neither contented to go away or to flay; but, as there was no remedy they went, pretending to go and chufe a place where they would fettle themfelves, to plant and live by themfelves, and fome provisions were given them, but no weapons.

About four or five days after they came again for fome victuals, and gave the governor an account where they had pitched their tents, and marked themfelves out a habitation and plantation;

tion; and it was a very convenient place indeed, on the remoteft part of the ifland, N. E. much about the place where I landed in my first voyage, when I was driven out to fea the Lord knows whither, in my attempt to furround the island.

HERE they built themfelves two handfome huts, and contrived them, in a manner, like my first habitation, being close under the fide of a hill, having fome trees growing already on three fides of it, fo that by planting others it would be very eafily covered from the fight, unless narrowly fearched for. They defired fome dried goat's skins, for beds and covering, which were given them, and upon giving their words that they would not disturb the rest, or injure any of their plantations, they gave them hatchets, and what other tools they could spare; fome peas, barley and rice, for fowing; and, in a word, any thing they wanted, but arms and ammunition.

THEY lived in this feparate condition about fix months, and had gotten in their first harvest, though the quantity was but small, the quantity of land they had planted being but little; for indeed, having all their plantation to form, they had a great deal of work upon their hands, and when they came to make boards and pots, and fuch things, they were quite out of their element, Vol. II. H and could make nothing of it; and when the rainy feafon came on, for want of a cave in the earth, they could not keep their grain dry, and it was in great danger of fpoiling; and this humbled them much; fo they came and begged the Spaniards to help them, which they very readily did, and in four days worked a great hole in the fide of the hill for them, big enough to fecure their corn and other things from the rain; but it was but a poor place at beft compared to mine, and efpecially as mine was then, for the Spaniards had greatly enlarged it, and made feveral new apartments in it.

ABOUT three quarters of a year after this feparation, a new frolick took thefe rogues, which, together with the former villainy they had committed, brought mifchief enough upon them, and had very near been the ruin of the whole colony. The three new affociates began, it feems, to be weary of the laborious life they led, and that without hope of bettering their circumftances; and a whim took them, that they would make a voyage to the continent from whence the favages came, and would try if they could not feize upon fome prifoners among the natives there, and bring them home, fo to make them do the laborious part of their work for them.

ġ8

THE project was not fo preposterous, if they had gone no farther, but they did nothing, and proposed nothing, but had either mischief in the defign or mischief in the event: And if I may give my opinion, they feemed to be under a blaft from heaven; for if we will not allow a visible curfe to pursue visible crimes, how shall we reconcile the events of things with the divine juffice ? It was certainly an apparent vengeance on their crime of mutiny and piracy that brought them to the flate they were in; and as they fhewed not the least remorfe for the crime, but added new villainies to it, fuch as particularly, the piece of monstrous cruelty of wounding a poor flave, becaufe he did not, or perhaps could not, understand what he was directed, and to wound him in fuch a manner, as no queftion, made him a cripple all his life, and in a place where no furgeon or medicine could be had for his cure; and what was still worfe, the murderous intent, or, to do justice to the crime, the intentional murder, for fuch to be fure it was, as was afterwards the formed defign they all laid, to murder the Spaniards in cold blood, and in their fleep.

BUT I leave obferving, and return to the ftory: The three fellows came down to the Spaniards one morning, and in very humble terms H 2 defired defired to be admitted to fpeak with them: The Spaniards very readily heard what they had to fay, which was this: That they were tired of living in the manner they did; and that they were not handy enough to make the neceffaries they wanted, and that having no help, they found they fhould be ftarved; but if the Spaniards would give them leave to take one of the canoes which they came over in, and give them arms and ammunition proportioned to their defence, they would go over to the main and feek their fortunes, and fo deliver them from the trouble of fupplying them with any other provisions.

THE Spaniards were glad enough to be rid of them, but very honeftly reprefented to them, the certain deftruction they were running into; told them they had fuffered fuch hardfhips upon that very fpot, that they could, without any fpirit of prophecy, tell them that they would be flarwed, or murdered, and bad them confider of it.

THE men replied audacioufly, they fhould be ftarved if they ftayed here, for they could not work, and would not work, and they could but be ftarved abroad; and if they were murdered, there was an end of them; they had no wives or children to cry after them; and in fhort infifted importunately upon their demand, declaring that that they would go whether they would give them any arms or no.

THE Spaniards told them, with great kindnefs, that if they were refolved to go they fhould not go like naked men, and be in no condition to defend themfelves; and that though they could ill fpare their fire arms, having not enough for themfelves, yet they would let them have two muskets, a piftol and cutlafs, and each man a hatchet, which they thought was fufficient for them.

IN a word, they accepted the offer, and having baked them bread enough to ferve them a month, and given them as much goat's flefh as they could eat while it was fweet, and a great bafket full of dried grapes, a pot full of frefh water, and a young kid alive to kill, they boldly fet out in the canoe for a voyage over the fea, where it was at leaft forty miles broad.

THE boat inded was a large one, and would have very wellhave carried fifteen or twenty men, and therefore was rather too big for them to manage; but as they had a fair breeze, and flood tide with them, they did well enough. They had made a maft of a long pole, and a fail of four large goat fkins dried, which they had fowed or laced together, and away they went merrily enough; the Spaniards called after them, bon veyajo, and no man ever thought of feeing them any more.

OT

THE Spaniards were often faying to one another, and to the two honeft Englishmen who remained behind, how quietly and comfortably they lived, now these three turbulent fellows were gone; as for their ever coming again, that was the remotest thing from their thoughts that could be imagined; when behold, after two and twenty days absence, one of the Englishmen being abroad upon his planting work, sees three strange men coming towards him at a distance, with guns upon their shoulders.

Away ran the Englishman, as if he was bewitched, comes frighted and amazed to the governor Spaniard, and tells them they were all undone, for there were flrangers landed upon the island, he could not tell who: The Spaniard, pausing a while, fays to him, How do you mean you cannot tell who? They are the favages to be fure. No, no, fays the Englishman. they are men in clothes, with arms, Nay then, fays the Spaniard why are you concerned? If they are not favages they must be friends; for there is no christian nation upon earth but will do us good rather than harm. WHILE

WHILE they were debating thus, came the three Englishmen, and standing without the wood, which was new planted, holoed to them; they prefently knew their voices, and fo all the wonder of that kind ceafed : But now the admiration was turned upon another queftion, viz. What could be the matter, and what made them come back again?

It was not long before they brought the men in, and inquiring where they had been, and what they had been doing, they gave them a full account of their voyage in a few words, viz. That they reached the land in two days, or fomething lefs, but finding the people alarmed at their coming, and preparing with bows and arrows to fight them, they durft not go on fhore, but failed on to the northward fix or feven hours, till they came to a great opening, by which they perceived that the land they faw from our ifland was not the main, but an ifland; that entering that opening of the fea, they faw another ifland on the right hand north, and feveral more weat; and being refolved to land fomewhere, they put over to one of the iflands which lay weft, and went boldly on fhore; that they found the people very courteous and friendly to them, and that they gave them feveral roots and fome dried fifh, and appeared very fociable; and the women, as
104 THE ADVENTURES OF

as well as the men, were very forward to fupply them with any thing they could get for them to eat, and brought it to them a great way upon their heads.

THEY continued here four days, and inquired as well as they could of them by figns, what nations were this way and that way, and were told of feveral fierce and terrible people that lived almost every way, who, as they made figns to them, used to eat men; but as for themfelves, they faid, that they never eat men or women, except only fuch as they took in the wars, and then, they owned, that they made a great feast, and eat their prifoners.

THE Englishmen inquired when they had a feaft of that kind, and they told them about two moons ago, pointing to the moon and then to two fingers, and that their great king had two hundred prisoners now, which he had taken in his war, and they were feeding them to make them fat for the next feast. The Englishmen feemed mighty defirous to fee those prisoners, but the others mistaking them, thought they were defirous to have fome of them to carry away for their own eating; fo they beckoned to them, pointing to the fetting of the fun, and then to the rifing, which was to fignify, that the next morning morning at fun rifing they would bring fome for them; and accordingly the next morning they brought down five women and eleven men, and gave them to the Englishmen to carry with them on their voyage, just as we would bring fo many cows and oxen down to a fea-port town to victual a ship.

As brutish and barbarous as these fellows were at home, their stomachs turned at this sight, and they did not know what to do; to refuse the prifoners, would have been the highest affront to the favage gentry that could be offered them, and what to do with them they knew not; however, upon some debates they resolved to accept of them, and in return they gave the favages that brought them one of their hatchets, an old key, a knife, and fix or seven of their bullets, which though they did not understand, they seemed extremely pleased with; and then tying the poor creatures hands behind them, they (the people) dragged the poor prisoners into the boat for our men.

THE Englishmen were obliged to come away or elfe they that gave them this noble prefent would certainly have expected that they should have gone to work with them, have killed two or three of them the next morning, and perhaps have have invited the donors to dinner: But having taken their leave with all the refpects and thanks that could well pass between people, where on either fide they understood not one word they could fay, they put off with their boat and came back towards the first island, where, when they arrived, they fet eight of their prisoners at liberty, there being too many of them for their occasion.

In their voyage they endeavoured to have fome communication with their prifoners, but it was impoffible to make them understand any thing; nothing they could fay to them, or give them, or do for them, but was looked upon as going about to murder them: They first of all unbound them, but the poor creatures fcreamed at that, especially the women, as if they had just. felt the knife at their throats; for they immediately concluded they were unbound on purpose to be killed; if they gave them any thing to eat it was the fame thing, they then concluded it was for fear they fhould fink in flefh, and fo not be fat enough to kill; if they looked at one of them more particularly, the party prefently concluded it was to fee whether he or fhe was fatteft and fitteft to kill; nay after they had brought them quite over, and began to use them kindly and treat treat them well, still they expected every day to make a dinner or fupper for their new masters.

WHEN the three wanderers had given this unaccountable hiftory or journal of their voyage, the Spaniards afked them where their new family was, and being told that they had brought them on fhore, and put them into one of their huts, and were come up to beg fome victuals for them; they (the Spaniards) and the other two Englifhmen, that is to fay, the whole colony, refolved to go all down to the place and fee them, and did fo, and Friday's father with them.

WHEN they came into the hut, there they fat all bound, for when they had brought them on fhore, they bound their hands, that they might not take the boat and make their efcape; there, I fay, they fat, all of them flark naked: Firft, there were three men, lufty comely fellows, well fhaped, ftrait and fair limbs, about thirty to thirty-five years of age, and five women, whereof two might be from thirty to forty, two more not above four or five and twenty, and the fifth, a tall comely maiden, about fixteen or feventeen. The women were well favoured, agreeable perfons both in fhape and features, only tawney, and two of them, had they been been perfect white, would have paffed for very handfome women, even in London itfelf, having pleafant agreeable countenances, and of a very modeft behaviour, efpecially when they came afterwards to he cloathed and dreffed, as they called it, though the drefs was very indifferent, it muft be confeffed; of which hereafter.

The fight you may be fure was fomething uncouth to our Spaniards, who were (to give them a juft character) men of the beft behaviour, of the moft calm and fedate tempers, and perfect good humour, that ever I met with, and in particular, of the moft modeft, as will prefently appear: I fay, the fight was very uncouth to fee three naked men and five naked women, all together bound, and in the moft miferable circumftances that human nature could be fuppofed to be, viz. to be expecting every moment to be dragged out, and have their brains knocked out, and then to be eaten up like a calf that is killed for a dainty.

THE first thing they did was to cause the old Indian, Friday's father, to go in and see first if he knew any of them, and then if he understood any of their speech; as soon as the old man came in he looked seriously at them, but knew none of them, neither could any of them understand ftand a word he faid, or fign he could make, except one of the women. However this was enough to anfwer the end, which was to fatisfy them that the men into whofe hands they were fallen, were chriftians, and they abhorred eating men or women, and that they might be fure they would not be killed. As foon as they were affured of this, they difcovered fuch a joy, and by fuch aukward geftures, feveral ways, as is hard to defcribe, for it feems they were of feveral nations.

The woman, who was their interpreter, was bid in the next place to afk them if they were willing to be fervants, and to work for the men who had brought them away, to fave their lives, at which they all fell a dancing, and prefently one fell to taking up this, and another that, any thing that lay next, to carry on their fhoulders, to imitate that they were willing to work.

The governor, who found that having womenamong them, would prefently be attended with fome inconvenience, and might occafion fome ftrife, and perhaps blood, afked the three men what they intended to do with thefe women, and how they intended to use them, whether as fervants or as women? One of the Englishmen anfwered very boldly and readily, that they would would use them as both; to which the governor faid, I am not going to reftrain you from it, you are your own masters as to that; but this I think is but just, for avoiding diforders and quarrels among you, and I defire it of you, for that reason only, viz. That you will all engage, that if any of you take any of these women, as a woman, or wife, that he shall take but one; and that having taken one, none elfe shall touch her; for though we cannot marry any of you, yet it is but reasonable, that while you stay here, the woman any of you take, should be maintained by the man that takes her, and fhould be his wife, I mean, fays he. while he continues here, and that none elfe shall have any thing to do with her; all this appeared fo juft, that every one agreed to it without any difficulty.

THEN the Englishmen asked the Spaniards; if they defigned to take any of them ? But every one answered, No: Some of them faid, they had wives in Spain, and the others did not like women that were not christians; and all together declared, that they would not touch one of them, which was an inflance of fuch virtue, as I have not met with in all my travels. On the other hand, to be short, the five Englishmen took them every one a wife, that is to fay, a temporary wife; and so they set up a new form of living; for for the Spaniards and Friday's father lived in my old habitation, which they had enlarged exceedingly within. The three fervants which were taken in the late battle of the favages, lived with them; and these carried on the main part of the colony, fupplying all the reft with food, and affifting them in any thing they could, or as they found necessity required. But the wonder of this ftory was, how five fuch refractory, ill matched fellows should agree about these women, and that two of them fhould not pitch upon the fame woman," especially seeing two or three of them were without comparison, more agreeable than the others : But they took a good way enough to prevent quarrelling among themfelves, for they fet the five women by themfelves in one of their huts, and they went all into the other hut, and drew lots among them who fhould chufe firft.

He that drew to chufe first, went away by himfelf to the hut where the poor naked. creatures were, and fetched out her he chose; and it was worth observing, that he that chose first took her that was reckoned the homeliest and the oldest of the five, which made mirth enough among the rest; and even the Spaniards laughed at it; but the fellow confidered better than any of them, that it was application to business they were to expect expect affiftance in, as much as any thing elfe, and fhe proved the beft wife of all the parcel.

WHEN the poor women faw themfelves fet in a row thus, and fetched out one by one, the terrors of their condition returned upon them again, and they firmly believed they were now going to be devoured; accordingly when the English failor came in and fetched out one of them, the reft fet up a most lamentable cry, and hung about her. and took their leave of her with fuch agonies and fuch affection as would have, grieved the hardest heart in the world; nor was it possible for the Englishmen to fatisfy them, that they were not to be immediately murdered, till they fetched the old man, Friday's father, who immediately let them know that the five men, who had fetched them out one by one, had chosen them for their wives.

WHHN they had done, and the fright the women were in was a little over, the men went to work, and the Spaniards came and helped them: and in a few hours they had built them every one a new hut or tent for their lodging apart: for those they had already were crowded with their tools houshold ftuff and provision. The three wicked ones had pitched farthest off, and the two honest ones ones nearer, but both on the north fhore of the island, fo that they continued feparated as before: and thus my island was peopled in three places; and as I might fay; three towns were begun to be planted.

AND here 'tis very well worth obferving, that as it often happens in the world, (what the wife ends of God's providence are in fuch a difpolition of things, I cannot fay) the two honeft fellows had the two worft wives, and the three reprobates, that were fearce worth hanging, that were fit for hothing, and neither feemed born to do themfelves good, or any one elfe, had three clever, diligent, careful and ingenious wives; not that the two firft were ill wives, as to their temper or humour: for all the five were most willing, quiet, paffive and fubjected creatures, rather like flaves than wives. But my meaning is, they were not alike capable, ingenious, or industrious, or alike cleanly and neat.

Another observation I must make, to the honour of a diligent application on one hand, and to the difgrace of a flothful, negligent, idle temper on the other, that when I came to the place and viewed the several improvements, plantings, and management of the several little Vol. II. I colonies; colonies; the two men had fo far out-gone the three, that there was no comparison. They had indeed both of them as much ground laid out for corn, as they wanted, and the reason was, because according to my rule, nature dictated, that it was to no purpose to so more corn than they wanted, but the difference of the cultivation, of the planting, of the fences, and indeed of every thing else, was easy to be seen at first view.

The two men had innumerable young trees planted about their huts, that when you came to the place, nothing was to be feen but a wood, and though they had twice had their plantation demolifhed, once by their own countrymen, and once by the enemy, as shall be shewn in its place; yet they had reftored all again, and every thing was thriving and flourishing about them; they had grapes planted in order, and managed like a vineyard, though they had themfelves never feen any thing of that kind, and by their good ordering their vines, their grapes were as good again, as any of the others. They had alfo found themfelves out a retreat in the thickeft part of the woods, where, though there was not a natural cave, as I had found, yet they made one with inceffant labour of their hands, and where when the mifchief which followed happened, pened, they fecured their wives and children, fo as they could never be found; they having by flicking innumerable flakes and poles of the wood, which, as I faid, grew fo eafily, made the wood unpaffable, except in fome places where they climbed up to get over the out-fide part, and then went on by ways of their own leaving.

As to the three reprobates, as I justly call them, though they were much civilized by their new fettlement, compared to what they were before, and were not fo quarrelfome, having not the fame opportunity; yet one of the certain companions of a profligate mind never left them, and that was their idlenefs : 'tis true, they planted corn, and made fences; but Solomon's words were never better verified than in them, "I went " by the vineyard of the flothful, and it was all " over-grown with thorns;" for when the Spaniards came to view their crop, they could not fee it in fome places for weeds ; the hedge had feveral gaps in it, where the wild goats had got in and eaten up the corn; perhaps here and there a dead bufh was crammed in, to ftop them out for the prefent, but it was only flutting the flabledoor after the fteed was ftolen; whereas, when they looked on the colony of the other two, there was the very face of industry and fuccefs upon all they did; there was not a weed to be feen in 1 2 a11 all their corn, or a gap in any of their hedges; and they on the other hand verified Solomon's words in another place: that the diligent hand maketh rich, for every thing grew and thrived, and they had plenty within and without; they had more tame cattle than the other, more utenfils and neceffaries within doors, and yet more pleafure and diversion too.

It is true, the wives of the three were handy and cleanly within doors, and having learned the English ways of dreffing and cooking from one of the other Englishmen, who, as I faid, was a cook's-mate on board the fhip; they dreffed their hufbands victuals very nicely and well; whereas the other could not be brought to understand it. but then the hufband, who as I fay, had been cook's-mate, did it himfelf; but as for the hufbands of the three wives, they loitered about, fetched turtles eggs, and caught fish and birds, in a word, any thing but labour, and they fared accordingly. The diligent lived well and comfortably, and the flothful lived hard and beggarly; and fo I believe, generally fpeaking, it is all over the world.

BUT I now come to a scene, different from all that had happened before, either to them or to me; and the original of the flory was this.

ÉARLY

EARLY one morning there came on shore five or fix canoes of Indians or favages, call them which you pleafe; and there is no room to doubt they came upon the old errand of feeding upon their flaves; but that part was now fo familiar to the Spaniards, and to our men too, that they did not concern themselves about it. as I did: but having been made fenfible, by their experience, that their only bufinefs was to lie concealed, and that if they were not feen by any of the favages, they would go off again quietly when their bufiness was done, having as yet not the least notion of there being any inhabitants in the island; I fay, having been made fensible of this, they had nothing to do but give notice to all the three plantations to keep within doors, and not fhew themfelves, only placing a fcout in a proper place, to give notice when the boats went to fea again.

This was, without doubt very right, but a difafter fpoiled all thefe measures, and made it known among the favages that there were inhabitants there, which was in the end the defolation of almost the whole colony; after the canoes with the favages were gone off, the Spaniards peeped abroad again, and fome of them had the curiofity to go to the place where they had been, to fee what they had been doing : here, to their great fur-I 3 prize, prize, they found three favages left behind, and lying faft afleep upon the ground; it was fuppofed they had either been fo gorged with their inhuman feaft, that like beafts they were fallen afleep, and would not ftir when the others went, or they had wandered into the woods, and did not come back in time to be taken in.

The Spaniards were greatly furprized at this fight, and perfectly at a lofs what to do; the Spanish governor, as it happened, was with them, and his advice was asked, but he professed he knew not what to do; as for flaves they had enough already, and as to killing them, they were none, of them inclined to that; the Spaniard governor told me, they could not think of shedding innocent blood, for as to them, the poor creatures had done them no wrong, invaded none of their property, and they thought they had no just quarrel against them, to take away their lives.

And here I must, in justice to these Spaniards, observe, that let the accounts of Spanish cruelty, in Mexico and Peru, be what they will, I never met with seventeen men of any nation whatsoever, in any foreign country, who were so universally model, temperate, virtuous, so very good humoured, and so courteous, as these Spaniards; and as to crueity, they had nothing of it in their very nature, nature, no inhumanity, no barbarity, no outrageous paffions, and yet all of them men of great courage and fpirit.

THEIR temper and calmnefs had appeared in their bearing the infufferable ufage of the three Englifhmen; and their juffice and humanity appeared now in the cafe of the favages, as above; after fome confultation, they refolved upon this, That they would lie ftill a while longer, 'till if poffible thefe three men might be gone; but then the governor Spaniard recollected, that the favages had no boat, and that if they were left to rove about the ifland, they would certainly difcover that there were inhabitants in it, and fo they fhould be undone that way.

UPON this they went back again, and there lay the fellows fast asleep still, and fo they refolved to waken them, and take them prifoners, and they did fo: the poor fellows were strangely frighted when they were feized upon and bound, and astraid, like the women, that they should he murdered and eaten; for, it seems, those people think all the world does as they do, eating men's fless; but they were soon made easy as to that, and away they carried them.

I4

It was very happy for them that they did not carry them home to their caftle, I mean to my palace under the hill; but they carried them firft to the bower, where was the chief of their country work, fuch as the keeping the goats, the planting the corn, &c. and afterwards they carried them to the habitation of the two English, men.

HERE they were fet to work, though it was not much they had for them to do; and whether it was by negligence in guarding them, or that they thought the fellows could not mend themfelves, I know not, but one of them ran away, and taking to the woods, they could never hear of him more.

THEY had good reafon to believe he got home again foon after, in fome other boats or canoes of favages who came on fhore three or four weeks afterwards, and who, carrying on their revels as ufual, went off in two days time: this thought terrified them exceedingly, for they concluded, and that not without good caufe indeed, that if this fellow came home fafe among his comrades, he would certainly give them an account that there were people in the ifland, and alfo how few and weakly they were; for this favage, as I obferved before, had never been told, and and it was very happy he had not, how many there were, or where they lived; nor had he ever feen or heard the fire of any of their guns, much lefs had they fhewn him any of their other retired places, fuch as the cave in the valley, or the new retreat which the two Englishmen had made and the like.

The first testimony they had that this fellow had given intelligence of them, was, that above two months after this, fix canoes of favages, with about feven, or eight, or ten men in a canoe, came rowing along the north fide of the island, where they never used to come before, and landed about an hour after fun rife at a convenient place, about a mile from the habitation of the two Englishmen, where this escaped man had been kept : as the Spaniard governor faid, had they been all there, the damage would not have been fo much, for not a man of them would have escaped; but the case differed now very much, for two men to fifty was too much odds: the two men had the happiness to discover them about a league off, fo that it was above an hour before they landed; and as they landed a mile from their huts, it was fome time before they could come at them : now, having great reafon to believe that they were betrayed, the first thing they did, was to bind the two flaves which were left, and 4 and caufe two of the three men whom they brought with the women, who, it feems, proved very faithful to them, to lead them with their two wives, and whatever they could carry away with them, to their retired place in the woods, which I have fpoken of above, and there to bind the two fellows hand and foot, till they heard farther.

In the next place, feeing the favages were all come on fhore, and that they had bent their courfe directly that way, they opened the fences where the milch goats where kept, and drove them all out, leaving their goats to ftraggle in the woods, whither they pleafed, that the favages might think they were all bred wild; but the rogue who came with them was too cunning for that, and gave them an account of it all, for they went directly to the place.

WHEN the two poor frighted men had fecured their wives and goods they fent the other flave they had of the three, who came with the women, and who was at their place by accident, away to the Spaniards with all fpeed, to give them the alarm and defire fpeedy help, and in the mean time they took their arms and what ammunition they had, and retreated towards the place in the wood where their wives were fent, keeping keeping at a diftance, yet fo that they might fee, if poffible, which way the favages took.

THEY had not gone far, but that from a rifing ground they could fee the little army of their enemies come on directly to their habitation, and in a moment more could fee all their huts and houfhold ftuff flaming up together, to their great grief and mortification, for they had a very great lofs, to them irretrievable, at leaft for fome time. They kept their flation for a while, till they found the favages, like wild beafts, fpread themfelves all over the place, rumaging every way, and every place they could think of, in fearch for prey, and in particular for the people, of whom now it plainly appeared they had had intelligence.

THE two Englishmen seeing this, thinking themselves not secure where they stood, because it was likely some of the wild people might come that way, so they might come too many together, thought its proper to make a retreat about half a mile farther, believing as it afterwards happened, that the farther they strolled the fewer would be together.

Their next halt was at the entrance into a very thick grove part of the woods, and where an old trunk trunk of a tree flood, which was hollow and vafily large, and in this tree they both took their flanding, refolving to fee there what might offer.

THEY had not flood there long but two of the favages appeared running directly that way, as if they had already had notice where they flood, and were coming up to attack them; and a little way farther they efpied three more coming after them, and five more beyond them, all coming the fame way; befides which they faw feven or eight more at a diffance, running another way, for in a word they ran every way, like fportfmen beating for their game.

The poor men were now in great perplexity, whether they fhould ftand and keep their pofture, or fly; but, after a very fhort debate with themfelves, they confidered, that if the favages ranged the country thus, before help came, they might perhaps find out their retreat in the woods, then all would be loft; fo they refolved to ftand them there, and if they were too many to deal with, then they would get up to the top of the tree, from whence they doubted not to defend themfelves, fire excepted, as long as their ammunition lafted, though all the favages that were then landed, which was near fifty, were to attack them.

HAVING

HAVING refolved upon this, they next confidered whether they fhould fire at the next two, or wait for the three, and fo take the middle party, by which the two and the five that followed would be feparated; and they refolved to let the two first pass by, unless they should spy them in the tree, and come to attack them: The two first favages confirmed them also in this regulation, by turning a little from them towards another part of the wood, but the three and the five after them came forwards directly to the tree, as if they had known the Englishmen were there.

SEEING them come fo firait towards them, they refolved to take them in a line as they came; and as they refolved to fire but one at a time, perhaps the first shot might hit them all three; to which purpose the man who was to fire put three or four small bullets into his piece, and having a fair loop-hole, as it were, from a broken hole in the tree, he took a fure aim without being seen, waiting till they were within about thirty yards of the tree, fo that he could not miss.

WHILE they were thus waiting, and the favages came on, they plainly faw that one of the three was the run-away favage that had efcaped from them, and they both knew him diffinctly, and and refolved, that, if possible, he should not escape, though they should both fire, so the other should ready with his piece, that if he did not drop at the first shot, he should be fure to have a fecond.

But the first was too good a markiman to miss his aim, for as the favages kept near one another, a little behind in a line, in a word, he fired and hit two of them directly: the foremost was killed outright, being shot in the head: The fecond, which was the runaway Indian, was shot through the body, and fell, but was not quite dead; and the third had a little scratch in the shoulder, perhaps by the fame ball that went through the body of the scond; and being dreadfully frighted, though not much hurt, fat down upon the ground, skreaming and yelling in a hideous manner.

THE five that were behind, more frighted with the noife than fenfible of the danger, flood ftill at first; for the wood made the found a thousand times bigger than it really was, the echo rattling from one fide to another, and the fowls rifing from all parts, skreaming and making, every fort, a several kind of noife, according to their kind; just as it was when I fired the first gun that perhaps haps was ever fhot off in that place, fince it was an ifland.

However, all being filent again, and they not knowing what the matter was, came on unconcerned, till they came to the place where their companions lay, in a condition miferable enough; and here the poor ignorant creatures, not fenfible that they were within reach of the fame mischief, stood all of a huddle over the wounded man talking, and, as may be fuppofed, inquiring of him how he came to be hurt; and who, it is very rational to believe, told them, that a flafh of fire first, and immediately after that, thunder from their gods, had killed those two and wounded him : This, I fay, is rational : for nothing is more certain than that, as they faw no man near them, fo they had never heard a gun in all their lives, nor fo much as heard of a gun; neither knew they any thing of killing and wounding at a diftance with fire and bullets; if they had, one might reafonably believe they would not have flood fo unconcerned in viewing the fate of their fellows, without fome apprehenfion of their own.

Our two men, though, as they confessed to me, it grieved them to be obliged to kill fo many poor creatures, who, at the fame time, had no no notion of their danger; yet, having them all thus in their power, and the firft having loaded his piece again; refolved to let fly both together among them; and fingling out by agreement which to aim at, they flot together, and killed or very much wounded four of them; the fifth frighted even to death, though not hurt, fell with the reft; fo that our men feeing them all fall together, thought they had killed them all.

THE belief that the favages were all killed. made our two men come boldly out from the tree before they had charged their guns again, which was a wrong ftep, and they were under fome furprize when they came to the place and found no lefs than four of them alive, and of them two very little hurt, and one not at all : this obliged them to fall upon them with the flock of their mufkets: and first they made fure of the runaway favage; that had been the caufe of all the mifchief; and of another that was hurt in his knee, and put them out of their pain; then the man that was not hurt at all came and kneeled down to them, with his two hands held up, and made piteous moans to them by gestures and figns, for his life, but could not fay one word to them that they could underftand.

However they figned to him to fit down at the foot of a tree hard by; and one of the Englishmen, with a piece of rope twine, which he had by great chance in his pocket, tied his two feet fast together, and his two hands behind him, and there they left him, and with what fpeed they could made after the other two, which were gone before, fearing they, or any more of them, fhould find the way to their covered place in the woods, where their wives and the few goods they had left, lay. They came once in fight of the two men, but it was at a great diftance ; however, they had the fatisfaction to fee them crofs over a valley towards the fea, the quite contrary way from that which led to their retreat, which they were afraid of; and being fatisfied with that, they went back to the tree, where they left their prifoner, who, as they fuppofed, was delivered by his comrades, for he was gone, and the two pieces of rope-yarn, with which they had bound him, lay just at the foot of the tree.

THEY were now in as great concern as before, not knowing what course to take, or how near the enemy might be, or in what numbers; fo they resolved to go away to the place where their wives were, to see if all was well there, and to make them easy, who were in fright enough to be fure; for though the favages were their own Vol. II. K country country folk, yet they were most terribly afraid of them, and perhaps the more for the knowledge they had of them.

WHEN they came there they found the favages had been in the wood, and very near that place, but had not found it for it was indeed inacceffible by the trees flanding fo thick, as before, had not the perfons feeking it been directed by those that knew it, which these did not; they found therefore every thing very fafe, only the women in a terrible fright. While they were here, they had the comfort to have feven of the Spaniards come to their affiftance, the other ten. with their fervants, and old Friday, I mean Friday's father, were gone in a body to defend their bower, and the corn and cattle that was kept there, in cafe the favages fhould have roved over to that fide of the country; but they did not foread fo far. With the feven Spaniards, came one of the three favages, who, as I faid, were their prifoners formerly; and with them also came the favage whom the Englishmen had left bound hand and foot at the tree; for, it feems they came that way faw the flaughter of the feven men, and unbound the eighth and brought him along with them, where, however, they were obliged to bind him again, as they had the two others who were left when the third ran away.

THE prifoners began now to be a burthen to them; and they were fo afraid of their efcaping, that they were once refolving to kill them all, believing they were under an abfolute neceffity to do fo, for their own prefervation: However, the Spaniard governor would not confent to it, but ordered, for the prefent, that they fhould be fent out of the way to my old cave in the valley, and be kept there with two Spaniards to guard them; and give them food for their fubfiftence, which was done; and they were bound there hand and foot for one night.

WHEN the Spaniards came, the two Englishmen were fo encouraged, that they could not fatisfy themfelves to flay any longer there : but taking five of the Spaniards and themselves, with four muskets and a pistol among them, and two ftout quarter ftaves, away they went in quest of the favages. And first they came to the tree where the men lay that had been killed; but it was eafy to fee that fome more of the favages had been there, for they had attempted to carry their dead men away, and had dragged two of them a good way, but had given it over. From thence they advanced to the first rising ground, where they flood and faw their camp deftroyed, and where they had the mortification still to fee fome of the fmoak; but neither could they here fee any of the favages. Then they refolved, though with all poffible caution, to go forward towards their ruined plantation; but a little before they came thither, coming in fight of the fea fhore, they faw plainly the favages all embarked again in their canoes, in order to be gone.

THEY feemed forry at first, and there was no way to come at them to give them a parting blow; but upon the whole they were very well fatisfied to be rid of them.

THE poor Englishmen being now twice ruined, and all their improvements deftroyed, the reft all agreed to come and help them to rebuild, and to affift them with needful supplies. Their three countrymen, who were not yet noted for having the least inclination to do any good, yet as foon as they heard of it (for they living remote eastward, knew nothing of the matter till all was over) came and offered their help and affistance, and did very friendly work for feveral days, to reftore their habitation and make neceffaries for them : And thus in a little time they were set upon their legs again.

About two days after this they had the farther fatisfaction of feeing three of the favages cances come driving on fhore, and at fome diffance from them, them, two drowned men; by which they had reafon to believe that they had met with a florm at fea, and had overfet fome of them; for it had blown very hard the night after they went off,

HOWEVER, as fome might mifcarry, fo, on the other hand, enough of them efcaped to inform the reft, as well of what they had done, as of what at happened to them, and to whet them on to another enterprize of the fame nature, which they, it feems refolved to attempt, with fufficient force to carry all before them; for except what the firft man had told them of inhabitants, they could fay little of it of their own knowledge; for they never faw one man; and the fellow being killed that had affirmed it, they had no other witnefs to confirm it to them.

It was five or fix months after this before they heard any more of the favages, in which time our men were in hopes, they had either forgot their former bad luck; or given over the hopes of better, when on a fudden they were invaded with a most formidable fleet, of no lefs than eight and twenty canoes full of favages, armed with bows and arrows, great clubs, wooden fwords, and fuch like engines of war; and they brought fuch numbers with them, that in fhort it put all our people into the utmost confirmation. As they came on fhore in the evening, and at the eaftermost fide of the island, our men had that night to confult and confider what to do; and in the first place, knowing that their being entirely concealed, was their only fafety before, and would be much more fo now, while the number of their enemies was fo great, they therefore refolved first of all to take down the huts which were built for the two Englishmen, and drive away their goats to the old cave, because they supposed the favages would go directly thither, as soon as it was day, to play the old game over again, though they did not now land within two leagues of it.

In the next place, they drove away all the flock of goats they had at the old bower, as I called it, which belonged to the Spaniards, and, in fhort, left as little appearance of inhabitants any where as was poffible, and the next morning early they pofted themfelves, with all their force, at the plantation of the two men to wait for their coming : As they gueffed fo it happened : thefe new invaders leaving their cances at the eaft end of the ifland, came ranging along the fhore directly towards the place, to the number of two hundred and fifty, as near as our men could judge. Our army was but fmall indeed; but that which was worfe, they had not arms for all their number neither : The whole account, it feems, flood thus; first as to men;

- 17 Spaniards.
  - 5 English.
  - 1 Old Friday, or Friday's father.
  - 3. The three flaves taken with the women, who proved very faithful.
  - 3 Other flaves who lived with the Spaniards.

To arm thefe, they had

- 11 Muskets.
  - 5 Piftols.
- 3 Fowling-pieces.
- 5 Muskets or fowling pieces, which were taken by me from the mutinous feamen whom I reduced.
- 2 Swords, three old halberds.

To their flaves they did not give either mufket or fuzee, but they had every one a halbert, or a long ftaff, like a quarter ftaff, with a great fpike of iron faftened into each end of it, and by his fide a hatchet; alfo every one of our men had hatchets. Two of the women could not be prevailed upon but they would come into the fight, and they had bows and arrows, which the Spapiards had taken from the favages, when the firft  $K \cdot 4$  aftion action happened, which I have spoken of, where the Indians fought with one another, and the women had hatchets too.

The Spaniard governor, whom I defcribed fo often, commanded the whole, and Will. Atkins, who, though a dreadful fellow for wickedness, was a most daring bold fellow, commanded under him. The favages came forward like lyons, and our men, which was the worft of their fate, had no advantage in their fituation, only that Will. Atkins, who now proved a moft ufeful fellow, with fix men was planted juft behind a small thicket of bushes, as an advanced guard, with orders to let the first of them pass by, and then fire into the middle of them, and as foon as he had fired, to make his retreat as nimbly as he could round part of the wood, and fo come in behind the Spaniards where they flood, having a thicket of trees also before them.

WHEN the favages came on, they ran ftraggling about every way in heaps, out of all manner of order, and Will. Atkins let about 50 of them pass by him, then seeing the rest come in a very thick throng, he orders three of his men to fire, having loaded their muskets with fix or seven bullets a piece, about as big as large pistol bullets. How many they killed or wounded they knew knew not, but the confternation and furprize was inexpreffible among the favages, they were frighted to the laft degree to hear fuch a dreadful noife, and fee their men killed and others hurt, but fee no body that did it, when in the middle of their fright Will. Atkins and his other three let fly again among the thickeft of them, and in lefs than a minute the firft three being loaded again, gave them a third volley.

HAD Will. Atkins and his men retired immediately, as foon as they had fired, as they were ordered to do; or had the reft of the body been at hand, to have poured in their fhot continually, the favages had been effectually routed; for the terror that was among them came principally from this, viz. That they were killed by the gods with thunder and lightning, and could fee no body that hurt them; but Will. Atkins flaying to load again, discovered the cheat; some of the favages who were at a diftance, fpying them, came upon them behind, and though Atkins and his men fired at them also, two or three times, and killed above twenty, retiring as fast as they could, yet they wounded Atkins himfelf and killed one of his fellow Englishmen with their arrows, as they did afterwards one Spaniard, and one of the Indian flaves who came with the women; this flave was a most gallant fellow, and fought fought most desperately, killing five of them with his own hand, having no weapon but one of the armed staves and a hatchet.

OUR men being thus hard laid at, Atkins wounded, and two other men killed, retreated to a rifing ground in the wood, and the Spaniards after firing three vollies upon them retreated alfo, for their number was fo great and they were fo defperate, that though above fifty of them were killed, and more than fo many wounded, yet they came on in the teeth of our men, fearlefs of danger, and fhot their arrows like a cloud; and it was obferved, that their wounded men, who were not quite difabled, were made outrageous by their wounds, and fought like mad-men.

WHEN our men retreated, they left the Spanniard and the Englishman that was killed behind them, and the favages when they came up to them, killed them over again in a wretched manner, breaking their arms, legs, and heads, with their clubs and wooden fwords, like true favages: but finding our men were gone, they did not feem to purfue them, but drew them, felves up in a kind of a ring, which is, it feems their cuftom, and fhouted twice in token of their victory: after which, they had the mortification to fee feveral of their wounded men fall, dying with the mere loss of blood.

THE Spaniard governor having drawn his little body up together upon a rifing ground, Atkins though he was wounded, would have had them march and charged them again altogether at once: but the Spaniard replied, Seignior Atkins, you fee how their wounded men fight, let them alone till morning; all the wounded men will be ftiff and fore with their wounds, and faint with the lofs of blood: and fo we shall have the fewer to engage. This advice was good; but Will. Atkins replied merrily, that is true, feignior, and fo fhall I too; and that is the reafon I would go on while I am warm. Well, Seignior Atkins, fays the Spaniard, you have behaved gallantly. and done your part, we will fight if you cannot come on, but I think it beft to ftay till morning; fo they waited.

But as it was a clear moon-light night, and they found the favages in great diforder about their dead and wounded men, and a great noife and hurry among them where they lay, they afterwards refolved to fall upon them in the night, efpecially if they could come to give them but one volley before they were difcovered, which they had a fair opportunity to do; for one of the two two Englishmen, in whose quarter it was where the fight began, led them between the woods, and the sea-fide westward, and then turning short fouth, they came so near where the thickest of them lay, that before they were seen or heard, eight of them fired in among them, and did dreadful execution upon them; in half a minute more eight others fired after them, pouring in their small shot in such a quantity, that abundance were killed and wounded; and all this while they were not able to see who hurt them, or which way to fly.

THE Spaniards charged again with the utmoff expedition, and then divided themfelves into three bodies, and refolved to fall in among them altogether. They had in each body eight perfons, that is to fay, twenty-four, whereof were twenty-two men, and the two women, who by the way fought defperately.

THEY divided the fire-arms equally in each party, and fo of the halberts and flaves. They would have had the women keep back, but they faid they were refolved to die with their hufbands; having thus formed their little army, they marched out from among the trees, and came up to the teeth of the enemy, flouting and holoing as loud as they could; the favages flood all together, but but were in the utmost confusion, hearing the noise of our men shouting from three quarters together; they would have fought if they had feen us; and as soon as we came near enough to be seen. fome arrows were shot and poor old Friday was wounded, though not dangerously; but our men gave them no time, but running up to them fired among them three ways, and then fell in with the but-ends of their muskets, their fwords, armed staves, and hatchets, and laid about them fo well, that, in a word, they fet up a difmal foreaming and howling, stying to fave their lives which way foever they could.

Our men were tired with the execution; and killed or mortally wounded in the two fights about 180 of them; the reft being frighted out of their wits, fcoured through the woods and over, the hills with all the fpeed, fear, and nimble feet could help them to do; and as we did not trouble ourfelves much to purfue them, they got all together to the fea-fide where they landed, and where their canoes lay: but their difafter was not at an end yet, for it blew a terrible ftorm of wind that evening from the fea-ward; fo that it was impoffible for them to go off; nay, the ftorm continuing all night, when the tide came up their canoes were most of them driven by the furge of the fea fo high upon the fhore that it required quired infinite toil to get them off; and fome of them were even dashed to pieces against the beach or against one another.

OUR men, though glad of their victory, yet got little reft that night; but having refreshed themselves as well as they could, they refolved to march to that part of the island where the favages were fled, and see what posture they were in: this necessfarily led them over the place where the sight had been, and where they found several of the poor creatures not quite dead, and yet past recovering life, a sight disagreeable enough to generous minds; for a truly great man, though obliged by the law of battle to destroy his enemy, takes no delight in his misery.

HOWEVER, there was no need to give any orders in this cafe, for their own favages, who were their fervants, difpatched these poor creatures with their hatchets.

At length they came in view of the place, where the more miferable remains of the favages army lay, where there appeared about an hundred ftill, their pofture was generally fitting upon the ground, with their knees up towards their mouth, and the head put between the two hands, leaning down upon the knees.

WHEN our men came within two musket-shot of them the Spaniard governor ordered two muskets to be fired without ball to alarm them; this he did, that by their countenance he might know what to expect, viz. whether they were still in heart to fight, or were so heartily beaten as to be dispirited and discouraged, and so he might manage accordingly.

THIS ftratagem took, for as foon as the favages heard the first gun and faw the flash of the fecond they started up upon their feet in the greatest consternation imaginable, and as our men advanced swiftly towards they all run screaming and yawling away, with a kind of howling noise, which our men did not understand, and had never heard before, and thus they run up the hills into the country.

At first, our men had much rather the weather had been calm, and they had all gone away to fea; but they did not then confider that this might probably have been the occasion of their coming again in fuch multitudes as not to be refisted, or at least to come fo many and fo often as would quite defolate the island and starve them. Will, Atkins therefore, who, notwithstanding his wound, kept always with them, proved the best counfellor in this cafe : his advice was to take the advantage advantage that offered and clap in between them and their boats, and fo deprive them of the capacity of ever returning any more to plague the island.

THEY confulted long about this, and tome were against it, for fear of making the wretches fly to the woods and live there desperate, and so they should have them to hunt like wild beasts, be associated to flir out about their business, and have their plantations continually risled, all their tame goats destroyed, and in short, be reduced to a life of continual distress.

Will. Atkins told them they had better have to do with a hundred men than with a hundred nations; that as they must destroy their boats, fo they must destroy the men, or be all of them destroyed themselves. In a word, he shewed them the neceffity of it to plainly, that they all came into it, fo went to work immediately with the boats, and getting fome dry wood together from a dead tree, they tried to fet fome of them on fire, but they were fo wet that they would not burn; however, the fire fo burned the upper part that it foon made them unfit for fwimming in the fea as boats. When the Indians faw what they were about, fome of them came running out of the woods, and coming as near as they could could to our men, kneeled down and cryed, " Oa, Oa, Waramokoa," and other words of their language, which none of the others underflood any thing of, but as they made pitiful geftures and ftrange noifes it was eafy to underftand they begged to have their boats fpared, and that they would be gone, and never come there again.

BUT our men were now fatisfied that they had no way to preferve themfelves or to preferve their colony, but effectually to prevent any of these people from ever going home again; depending upon this, that if ever fo much as one of them got back into their country to tell the ftory, the colony was undone; fo that letting them know that they fhould not have any mercy, they fell to work with their canoes and deftroyed them every one, that the florm had not deflroyed before; at the fight of which the favages raifed a hideous cry in the woods, which our people heard plain enough; after which they ran about the island like distracted men, fo that in a word, our men did not really know at first what to do with them.

Non did the Spaniards, with all their prudence, confider, that while they made the people thus defperate they ought to have kept a good guard at the fame time upon their plantations; for tho' Vol. II. L. this this is true, they had driven away their cattle, and the Indians did not find out their main retreat, I mean my old caftle at the hill, nor the cave in the valley, yet they found out my plantation at the bower and pulled it all to pieces, and all the fences and planting about it; trod all the corn under foot, tore up the vines and grapes being juft then almost ripe, and did our men an ineftimable damage, though to themfelves not one farthing's worth of fervice.

THOUGH OUR men were able to fight them upon all occafions, yet they were in no condition to purfue them or hunt them up and down; for as they were too nimble of foot for our men, when they found them fingle, fo our men durft not go abroad fingle for fear of being furrounded with their numbers. The beft was they had no weapons; for though they had bows they had no arrows left, nor any materials to make any; nor had they any edged tool or weapon among them.

THE extremity and diftrefs they were reduced to was great, and indeed deplorable; but at the fame time, our men were alfo brought to very bad circumftances by them; for though their retreats were preferved, yet their provision was deftroyed and their harveft fpoiled, and what to do or which way to turn themfelves they knew not. not. The only refuge they had now was the flock of cattle they had in the valley by the cave, and fome little corn which grew there, and the plantation of the three Englishmen. Will. Atkins and his comrades, who were now reduced to two, one of them being killed by an arrow, which flruck him on the fide of his head, just under the temples, fo that he never spoke more; and it was very remarkable, that this was the fame barbarous fellow that cut the poor favage flave with his hatchet, and who afterwards intended to have murdered all the Spaniards.

I LOOKED upon their cafe to have been worfe at this time than mine was at any time, after 1 first diffeovered the grains of barley and rice, and got into the manner of planting and raifing my corn, and my tame cattle; for now they had, as I may fay, an hundred wolves upon the island, which would devour every thing they could come at, yet could be hardly come at themfelves.

THE first thing they concluded, when they faw what their circumstances were, was, that they would if possible drive them up to the farther part of the island, fouth-west, that if any more favages came on shore they might not find one another: then, that they would daily hunt and harrafs them, and kill as many of them as L 2 they they could come at, till they had reduced their number; and if they could at laft tame them, and bring them to any thing, they would give them corn, and teach them how to plant and live upon their daily labour.

In order to this, they fo followed them and fo terrified them with their guns, that in a few days, if any of them fired a gun at an Indian, if he did not hit him, yet he would fall down for fear; and fo dreadfully frighted they were, that they kept out of fight farther and farther, till at laft, our men following them and every day almost killing or wounding fome of them, they kept up in the woods or hollow places fo much, that it reduced them to the utmost mifery for want of food, and many were afterwards found dead in the woods, without any hurt, but merely flarved to death.

WHEN our men found this it made their hearts relent, and pity moved them, efpecially the Spaniard governor, who was a most gentlemanly generous minded man, as ever I met with in my life; and he proposed, if possible, to take one of them alive, and bring him to understand what they meant, fo far as to be able to act as interpreter, and go among them and fee if they might be brought to fome conditions that might be depended pended upon, to fave their lives and do us no fpoil.

It was fome while before any of them could be taken, but being weak and half-ftarved, one of them was at laft furprized and made a prifoner; he was fullen at firft and would neither eat or drink, but finding himfelf kindly ufed, and victuals given him, and no violence offered him, he at laft grew tractable and came to himfelf.

THEY brought old Friday to him, who talked often with him, and told him how kind the others would be to them all, that they would not only fave their lives, but would give them part of the ifland to live in, provided they would give fatisfaction that they would keep in their own bounds, and not come beyond it to injure or prejudice others, and that they fhould have corn given them to plant and make it grow for their bread, and fome bread given them for their prefent fubfiftence; and old Friday bad the fellow go and talk with the reft of his countrymen, and fee what they faid to it, affuring them, that if they did not agree immediately, they fhould be 'all deftroyed.

L 3

THE

THE poor wretches thoroughly humbled, and reduced in number to about 37, clofed with the propofal at the first offer, and begged to have fome food given them; upon which, twelve Spaniards and two Englishmen, well armed, with three Indian flaves and old Friday, marched to the place where they were; the three Indian flaves carried them a large quantity of bread, fome rice boiled up to cakes and dried in the fun, and three live goats; and they were ordered to go to the fide of a hill, where they fat down, eat their provisions very thankfully, and were the moft faithful fellows to their words that could be thought of; for, except when they came to beg victuals and directions, they never came out of their bounds; and there they lived when I came to the ifland, and I went to fee them.

THEY had taught them both to plant corn, make bread, breed tame goats and milk them; they wanted nothing but wives, and they foon would have been a nation. They were confined to a neck of land, furrounded with high rocks behind them, and lying plain towards the fea before them, on the fouth-east corner of the island: They had land enough, and it was very good and fruitful: They had a piece of land about a mile and half broad, and three or four miles in length.

Ove men taught them to make wooden spades, fuch as I made for myself, and gave among them twelve hatchets and three or four knives, and there they lived the most subjected innocent creatures that ever were heard of.

After this the colony enjoyed a perfect tranquillity with refpect to the favages, till I came to revifit them, which was about two years after; not but that now and then fome canoes of favages came on fhore for their triumphal unnatural feafts; but as they were of feveral nations, and and perhaps had never heard of those that came before, or the reason of it, they did not make any fearch or inquiry after their countrymen, and if they had, it would have been very hard to have found them out.

THUS, I think, I have given a full account of all that happened to them, to my return, at leaft that was worth notice. The Indians or favages were wonderfully civilized by them, and they frequently went among them, but forbid, on pain of death, any one of the Indians coming to them, because they would not have their settlement betrayed again.

ONE thing was very remarkable, viz. that they taught the favages to make wicker ware, or L 4 bafkets; bafkets; but they foon out-did their mafters, for they made abundance of moft ingenious things in wicker work, particularly all forts of bafkets, fieves, bird-cages, cup-boards, &c. as alfo chairs to fit on, ftools, beds, couches, and abundance of other things, being very ingenious at fuch work when they were once put in the way of it.

My coming was a particular relief to these people, because we furnished them with knives, fciffars, spades, shovels, pick-axes, and all things of that kind which they could want.

With the help of those tools they were fo very handy, that they came at last to build up their huts, or houfes, very handfomely, radling or working it up like bafket-work all the way round, which was a very extraordinary piece of ingenuity, and looked very odd, but was an exceeding good fence, as well against heat as against all forts of vermin, and our men were fo taken with it, that they got the wild favages to come and do the like for them; fo that when I came to fee the two Englishmen's colonies, they looked at a diftance as if they lived like bees in a hive : and as for W. Atkins, who was now become a very industrious, neceffary and fober fellow, he had made himfelf fuch a tent of basket-work as I believe was never feen; it was 120 paces round on the the outfide, as I meafured by my fteps; the walls were as close worked as a basket in pannels or fouares of 32 in number, and very ftrong, ftanding about feven feet high; in the middle was another, not above 22 paces round, but built ftronger, being eight square in its form, and in the eight corners flood eight very flrong pofts, round the top of which he laid ftrong pieces pinned together with wooden pins, from which he raifed a pyramid for a roof of eight rafters, very handfome I affure you, and joined together very well, though he had no nails, and only a few iron spikes, which he made himself too, out of the old iron that I had left there; and indeed this fellow fhewed abundance of ingenuity in feveral things which he had no knowledge of; he made him a forge, with a pair of wooden bellows to blow the fire; he made himfelf charcoal for his work, and he formed out of one of the iron crows a middling good anvil to hammer upon : In this manner he made many things, but efpecially hooks, staples and spikes, bolts and hinges. But to return to the house: after he had pitched the roof of his innermost tent, he worked it up between the rafters with basketwork, fo firm, and thatched that over again fo ingenioufly with rice-ftraw, and over that a large leaf of a tree, which covered the top, that his house was as dry as if it had been tiled or flated. Indeed

154 ADVENTURES OF

Indeed he owned, that the favages had made the bafket-work for him.

THE outer circuit was covered as a lean-to, all round this inner apartment, and long rafters lay from the 32 angels to the top pofts of the inner houfe, being about 20 foot diftant; fo that there was a fpace like a walk within the outer wickerwall, and without the inner, near 20 feet wide.

THE inner place he partitioned off with the fame wicker-work, but much fairer, and divided it into fix apartments, fo that he had fix rooms on a floor; and out of every one of these there was a door, first into the entry or coming into the main tent, and another door into the fpace or walk that was round it; fo that walk was alfo divided into fix equal parts, which ferved not only for retreat, but to flore up any neceffaries which the family had occasion for: thefe fix fpaces not taking up the whole circumference, what other apartments the outer circle had, were thus ordered; as foon as you were in at the door of the outer circle, you had a fhort paffage ftrait before you to the door of the inner house, but on either fide was a wicker partition, and a door in it, by which you went first into a large room, of ftore-house, 20 feet wide, and about 30 feet long, and through that into another, not quite fo long; fo fo that in the outer circle were ten handfome rooms, fix of which were only to be come at through the apartments of the inner tent, and ferved as clofets or retiring rooms to the refpective chambers of the inner circle, and four large warehoufes, or barns, or what you pleafe to call them, which went through one another, two on either hand of the paffage, that led through the outer door to the inner tent.

SUCH a piece of bafket-work, I believe, was never feen in the world, nor a houfe or tent fo neatly contrived, much lefs fo built. In this great bee hive lived the three families, that is to fay, Will. Atkins and his companion, the third was killed, but his wife remained with three children, for fhe was it feems big with child when he died s and the other two were not at all backward to give the widow her full fhare of every thing. I mean as to their corn, milk, grapes, &c. and when they killed a kid, or found a turtle on the fhore; fo that they all lived well enough; though it was true they were not fo induftrious as the other two, as has been obferved already.

ONE thing, however, cannot be omitted, viz. that as for religion, I do not know that there was any thing of that kind among them : they pretty often indeed, put one another in mind that there was was a God, by the very common method of feamen, viz. fwearing by his name; nor were their poor ignorant favage wives much the better for having been married to Chriftians, as we muft call them; for as they knew very little of God themfelves, fo they were utterly incapable of entering into any difcourfe with their wives about a God, or to talk any thing to them concerning religion.

THE utmost of all the improvement which I can fay the wives had from them was, that they had taught them to fpeak English pretty well, and most of their children, which were near 20 in all, were taught to fpeak English too, from their first learning to speak, though they at first fpoke it in a very broken manner, like their mothers. There were none of these children above. fix years old when I came thither, for it was not much above feven years fince they had fetched these five favage ladies over ; but they had all been pretty fruitful, for they had all children, more or lefs: I think the cook's mate's wife was big of her fixth child; and the mothers were all a good fort of well-governed, quiet, laborious women, modeft and decent, helpful to one another, mighty observant and subject to their mafters, I cannot call them husbands; and wanted nothing but to be well inftructed in the Christian religion, neligion, and to be legally married, both which were happily brought about afterwards by my means, or at leaft, in confequence of my coming among them.

HAVING thus given an account of the colony in general, and pretty much of my five runnagate Englishmen, I must fay fomething of the Spaniards, who were the main body of the family, and in whose story there are some incidents also remarkable enough.

I HAD a great many discourses with them about their circumftances when they were among the favages. They told me readily, that they had no inflances to give of their application or ingenuity in that country: that they were poor. miferable, dejected handful of people, that if means had been put into their hands, had yet fo abandoned themfelves to defpair, and fo funk under the weight of their misfortunes, that they thought of nothing but starving. One of them a very grave and fenfible man, told me, he was convinced they were in the wrong; that it was not the part of wife men to give themfelves up to their mifery, but always to take hold of the helps which reason offered, as well for present support as for future deliverance: he told me that grief was the most fenfeless, infignificant passion in the world, world, for that it regarded only things paft, which were generally impoffible to be recalled, or to remedy, but had no views in things to come, and had no fhare in any thing that looked like deliverance, but rather added to the affliction, than proposed a remedy; and upon this he repeated a Sapnish proverb, which though I cannot repeat in just the same words that he spoke it in, yet I remember I made it into an English proverb of my own, thus:

- " In trouble to be troubled,
- " Is to have your trouble doubled."

He run on then in remarks upon all the little improvements I had made in my folitude; my unwearied application, as he called it, and how I had made a condition, which in its circumftances was at first much worse than theirs, a thousand times more happy than theirs was, even now when they were all together. He told me, it was remarkable that Englishmen had a greater prefence of mind, in their diffress, than any people that ever he met with ; that their unhappy nation and the Portugueze were the worff men in the world to struggle with misfortunes, for that their first step in dangers, after the common efforts were over, was always to defpair, lie down under it, and die, without roufing their thoughts up to proper remedies for escape.

I TOLD him their cafe and mine differed exceedingly, that they were caft upon the fhore without neceffaries, without fupply of food or prefent fustenance, till they could provide : that it is true. I had this difadvantage and difcomfort, that I was alone; but then the fupplies I had providentially thrown into my hands, by the unexpected driving of the ship on shore, was such a help as would have encouraged any creature in the world to have applied himfelf as I had done. Seignior, fays the Spaniard, had we poor Spaniards been in your cafe, we fhould never have gotten half those things out of the ship, as you did : Nay, fays he, we fhould never have found means to have gotten a raft to carry them, or to have gotten the raft on fhore without boat or fail: and how much lefs fhould we have done, faid he, if any of us had been alone? Well, I defired him to abate his compliment, and go oh with the hiftory of their coming on fhore, where they landed : he told me they unhappily landed at a place where there were people without provisions; whereas had they had the common-fense to have put off to fea again, and gone to another island a little farther, they had found provisions, though without people: there being an ifland that way, as they had been told, where there were provisions though no people : that is to fay, That the Spaniards of Trinidad had frequently been there, and and had filled the ifland with goats and hogs at feveral times, where they have bred in fuch multitudes, and where turtle and fea fowls were in fuch plenty, that they could have been in no want of flefh though they had found no bread; whereas here they were only fuftained with a few roots and herbs, which they underftood not, and which had no fubftance in them and which the inhabitants gave them, fparingly enough, and who could treat them no better, unlefs they would turn canibals and eat men's flefh, which was the great dainty of their country.

THEY gave me an account how many ways they frove to civilize the favages they were with, and to teach them rational cuftoms in the ordinary way of living, but in vain; and how they retorted it upon them, as unjuft, that they who came there for affiftance and fupport, fhould attempt to fet up for inftructors of those that gave them food; intimating, it feems, that none fhould fet up for the inftructors of others, but those who could live without them.

THEY gave me difinal accounts of the extremities they were driven to; how fometimes they were many days without any food at all; the ifland they were upon being inhabited by a fort of favages that lived more indolent, and for that reafon realon were lefs fupplied with the necessaries of life, than they had reason to believe others were in the fame parts of the world; and yet they found that these favages were lefs ravenous and voracious, than those who had better fupplies of food.

Also they added that they could not but fee with what demonstrations of wisdom and goodness the governing providence of God directs the events of things in the world : which, they said, appeared in their circumstances; for if pressed by the hardships they were under, and the barrenness of the country where they were, they had fearched after a better place to live in; they had then been out of the way of the relief that happened to them by my means.

THEN they gave me an account, how the favages whom they lived among, expected them to go out with them into their wars : and it was true, that as they had fire arms with them, had they not had the difafter to lofe their ammunition, they should have been ferviceable not only to their friends, but have made themfelves terrible, both to friends and enemies; but being without powder and fhot, and yet in a condition, that they could not in reafon deny to go out with their landlords to their wars; fo when they came into the field Vol. II. M' of of battle, they were in a worfe condition than the favages themfelves; for they had neither bows nor arrows, nor could they use those the favages gave them, fo they could do nothing, but ftand ftill, and be wounded with arrows, 'till they came up to the teeth of their enemy; and then indeed the three halberts they had were of use to them; and they would often drive a whole little army before them with those halberts and sharpened flicks put into the muzzles of their muskets : but that for all this they were fometimes furrounded with multitudes, and in great danger from their arrows, 'till at last they found the way to make themfelves large targets of wood, which they covered with fkins of wild beafts, whofe names they knew not; and these covered them from the arrows of the favages; that notwithstanding these, they were fometimes in great danger, were once five of them knocked down together with the clubs of the favages; which was the time when one of them was taken prifoner, that is to fay, the Spaniard whom I had relieved : that at first they thought he had been killed; but when they afterwards heard he was taken prifoner, they were under the greateft grief imaginable, and would willingly have all ventured their lives to have refcued him.

THEY told me, that when they were fo knocked down, the reft of their company refcued them, and ftood over them, fighting till they came to themfelves, all but him whom they thought had been dead; and then they made their way with their halberts and pieces, ftanding clofe together in a line, through a body of above a thoufand favages, beating down all that came in their way, got the victory over their enemies, but to their great forrow, becaufe it was with the lofs of their friend; whom the other party, finding him alive, carried off, with fome others, as I gave an account in my former.

THEY defcribed most affectionately, how they were furprized with joy at the return of their friend and companion in mifery, who, they thought had been devoured by wild beasts of the worst kind, viz. by wild men; and yet how more and more they were furprized with the account he gave them of his errand, and that there was a Christian in any place near, much more one that was able and had humanity enough to contribute to their deliverance.

THEY defcribed, how they were aftonished at the fight of the relief I fent them, and at the appearance of loaves of bread, things they had not feen fince their coming to that miferable place;  $M_2$  how 164 how often they croffed and bleffed it as bread fent from heaven; and what a reviving cordial it was to their spirits to taste it, as also of the other things I had fent for their fupply : and after all, they would have told me fomething of the joy they were in at the fight of a boat and pilots, to carry them away to the perfon and place from whence all these new comforts came; but they to'd me it was impoffible to express it by words, for their exceffive joy naturally driving them to unbecoming extravagancies, they had no way to defcribe them. but by telling me they bordered upon lunacy, having no way to give vent to their paffion fuitable to the fense that was upon them : that in fome it worked one way, and in fome another; and that fome of them, through a furprize of joy, would burft out into tears, others be stark mad, and others immediately faint. This difcourfe extremely affected me, and called to my mind Friday's extafy when he met his father, and the poor people's extafy when I took them up at fea after their ship was on fire; the mate of the ship's joy when he found himfelf delivered, in the place where he expected to perifh; and my own joy; when after twenty-eight years captivity I found a good fhip ready to carry me to my own country. All thefe things made me more fenfible of the relation of thefe poor men, and more affected with it.

HAVING thus given a view of the flate of things as I found them, I must relate the heads of what I did for these people, and the condition in which I left them. It was their opinion, and mine too, that they would be troubled no more with the favages, or that if they were, they would be able to cut them off, if they were twice as many as before; fo they had no concern about that : then I entered into a ferious discours with the Spaniard, whom I call governor, about their flay in the island; for as I was not come to carry any of them off, so it would not be just to carry off fome and leave others, who perhaps would be unwilling to flay if their flrength was diminisched.

On the other hand, I told them I came to eftablish them there not to remove them; and then I let them know, that I had brought with me relief of fundry kinds for them; that I had been at a great charge to fupply them with all things necessfary, as well for their convenience as their defence; and that I had fuch and fuch particular perfons with me, as well to insrease and recruit their number, as by the particular necesfary employments which they were bred to, being artificers, to affish them in those things in which at prefent they were to feek.

M 3

THEY

THEY were altogether when I talked thus to them, and before I delivered to them the flores I had brought, I afked them one by one, if they had entirely forgot and buried the first animofities that had been among them, and would shake hands with one another, and engage in a strict friendship and union of interest, that fo there might be no more misunderstandings or jealousies.

WILL. ATKINS with abundance of frankness and good humour faid, they had met with affliction enough to make them all fober, and enemies enough to make them all friends; that for his part he would live and die with them, and was fo far from defigning any thing against the Spaniards, that he owned they had done nothing to him but what his own mad humour made neceffary, and what he would have done, and perhaps much worfe, in their cafe; and that he would afk them pardon, if I defired it, for the foolifh and brutish things he had done to them, and was very willing and defirous of living in terms of entire friendship and union with them; aud would do any thing that lay in his power to convince them of it; and as for going to England, he cared not if he did not go thither thefe twenty years.

THE Spaniards faid, they had indeed at first difarmed and excluded Will. Atkins and his two countrymen for their ill conduct, as they had let me know; and they appealed to me for the neceffity they were under to do fo; but that Will. Atkins had behaved himfelf fo bravely in the great fight they had with the favages, and on feveral occafions fince, and had fhewed himfelf fo faithful to and concerned for the general interest of them all; that they had forgotten all that was paft, and thought he merited as much to be trufted with arms and fupplied with neceffaries as any of them; and that they had teftified their satisfaction in him, by committing the command to him, next to the governor himfelf; and as they had entire confidence in him and all his countrymen, fo they acknowledged they had merited that confidence by all the methods that honeft men could merit to be valued and trufted : and they most heartily embraced the occasion of giving me this affurance, that they would never have any interest separate from one another.

UPON those frank and open declarations of friendfhip, we appointed the next day to dine all together, and indeed we made a fplendid feast. I caufed the fhip's cook and his mate to come on shore and dress our dinner, and the old cook's mate we had on shore affisted. We brought on M 4 shore fhore fix pieces of good heef and four pieces of pork out of the fhip's provision, with our punchbowl, and materials to fill it; and in particular I gave them ten bottles of French claret, and ten bottles of English beer, things that neither the Spaniards or the English had tasted for many years, and which, it may be supposed, they were exceeding glad of.

THE Spaniards added to our feaft five whole kids, which the cooks roafted, and three of them were fent covered up clofe, on board the fhip to the feamen, that they might feaft on frefh meat from on fhore, as we did with their falt meat from on board.

AFTER this feaft, at which we were very innocently merry, I brought out my cargo of goods, wherein, that there might be no difpute about dividing, I fhewed them that there was fufficient for them all, defiring that they might all take an equal quantity of the goods that were for wearing; that is to fay, equal when made up, As firft I diffributed linen fufficient to make every one of them four fhirts, and at the Spaniards requeft afterwards, made them up fix; thefe were exceeding comfortable to them, having been what, as I may fay, they had long fince forgot the ufe of, or what it was to wear them.

I ALLOT-

I ALLOTTED the thin English fluffs, which I mentioned before, to make every one a light coat like a frock, which I judged fittest for the heat of the feason, cool and loofe, and ordered, that whenever they decayed they should make more as they thought fit; the like for pumps, shoes, stockings, and hats, &c.

I cannot express what pleasure, what fatisfaction fat upon the countenances of all those poor men when they faw the care I had taken of them, and how well I had furnished them. They told me I was a father to them, and that having such a correspondent as I was in so remote a part of the world, it would make them forget that they were left in a desolate place; and they all voluntarily engaged to me, not to leave the place without my confent.

THEN I prefented to them the people I had brought with me, particularly the taylor, the fmith, and the two carpenters, all of them moft neceffary people; but above all, my general artificer, than whom they could not name any thing that was more ufeful to them; and the taylor to fhew his concern for them, went to work immediately, and with my leave made them every one a fhirt, the first thing he did; and which was still more, he taught the women not only only how to few and flitch and use the needle, but made them affist to make the shirts for their husbands, and for all the rest.

As to the carpenters, I fcarce need mention how useful they were, for they took to pieces all my clumfy unhandy things, and made them clever convenient tables, stools, bed-steads, cupboards, lockers, shelves, and every thing they wanted of that kind.

But to let them fee how nature made artificers at first, I carried the carpenters to see Will. Atkins's basket-house, as I called it, and they both owned they never saw an instance of such natural ingenuity before, nor any thing so regular and so handily built, at least of its kind; and one of them when he saw it, after musing a good while, turning about to me, I am sure, says he, that man has no need of us, you need do nothing but give him tools.

THEN I brought them out all my flore of tools, and gave every man a digging fpade, a flovel, and a rake, for we had no harrows or ploughs; and to every feparate place a pick-axe, a crow, a broadaxe, and a faw; always appointing, that as often as they were broken or worn out they flould be fupplied fupplied, without grudging, out of the general flores that I left behind.

NAILS, ftaples, hinges, hammers, chifels, knives, fciffars, and all forts of tools and ironwork, they had without tale, as they required, for no man would care to take more than he wanted, and he must be a fool that would waste or spoil them on any account whatever; and for the use of the smith I left two ton of unwrought iron for a supply.

My magazine of powder and arms which I brought them was fuch, even to profusion, that they could not but rejoice at them, for now they could march as I used to do, with a musket upon each shoulder, if there was occasion, and were able to fight a thousand favages, if they had but some little advantages of fituation, which also they could not miss of if they had occasion.

I CARRIED on fhore with me the young man whofe mother was flarved to death, and the maid alfo; fhe was a fober, well educated, religious young woman, and behaved fo inoffenfively that every one gave her a good word; fhe had indeed an unhappy life with us, there being no woman in the fhip but herfelf; but fhe bore it with patience. After a while, feeing things fo well ordered, dered, and in fo fine a way of thriving upon my ifland, and confidering that they had neither bufinefs or acquaintance in the Eaft Indies, or reafon for taking fo long a voyage; I fay, confidering all this, both of them came to me, and defired I would give them leave to remain on the ifland, and be entered among my family, as they called it.

I AGREED to it readily, and they had a little plot of ground allotted to them, where they had three tents or houses set up, furrounded with a bafket-work, pallisadoed like Atkins's, adjoining to his plantation. Their tents were contrived to that they had each of them a room apart to lodge in, and a middle tent like a great florehouse to lay all their goods in, and to eat and drink in. And now the other two Englishmen removed their habitation to the fame place, and fo the island was divided into three colonies and no more, viz. the Spaniards with old Friday, and the first fervants at my old habitation under the hill, which was, in a word, the capital city, and where they had fo enlarged and extended their works, as well under as on the outfide of the hill, that they lived, though perfectly concealed, yet full at large; never was there fuch a little city in a wood, and fo hid, I believe, in any part of the world; for I verily believe a thousand men men might have ranged the island a month, and if they had not known there was fuch a thing, and looked on purpole for it, they would not have found it; for the trees flood fo thick and fo clofe, and grew fo fast matted into one another, that nothing but cutting them down first could difcover the place, except the only two narrow entrances where they went in and out could be found, which was not very eafy; one of them was just down at the water edge of the creek, and it was afterwards above 200 yards to the place, and the other was up the ladder at twice, as I have already formerly defcribed it; and they had a large wood thick planted also on the top of the hill, which contained above an acre, which grew apace, and covered the place from all difcovery there, with only one narrow place between two trees, not eafy to be discovered to enter on that fide.

The other colony was that of Will. Atkins's, where there were four families of Englishmen, I mean those I had left there with their wives and children; three favages that were flaves; the widow and the children of the Englishman that was killed; the young man and the maid; and by the way, we made a wife of her also before we went away. There was also the two carpenters and the taylor, whom I brought with me for them; 4 alfo the fmith, who was a very neceffary man to them, efpecially as a gunfinith to take care of their arms; and my other man, whom I called jack of all trades, who was in himfelf as good almost as twenty men, for he was not only a very ingenious fellow, but a very merry fellow, and before I went away we married him to the honest maid that came with the youth in the spip I mentioned before.

AND now I fpeak of marrying it brings me naturally to fay fomething of the French ecclefiaftic that I had brought with me out of the fhip's crew whom I took up at fea. It is true, this man was a Roman, and perhaps it may give offence to fome hereafter, if I leave any thing extraordinary upon record of a man whom, before I begin, I must (to fet him out in just colours) reprefent in terms very much to his difadvantage, in the account of Protestants; as first, that he was a Papist; fecondly, a Popish priest; and thurdly, a French Popish priest.

But justice demands of me to give him a due character; and I must fay, he was a grave, fober, pious, and most religious perfon; exact in his life, extensive in his charity, and exemplary in almost every thing he did; what then can any one fay against being very fensible of the value of fuch a man, notwithstanding his profefion;

fion; though it may be my opinion, perhaps, as well as the opinion of others who shall read this, that he was mistaken?

THE first hour that I began to converse with him after he had agreed to go with me to the East Indies, I found reason to delight exceedingly in his conversation; and he first began with me about religion in the most obliging manner imaginable.

SIR, fays he, you have not only, under God, (and at that he croffed his breaft) faved my life, but you have admitted me to go this voyage in your fhip, and by your obliging civility have taken me into your family, giving me an opportunity of free conversation. Now, Sir, fays he, vou fee by my habit what my profession is, and I guess by your nation what yours is; I may think it is my duty, and doubtlefs it is fo, to use my utmost endeavours on all occasions to bring all the fouls I can to the knowledge of the truth, and to embrace the catholic doctrine; but as I am here under your permiffion, and in your family, I am bound in justice to your kindness, as well as in decency and good manners to be under your government, and therefore I shall not without your leave, enter into any debate on the point of of religion in which we may not agree, farther than you shall give me leave.

I told him, his carriage was fo modeft that I could not but acknowledge it; that it was true we were fuch people as they called heretics, but that he was not the first catholic that I had converfed with without falling into any inconveniencies, or carrying the questions to any height in debate; that he should not find himself the worfe used for being of a different opinion from us, and if we did not converse without any diflike on either fide, upon that score, it should be his fault, not ours.

HE replied, that he thought all our converfation might be eafily feparated from difputes; that it was not his bufinefs to cap principles with every man he difcourfed with, and that he rather defired me to converfe with him as a gentleman than as a religionift; and that if I would give him leave at any time to difcourfe upon religious fubjects he would readily comply with it, and that he did not doubt but I would allow him alfo to defend his own opinions as well as he could, but that without my leave he would not break in upon me with any fuch thing. HE told me farther, that he would not ceafe to do all that became him in his office as a prieft, as well as private chriftian, to procure the good of the fhip, and the fafety of all that was in her; and though perhaps we would not join with him, and he could not pray with us, he hoped he might pray for us, which he would do upon all occafions. In this manner we converfed, and as he was of a most obliging gentleman-like behaviour, fo he was, if I may be allowed to fay fo, a man of good fenfe, and, as I believe, of great learning.

HE gave me a most diverting account of his life, and of the many extraordinary events of it; of many adventures which had befallen him in the few years that he had been abroad in the world, and particularly this was remarkable, viz. That in the voyage he was now engaged in, he had had the misfortune to be five times shipped and unfhipped, and never to go to the place whither any of the fhips he was in were at first defigned. That his first intent was to have gone to Martinico, and that he went on board a ship bound thither at St. Malo, but being forced into Lifbon by bad weather the fhip received fome damage by running a-ground in the mouth of the river Tagus, and was obliged to unload her cargoe there; but finding a Portugueze fhip there VGL. II. hound  $\mathbf{N}_{i}$ bound to the Madeiras, and ready to fail, and fuppofing he fhould eafily meet with a veffel there bound to Martinico, he went on board in order to fail to the Madeiras: but the mafter of the Portugueze ship being but an indifferent mariner had been out in his reckoning, and they drove to Fial, where, however, he happened to find a very good market for his cargo, which was corn, and therefore refolved not to go to the Madeiras, but to load falt at the ifle of May, and to go away to Newfoundland: he had no remedy in this exigence but to go with the fhip, and had a pretty good voyage as far as the Banks, fo they call the place where they catch the fifh, where meeting with a French ship bound from France to Quebeck, in the river of Canada, and from thence to Martinico, to carry provisions, he thought he fhould have an opportunity to compleat his first defign; but when he came to Quebec the mafter of the fhip died, and the fhip proceeded no farther; fo the next voyage he fhipped himfelf for France, in the fhip that was burned when we took them up at fea, and then shipped with us for the East Indies, as I have already faid. Thus he had been difappointed in five vovages, all, as I may call it, in one voyage, bef.des what I shall have occasion to mention farther of the fame perfon.

178

BUT I shall not make digressions into other men's ftories, which have no relation to my own: I return to what concerns our affairs in the island. He came to me one morning, for he lodged among us all the while we were upon the ifland; and it happened to be just when I was going to vifit the Englishmen's colony, at the farthest part of the island; I fay, he came to me and told me, with a very grave countenance, that he had for two or three days defired an opportunity of fome difcourse with me, which he hoped would not be difpleafing to me, becaufe he thought it might in fome measure correspond with my general defign, which was the profperity of my new colony, and perhaps might put it at leaft, more than he yet thought it was, in the way of God's bleffing.

I LOOKED a little furprized at the laft part of his difcourfe, and turning a little fhort, How, Sir, faid I, can it be faid that we are not in the way of God's bleffing after fuch vifible affiftances and wonderful deliverances as we have feen here, and -of which I have given a large account?

IF you had pleafed, Sir, faid he, with a world of modefty, and yet with great readinefs, to have heard me, you would have found no room to have been difpleafed, much lefs to think fo hard of me, that I should fuggest that you have not had won-N 2 derful derful affiftances and deliverances; and I hope, on your behalf, that you are in the way of God's bleffing, and your defign is exceeding good and will profper: but, Sir, though it were more fo, than is even poffible to you, yet there may be fome among you that are not equally right in their actions: and you know, that in the flory of the children of Ifrael, one Achan in the camp removed God's bleffing from them, and turned his hand fo againft them, that fix and thirty of them, though not concerned in the crime, were the objects of divine vengeance, and bore the weight of that punifhment.

I was fenfibly touched with his difcourfe, and told him his inference was fo juft, and the whole defign feemed fo fincere, and was really fo religious in its own nature, that I was very forry I had interrupted him, and begged him to go on; and in the mean time, becaufe it feemed that what we had both to fay might take up fome time, I told him, I was going to the Englifhmen's plantations, and afked him to go with me, and we might difcourfe of it by the way : he told me, he would the more willingly wait on me thither, becaufe there partly the thing was acted which he defired to fpeak to me about : fo we walked on, and I preffed him to be free and plain with me in what he had to fay.

Wнy

WHY then, Sir, fays he, be pleafed to give me leave to lay down a few propositions, as the foundation of what I have to fay, that we may not differ in the general principles, though we may be of fome differing opinions in the practice of particulars. First, Sir, though we differ in some of the doctrinal articles of religion, and it is very unhappy it is fo, efpecially in the cafe before us, as I shall shew afterwards, yet there are some general principles in which we both agree, viz. firft, That there is a God; and that this God having given us fome ftated general rules for our fervice and obedience, we ought not willingly and knowingly to offend him, either by neglecting to do what he has commanded, or by doing what he has expressly forbidden : and let our different religions be what they will, this general principle is owned by us all, That the bleffing of God does not ordinarily follow a prefumptuous finning against his command; and every good christian will be affectionately concerned, to prevent any that are under his care, living in a total neglect of God and his commands. It is not your men being Protestants, whatever my opinion may be of fuch, that difcharges me from being concerned for their fouls, and from endeavouring, if it lies before me, that they fhould live in as little diftance from enmity with their Maker, as poffible, efpecially cially if you give me leave to meddle fo far in your circuit.

182 ADVENTURES OF

I COULD not yet imagine what he aimed at, and told him, I granted all he had faid, and thanked him, that he would fo far concern himfelf for us, and begged he would explain the particulars of what he had obferved, that like Jofhua, to take his own parable, I might put away the accurfed thing from us.

WHY then, Sir, fays he, I will take the liberty you give me; and there are three things, which, if I am right, muft ftand in the way of God's bleffing, upon your endeavours here, and which I fhould rejoice for your fake, and their own, to fee removed. And, Sir, fays he, I promife myfelf, that you will fully agree with me in them all, as foon as I name them, efpecially becaufe I fhall convince you that every one of them may, with great eafe, and very much to your fatisfaction be remedied.

He gave me no leave to put in any more civilities, but went on : First, Sir, fays he, you have here four Englishmen, who have fetched women from among the favages, and have taken them as their wives, and have had many children by them all, and yet are not married to them after any stated ftated legal manner, as the laws of God and man require, and therefore are yet in the fense of no less than fornicators, if not living in adultery. To this, Sir, fays he, I know you will object, that there was no clergyman or prieft, of any kind or of any profession, to perform the ceremony, nor any pen and ink, or paper, to write down a contract of marriage, and have it figned between them : and I know alfo, Sir, what the Spaniard governor has told you, I mean, of the agreement that he obliged them to make when they took those women, viz. That they should chuse them out by confent, and keep feparately to them; which, by the way, is nothing of a marriage, no agreement with the women, as wives, but only an agreement among themfelves, to keep them from quarrelling.

BUT, Sir, the effence of the facrament of matrimony (fo he called it being a Roman) confifts not only in the mutual confent of the parties to take one another, as man and wife, but in the formal and legal obligation, that there is in the contract, to compel the man and woman at all times, to own and acknowledge each other, obliging the men to abftain from all other women, to engage in no other contract while thefe fubfift, and on all occafions, as ability allows, to provide honeftly for them and their children, and to

184 ADVENTURES OF

to oblige the women to the fame or like conditions, mutatis mutandis, on their fide.

Now, Sir, fays he, thefe men may, when they pleafe, or when occafion prefents, abandon thefe women, difown their children, leave them to perifh, and take other women and marry them, while thefe are living; and here he added, with fome warmth, How, Sir, is God honoured in this unlawful liberty, and how fhall a bleffing fucceed your endeavours in this place? However good in themfelves, and however fincere in your defign, while thefe men, who at prefent are your fubjects, under your abfolute government and dominion, are allowed by you to live in open adultery.

I CONFESS I was flruck with the thing itfelf, but much more with the convincing arguments he fupported it with; for it was certainly true, that though they had no clergyman upon the fpot, yet a formal contract on both fides, made before witneffes, and confirmed by any token which they had all agreed to be bound by, though it had been but breaking a flick between them, engaging the men to own these women for their wives upon all occasions, and never to abandon them or their children, and the women to the fame with their husbands, had been an effectual lawful lawful marriage in the fight of God; and it was a great neglect that it was not done.

BUT I thought to have gotten off my young prieft by telling him, that all that part was done when I was not here, and they had lived fo many years with them now, and that if it was adultery it was paft remedy, they could do nothing in it now.

SIR, fays he, afking your pardon for fuch freedom, you are right in this, that it being done in your abfence you could not be charged with that part of the crime; but I befeech you flatter not yourfelf that you are not therefore under an obligation to do your utmost now to put an end to it. How can you think, but that, let the time past lie on whom it will, all the guilt for the future will lie entirely upon you? because it is certainly in your power now to put an end to it, and in no body's power but yours.

I was fo dull ftill, that I did not take him right; but I imagined, that by putting an end to it, he meaned that I fhould part them, and not fuffer them to live together any longer; and I faid to him, I could not do that by any means, for that it would put the whole ifland into confufion: he feemed furprized, that I fhould fo far miftake miftake him. No, Sir, fays he, I do not mean that you fhould now feparate them, but legally and effectually marry them now; and as, Sir, my way of marrying them may not be eafy to reconcile them to, though it will be as effectual, even by your own laws, fo your way may be as well before God, and as valid among men; I mean, by a written contract, figned by both man and woman, and by all the witneffes prefent, which all the laws of Europe would decree to be valid.

I was amazed to fee fo much true piety, and fo much fincerity of zeal, befides the unufual impartiality in his difcourfe, as to his own party or church, and fuch true warmth for the preferving people, that he had no knowledge of, or relation to, I fay, for preferving them from the laws of God, the like of which I had indeed not met with any where: but recollecting what he had faid, of marrying them by a written contract, which I knew would fland too, I returned it back upon him, and told him, I granted that all he had faid to be just, and on his part very kind, that I would difcourfe with the men upon the point now, when I came to them ; and I knew no reafon why they fhould fcruple to let him marry them all, which I knew well enough would be granted to be as authentic and valid in England, as if they

they were married by one of our own clergy: what was afterwards done in this matter, I shall speak of by itself.

I THEN preffed him to tell me what was the fecond complaint which he had to make, acknowledging, that I was very much his debtor for the first and thanked him heartily for it : he told me he would use the fame freedom and plainness in the fecond, and hoped I would take it as well; and this was, that notwithstanding these English fubjects of mine, as he called them, had lived with those women, for almost feven years, had taught them to fpeak English, and even to read it; and that they were, as he perceived, women of tolerable understanding, and capable of instruction, yet they had not to this hour taught them any thing of the Christian religion, no not fo much as to know that there was a God, or a worfhip, or in what manner God was to be ferved, or that their own idolatry, and worfhipping they knew not whom, was false and absurd. This he faid was an unaccountable neglect, and what God would certainly call them to account for, and perhaps at last take the work out of their hands: he fpoke this very affectionately and warmly. I am perfuaded, fays he, had those men lived in the favage country, whence their wives came, the favages would have taken more pains to have brought brought them to be idolaters, and to worfhip the devil than any of thefe men, fo far as he could fee, have taken with them to teach them the knowledge of the true God : now, Sir, faid he, though I do not acknowledge your religion, or you mine, yet, we fhould be glad to fee the devil's fervants, and the fubjects of his kingdom, taught to know the general principles of the chriftian religion; that they might, at leaft hear of God and of a Redeemer, and of the refurrection, and of a future ftate, things which we all believe; they had at leaft been fo much nearer coming into the bofom of the true church than they are now in the public profeffion of idolatry and devil worfhip.

I COULD hold no longer; I took him in my arms, and embraced him with an excefs of paffion: how far, faid I, to him, have I been from understanding the most effential part of a Christian! viz. to love the interest of the Christian church, and the good of other men's fouls ? I fcarce have known what belongs to the being a Christian. O, Sir, do not fay fo, replied he, this thing is not your fault. No, fays I, but why did I never lay it to heart as well as you ? it is not too late yet, faid he, be not too forward to condemn yourself. But what can be done now, faid I, you fee I am going away? Will you give me leave to talk with these poor men about it ? yes, with all my heart, faid faid I, and will oblige them to give heed to what you fay too: as to that, faid he, we must leave them to the mercy of Chrift; but it is your bufinefs to affift them, encourage them, and inftruct them; and if you give me leave, and God his bleffing, I do not doubt but the poor ignorant fouls fhall be brought home to the great circle of Christianity, if not into the particular faith we all embrace, and that even while you ftay here: Upon this, I faid, I fhall not only leave, but give you a thousand thanks for it. What followed on this account I shall mention also again in its place. I now preffed him for the third article, in which we were to blame. Why, really fays he, it is of the fame nature, and I will proceed asking your leave, with the fame plainness as before; it is about your poor favages, who are, as I may fay, your conquered fubjects : it is a maxim, Sir, that is or ought to be received among all Christians, of what church or pretended church foever, viz. The Christian knowledge ought to be propagated by all poffible means, and on all poffible occafions. It is on this principle that our church fends missionaries into Persia, India China, and that our clergy, even of the fuperior fort, willingly engage in the moft hazardous voyages, and the most dangerous refidence among murderers and barbarians, to teach them the knowledge of the true God, and to bring them them over to embrace the Christian faith. Now, Sir, you have fuch an opportunity here to have fix or feven and thirty poor favages brought over from idolatry to the knowledge of God their maker and redeemer, that I wonder how you can pass fuch an occasion of doing good, which is really worth the expence of a man's whole life.

£88

I was now ftruck dumb indeed, and had not one word to fay. I had here a fpirit of true Chriftian zeal for God and religion before me. let his particular principles be of what kind foever : as for me, I had not fo much as entertained a thought of this in my heart before, and I believe I should not have thought of it; for I looked upon these favages as flaves, and people who, had we had any work for them to do, we would have used as fuch, or would have been glad to have transported them to any other part of the world; for our bufinefs was to get rid of them, and we would all have been fatisfied if they had been fent to any country, fo they had never feen their own. But to the cafe; I fay I was confounded at his difcourfe, and knew not what answer to make him.

He looked earneilly at me, feeing me in fome diforder; Sir, fays he, I fhall be very forry, if what I have faid gives you any offence: No, no, fays fays I, I am offended with no body but myfelf; but I am perfectly confounded, not only to think that I should never take any notice of this before, but with reflecting what notice I am able to take of it now. You know, Sir, faid I, what circumftances 1 am in, I am bound to the East Indies in a fhip freighted by merchants, and to whom it would be an unfufferable piece of injustice to detain their ship here, the men lying all this while at victuals and wages on the owners account. T۲ is true, I agreed to be allowed twelve days here, and if I flay more, I must pay three pounds sterling per diem demorage, nor can I ftay upon demorage, above eight days more, and I have been here thirteen already, fo that I am perfectly unable to engage in this work, unlefs I would fuffer myself to be left behind here again in which cafe if this fingle fhip fhould mifcarry in any part of her voyage, I fhould be just in the fame condition that I was left in here at first, and from which I have been fo wonderfully delivered. He owned the cafe was very hard upon me, as to my voyage; but laid it home upon my confcience; whether the bleffing of faving thirty-feven fouls, was not worth my venturing all I had in the world for; I was not fo fenfible of that as he was? I returned upon him thus, why, Sir, it is a valuable thing indeed to be an inftrument in God's hand to convert thirty-feven heathens to the knowledge knowledge of Chrift, but as you are an ecclefiaftic, and are given over to the work, fo that it feems fo naturally to fall into the way of your profeffion; how is it, that you do not rather offer yourfelf to undertake it than prefs me to do it.

UPON this he faced about juft before me as we walked along, and putting me to a full ftop, made me a very low bow; I most heartily thank God and you, Sir, fays he, for giving me fo evident a call to fo bleffed a work, and if you think yourfelf discharged from it, and defire me to undertake it, I will most readily do it, and think it a happy reward for all the hazards and difficulties of fuch a broken disappointed voyage as I have met with, that I may be dropped at last into fo glorious a work.

I DISCOVERED a kind of rapture in his face while he fpoke this to me; his eyes fparkled like fire, his face glowed, and his colour came and went as if he had been falling into fits; in a word, he was fired with the joy of being embarked in fuch a work. I paufed a confiderable while before I could tell what to fay to him, for I was really furprized to find a man of fuch fincerity and zeal, and carried out in his zeal beyond the ordinary rate of men, not of his profession only, but but even of any profeffion whatfoever. But after I had confidered it a while, I afked him ferioufly if he was in earneft, and that he would venture on the fingle confideration of an attempt on those poor people, to be locked up in an unplanted ifland for perhaps his life, and at laft might not know whether he fhould be able to do them good or not.

HE turned fhort upon me and afked me what I called a venture? Pray, Sir, faid he, what do you think I confented to go in your fhip to the East Indies for? Nay, faid I, that I know not, unlefs it was to preach to the Indians. Doubtlefs it was, faid he; and do you think if I can convert these thirty-seven men to the faith of Jesus Christ, it is not worth my time, though I should never be fetched off the ifland again; nay, is it not infinitely of more worth to fave fo many fouls, than my life is, or the life of twenty more of the fame profession? Yes, Sir, fays he, I would give Chrift and the bleffed virgin thanks all my days if I could be made the leaft happy inftrument of faving the fouls of those poor men, though I was never to fet my foot off this island or fee my native country any more; but fince you will honour me, fays he, with putting me into this work, for which I will pray for you all the days of my life, I have one humble petition to you. VOL. II. 0 faid faid he, befides. What is that? faid I. Why, fays he, it is that you will leave your man Friday with me to be my interpreter to them and to affift me, for without fome help I cannot fpeak to them or they to me.

I was fenfibly troubled at his requefting Friday, becaufe I could not think of parting with him, and that for many reafons; he had been the companion of my travels; he was not only faithful to me, but fincerely affectionate to the laft degree, and I had refolved to do fomething confiderable for him if he out-lived me, as it was probable he would; then I knew that as I had bred Friday up to be a proteftant, it would quite confound him to bring him to embrace another profeffion, and he would never, while his eyes were open, believe that his old mafter was a heretic and would be damned; and this might, in the end, ruin the poor fellow's principles, and fo turn him to his firft idolatry.

HOWEVER, a fudden thought relieved me in this ftrait, and it was this; I told him I could not fay that I was willing to part with Friday on any account whatever, though a work that to him was of more value than his life, ought to be to me of much lefs value than the kceping or parting with a fervant. But, on the other hand, I was perfuadéd perfuaded that Friday would by no means agree to part with me, and I could not force him to it without his confent, without manifest injustice, because I had promised I would never put him away, and he had pomised and engaged to me, that he would never leave me unless I put him away.

194

He feemed very much concerned at it, for he had no rational accefs to thefe poor people, feeing he did not underftand one word of their language, nor they one word of his. To remove this difficulty, I told him Friday's father had learned Spanifh, which I found he alfo underftood, and he fhould ferve him for an interpreter. So he was much better fatisfied, and nothing could perfuade him but he would ftay to endeavour to convert them; but providence gave another very happy turn to all this.

I COME back now to the first part of his objections. When we came to the Englishmen, I fent for them all together, and after fome account given them of what I had done for them, viz. what neceffary things I had provided for them, and how they were distributed, which they were very fensible of, and very thankful for; I began to talk to them of the fcandalous life they led, and gave them a full account of the notice the cler-O 2 gyman gyman had already taken of it, and arguing how unchriftian and irreligious a life it was. I firft afked them if they were married men or batchelors? They foon explained their conditions to me, and fhewed me that two of them were widowers and the other three were fingle men, or batchelors. I afked them with what confcience they could take those women and lie with themas they had done, call them their wives, and have fo many children by them, and not be married lawfully to them?

THEY all gave me the answer that I expected, viz. that there was no body to marry them; that they agreed before the governor to keep them as their wives and to maintain them and own them as their wives; and they thought, as things flood with them they were as legally married as if they had been married by a parson, and with all the formalities in the world.

I TOLD them, that no doubt they were married in the fight of God, and were bound in confcience to keep them as their wives, but that the laws of man being otherwife, they might pretend they were not married, and fo defert the poor women and children hereafter; and that their wives being poor defolate women, friendlefs and moneylefs, would have no way to help themfelves:

196

felves: I therefore told them, that unlefs I was affured of their honeft intent I could do nothing for them, but would take care that what I did fhould be for the women and their children without them; and that unlefs they would give fome affurances that they would marry the women, I could not think it was convenient they fhould continue together as man and wife, for that it was both fcandalous to men and offenfive to God, who they could not think would blefs them if they went on thus.

All this went on as I expected; and they told me, efpecially Will. Atkins, who feemed now to fpeak for the reft, that they loved their wives as well as if they had been born in their own native country, and would not leave them upon any account whatever, and they did verily believe their wives were as virtuous and as modeft, and did to the utmost of their skill, as much for them and for their children as any women could poffibly do, and they would not part with them on any account : And Will. Atkins, for his own particular, added, if any man would take him away, and offer to carry him home to England, and make him captain of the beft man of war in the navy, he would not go with him, if he might not carry his wife and children with him, and if 0 3 there there was a clergyman in the fhip he would be married to her now with all his heart.

198 ADVENTURES OF

THIS was just as I would have it; the prieft was not with me at that moment but was not far off. fo to try him farther, I told him I had a clergy. man with me, and if he was fincere, I would have him married the next morning, and bad him confider of it and talk with the reft. He faid, as for himfelf, he need not confider of it at all, for he was very ready to do it, and was glad I had a minister with me, and he believed they would be all willing also. I then told him, that my friend the minister was a Frenchman, and could not fpeak English, but that I would act the clerk between them. He never to much as afked me whether he was a Papist or Protestant, which was indeed what I was afraid; but, I fay, they never inquired about it, fo we parted. I went back to my clergyman, and Will. Atkins went in to talk with his companions. I defired the French gentleman not to fay any thing to them till the bufinefs was thorough ripe, and I told him what answer the men had given me.

BEFORE I went from their quarter they all came to me and told me they had been confidering what I had faid, that they were glad to hear I had a clergyman in my company, and they were very very willing to give me the fatisfaction I defired, and to be formally married as foon as I pleafed, for they were far from defiring to part with their wives, and that they meant nothing but what was very honeft when they chofe them. So I appointed them to meet me the next morning, and in the mean time they fhould let their wives know the meaning of the marriage law; and that it was not only to prevent any fcandal, but alfo to oblige them that they fhould not forfake them, whatever might happen.

THE women were eafy made fenfible of the meaning of the thing, and were very well fatisfied with it, as indeed they had reafon to be: ' fo they failed not to attend all together at my appartment the next morning, where I brought out my clergyman, and though he had not on a minifter's gown, after the manner of England, or the habit of a prieft, after the manner of France, yet having a black veft fomething like a caffock, with a fafh round it, he did not look very unlike a minifter; and as for his language, I was his interpreter.

But the ferioufnefs of his behaviour to them and the fcruples he made of marrying the women becaufe they were not baptized and profeffed chriftians, gave them an exceeding reverence for  $O_4$  his 200 his perfon, and there was no need after that to inquire whether he was a clergyman or no.

INDEED I was afraid his foruple would have been carried fo far as that he would not have married them at all; nay, notwithftanding all I was able to fay to him he refifted me, though modeftly yet very fteadily, and at laft refufed abfolutely to marry them unlefs he had firft talked with the men and women too; and though at firft I was a little backward to it, yet at laft I agreed to it with a good will, perceiving the fincerity of his defign.

WHEN he came to them he let them know that I had acquainted him with their circumstances, and with the prefent defign; that he was very willing to perform that part of his function, and marry them as I had defired, but that before he could do it he must take the liberty to talk with them. He told them, that in the fight of all indifferent men, and in the fenfe of the laws of fociety, they had lived all this while in open fornication; and that it was true, that nothing but the confenting to marry, or effectually feparating them from one another, could now put an end to it; but there was a difficulty in it too, with respect to the laws of christian matrimony, which he was not fully fatisfied about, viz. that of marrying rying one that is a profeffed chriftian to a favage, an idolater, and a heathen, one that is not baptized; and yet that he did not fee that there was time left for to endeavour to perfuade the women to be baptized, or to profefs the name of Chrift, whom they had, he doubted, heard nothing of, and without which they could not be baptized.

HE told them, he doubted they were but indifferent chriftians themfelves; that they had but little knowledge of God or of his ways, and therefore he could not expect that they had faid much to their wives on that head yet, but that unlefs they would promife him to ufe their endeavour with their wives to perfuade them to become chriftians, and would, as well as they could inftruct them in the knowledge and belief of God that made them, and to worfhip Jefus Chrift that redeemed them, he could not marry them, for he would have no hand in joining chriftians with favages, nor was it confiftent with the principles of the chriftian religion, and was indeed exprefsly forbidden in God's law.

THEY heard all this very attentively, and I delivered it very faithfully to them from his mouth, as near his own words as I could, only fometimes adding fomething of my own, to convince them how just it was, and how I was of his mind; and I always

I always very faithfully diffinguished between what I faid from myfelf and what were the clergyman's words. They told me it was very true what the gentleman faid, that they were very indifferent christians themselves, and that they had never talked to their wives about religion. Lord. Sir, fays Will. Atkins, how fhould we teach them religion ? why we know nothing ourfelves; and befides, Sir, faid he, fhould we talk to them of God, and Jefus Chrift, and heaven and hell, it would be to make them laugh at us, and ask us, what we believe ourfelves? And if we fould tell them that we believe all the things we fpeak of to them, fuch as of good people going to heaven, and wicked people to the devil, they would afk us, where we intend to go ourfelves that believe all this, and are fuch wicked fellows, as we indeed are? Why, Sir, tis enough to give them a furfeit of religion at first hearing : Folks must have fome religion themfelves before they pretend to teach other people. Will. Atkins, faid I to him, though I am afraid what you fay has too much truth in it, yet can you not tell your wife fhe is in the wrong? That there is a God and a religion better than her own; that her gods are idols, that they can neither hear or fpeak; that there is a great being that made all things, and that can deftroy all that he had made; that he rewards the good and punifhes the bad. and and that we are to be judged by him at laft for all we do here; you are not fo ignorant but even nature itfelf will teach you that all this is true; and I am fatisfied you know it all to be true, and believe it yourfelf.

THAT is true, Sir, faid Atkins; but with what face can I fay any thing to my wife of all this, when fhe will tell me immediately it cannot be true.

Nor true, faid I, what do you mean by that; Why, Sir, faid he, fhe will tell me it cannot be true, that this God I fhall tell her of can be juft, or can punifh or reward, fince I am not punifhed and fent to the devil, that have been fuch a wicked creature as fhe knows I have been, even to her, and to every body elfe, and that I fhould be fuffered to live that have been always acting fo contrary to what I must tell her is good, and to what I ought to have done.

Why, truly, Atkins, faid I, I am afraid thou fpeakeft too much truth; and with that I informed the clergyman of what Atkins had faid, for he was impatient to know. O! faid the prieft, tell him there is one thing will make him the beft minifter in the world to his wife, and that is, repentance; for none teach repentance like true true penitents. He wants nothing but to repent, and then he will be fo much the better qualified to inftruct his wife; he will be then able to tell her, that there is not only a God, and that he is the just rewarder of good and evil, but that he is a merciful being, and with what infinite goodnefs and long-fuffering forbears to punish those that offend, waiting to be gracious, and willing not the death of a finner, but rather that he fhould return and live : that often times fuffers wicked men to go a long time, and even referves damnation to the general day of retribution; that it is a clear evidence of God and of a future state, that righteous men receive not their reward, or wicked men their punishment till they come into another world, and this will lead him to teach his wife the doctrine of the refurrection and of the laft judgment; let him but repent for himfelf, he will be an excellent preacher of repentance to his wife.

I REPEATED all this to Atkins, who looked very ferious all the while, and who, we could eafily perceive, was more than ordinarily affected with it: when being eager, and hardly fuffering me to make an end, I know all this, mafter, fays he, and a great deal more, but I have not the impudence to talk thus to my wife, when God and my confcience knows, and my wife will be an undeniable niable evidence against me, that I have lived as if I had never heard of a God or future state, or any thing about it, and to talk of my repenting, alas! and with that he setched a deep sigh, and I could see that the tears stood in his eyes, tis pass all that with me. Pass it! Atkins, said I, what dost thou mean by that? I know well enough what I mean, says he, I mean tis too late, and that is too true.

I told the clergyman, word for word, what he faid; the poor zealous prieft (I must call him fo. for be his opinion what it will, he had certainly a most fingular affection for the good of other men's fouls, and it would be hard to think he had not the like for his own) I fay, this affectionate man could not refrain tears alfo; but, recovering himfelf, he faid to me; afk him but one queftion, is he eafy that it is too late, or is he troubled, and wifhes it were not fo? I put the question to Atkins, and he answered with a great deal of paffion, how could any man be eafy in a condition that must certainly end in eternal deftruction; that he was far from being eafy, but that. on the contrary, he believed it would one time or other ruin him.

WHAT do you mean by that? faid I. Why, he he faid, he believed he fhould one time or other cut his throat, to put an end to the terror of it.

THE clergyman fhook his head with great concern in his face when I told him all this; but turning quick to me upon it, fays he, if that be his cafe, we may affure him it is not too late. Chrift will give him repentance. But, pray, fays he, explain this to him; that as no man is faved but by Chrift and the merit of his paffion, procuring divine mercy for him, how can it be too late for any man to receive mercy? Does he think he is able to fin beyond the power or reach of divine mercy? Pray tell him, there may be a time when provoked mercy will no longer ftrive, and when God may refuse to hear, but that tis never too late for men to afk mercy; and we that are Christ's fervants are commanded to preach mercy at all times, in the name of Jefus Chrift, to all those that fincerely repent, fo that it is never too late to repent.

I TOLD Atkins all this, and he heard me with great earneftnefs; but it feemed as if he turned off the difcourfe to the reft, for he faid to me, he would go and have fome talk with his wife; fo he went out a while, and we talked to the reft. I perceived they were all flupidly ignorant as to matters of religon, as much as I was when I went rambling rambling away from my father, and yet that there were none of them backward to hear what had been faid; and all of them ferioufly promifed, that they would talk with their wives about it, and do their endeavour to perfuade them to turn chriftians.

THE clergyman fmiled upon me when I reported what answer they gave, but faid nothing a good while, but at last, shaking his head, we that are Chrift's fervants, fays he, can go no farther than to exhort and inftruct, and when men comply, fubmit to the reproof, and promife what we afk, tis all we can do; we are bound to accept their good words : but, believe me, Sir, faid he. whatever you may have known of the life of that man you call Will. Atkins, I believe he is the only fincere convert among them; I take that man to be a true penitent; I won't despair of the reft; but that man is apparently ftruck with the fense of his past life, and I doubt not when he comes to talk of religion to his wife, he will talk himfelf effectually into it, for attempting to teach others, is fometimes the best way of teaching themfelves. I know a man, who having nothing but a fummary notion of religion himfelf, and being wicked and profligate to the last degree in his life, made a thorough reformation in himfelf by labouring to convert a Jew. If that poor Atkins kins begins but once to talk ferioufly of Jefus Chrift to his wife, my life for it he talks himfelf into a thorough convert, makes himfelf a penitent, and who knows what may follow?

208

UPON this difcourfe, however, and their promifing, as above, to endeavour to perfuade their wives to embrace christianity, he married the other two couple, but Will. Atkins and his wife were not yet come in; after this, my clergyman waiting a while, was curious to know where Atkins was gone, and turning to me, fays he, I intreat you, Sir, let us walk out of your labyrinth here, and look, I dare fay we shall find this poor man fome where or other talking ferioufly to his wife, and teaching her already fomething of religion. I began to be of the fame mind; fo we went out together, and I carried him a way which none knew but myfelf, and where the trees were fo thick fet as that it was not eafy to fee through the thicket of leaves, and far harder to fee in, than to fee out; when coming to the edge of the wood. I faw Atkins and his tawny favage wife fitting under the fhade of a bufh, very eager in discourse; I flopped fhort till my clergyman came up to me, and then having fhewed him where they were, we ftood and looked very fleadily at them a good while.

WE observed him very earnest with her, pointing up to the fun, and to every quarter of the heavens, and then down to the earth, then out to the fea, then to himfelf, then to her, to the woods, to the trees. Now, fays my clergyman, you fee my words are made good, the man preaches to her; mark him now, he is telling her that our God has made him and her, and the heavens, the earth, the fea, the woods, the trees, &c. I believe he is, faid I. Immediately we perceived Will. Atkins start up on his feet, fall down on his knees, and lift up both his hands: We suppose he faid fomething, but we could not hear him, it was too far for that; he did not continue kneeling half a minute, but comes and fits down again by his wife, and talks to her again; we perceived then the woman very attentive, but whether fhe faid any thing or no we could not tell. While the poor fellow was upon his knees I could fee the tears run plentifully down my clergyman's cheeks, and I could hardly forbear myself; but it was a great affliction to us both, that we were not near enough to hear any thing that paffed between them.

WELL, however, we could come no nearer for fear of diffurbing them, fo we refolved to fee an end of this piece of ftill conversation, and it fpoke loud enough to us without the help of Vol. II. P voice. voice. He fat down again, as I have faid, clofe by her, and talking again earneftly to her, and two or three times we could fee him embrace her moft paffionately; another time we faw him take out his handkerchief and wipe her eyes, and then kifs her again with a kind of transport very unufual; and after feveral of these things we faw him on a fudden jump up again and lend her his hand to help her up, when immediately leading her by the hand a step or two, they both kneeled down together, and continued so about two minutes.

My friend could bear it no longer, but cries out aloud, St. Paul! St. Paul! behold he prayeth: I was afraid Atkins would hear him, therefore I entreated him to withhold himfelf a while, that we might fee an end of the fcene, which to me, I must confess, was the most affecting that ever I faw in my life. Well, he ftrove with himself for a while, but was in fuch raptures to think that the poor heathen woman was become a chriftian, that he was not able to contain himfelf; he wept feveral times, then throwing up his hands and croffing his breaft, faid over feveral things ejaculatory, and by way of giving God thanks for fo miraculous a teftimony of the fuccess of our endeavours; fome he spoke foftly, and I coul not well hear others, fome in Latin, fome in French :

210

French : then two or three times the tears would interrupt him that he could not fpeak at all; but I begged that he would contain himfelf, and let us more narrowly and fully obferve what was before us, which he did for a time, the scene not being ended there vet; for after the poor man and his wife were rifen again from their knees, we observed he flood talking still eagerly to her, and we obferved her motion, that fhe was greatly affected with what he faid, by her frequent lifting up her hands, laying her hand to her breaft, and fuch other poftures as express the greatest feriousness and attention: this continued about half a quarter of an hour, and then they walked away; fo we could fee no more of them in that fituation. I took this interval to talk with my clergyman; and first I was glad to fee the particulars we had both been witneffes to, that, tho' I was hard enough of belief in fuch cafes, yet that I began to think it was all very fincere here both in the man and his wife, however ignorant they might both be, and I hoped fuch a beginning would have yet a more happy end; and who knows, faid I, but thefe two may in time, by inftruction and example, work upon fome of the other? Some of them, faid he, turning quick upon me, aye, upon all of them, depend upon it, if those two favages, for he has been but little better, as you relate it, should embrace Jesus P 2 Chrift, Chrift, they will never leave it till they work upon all the reft; for true religion is naturally communicative, and he that is once made a chriftian will never leave a pagan behind him, if he can help it. I owned it was a moft christian principle to think fo, and a testimony of a true zeal, as well as a generous heart in him. But, my friend, faid I, will you give me leave to flart one difficulty here; I cannot tell how to object the leaft thing against that affectionate concern which you fhew for the turning the poor people from their paganism to the christian religion. But how does this comfort you, while these people are in your account out of the pale of the catholic church, without which you believe there is no falvation? So that you esteem these but heretics. for other reasons as effectually loft as the pagans themfelves.

To this he anfwered, with abundance of candour thus; Sir, I am a catholic of the Roman church, and a prieft of the order of St. Benedict, and I embrace all the principles of the Roman faith; but yet if you will believe me, and that I do not fpeak in compliment to you, or in refpect to my circumftances and your civilities, I fay, neverthelefs, I do not look upon you, who call yourfelves reformed, without fome charity: I dare not fay (though I know it is our opinion in general)

general) that you cannot be faved; I will by no means limit the mercy of Chrift fo far as to think that he cannot receive you into the bofom of his church, in a manner to us unperceivable; and I hope you have the fame charity for us: I pray daily for your being all reftored to Chrift's church, by whatfoever methods he, who is all-wife, is pleafed to direct: in the mean time, fure you will allow it to confift with me, as a Roman, to diftinguish far between a protestant and a pagan, between one that calls on Jefus Chrift, though in a way which I do not think is according to the true faith, and a favage or a barbarian, that knows no God, no Chrift, no redeemer; and if you are not within the pale of the catholic church, we hope you are nearer being reftored to it, than those that know nothing of God or of his church; and I rejoice therefore when I fee this poor man, whom you fay has been a profligate, and almost a murderer, kneel down and pray to Jesus Christ, as we fuppose he did, though not fully enlightened; believing that God, from whom every fuch work proceeds, will fenfibly touch his heart, and bring him to the farther knowlege of that truth in his own time; and if God shall influence this poor man to convert and inftruct the ignorant favage his wife, I can never believe, that he shall be caft away himfelf; and have I not reafon then to rejoice, the nearer any are brought to the know-P 3 ledge ledge of Chrift, though they may not be brought quite home into the bolom of the catholic church, juft at the time when I may defire it; leaving it to the goodnefs of Chrift to perfect his work in his own time, and his own way. Certainly, I would rejoice if all the favages in America were brought like this poor woman, to pray to God, though they were to be all protestants at first, rather than they should continue pagans or heathens; firmly believing, that he that had beftowed the first light to them, would farther illuminate them with a beam of his heavenly grace, and bring them into the pale of his church, when he should fee good.

I was aftonished at the fincerity and temper of this pious papis, as much as I was opprefied by the power of his reasoning; and it prefently occurred to my thoughts, that if fuch a temper was universal, we might be all catholic Christians, whatever church or particular profession we joined in; that a spirit of charity would foon work us all up into right principles; and, as he thought that the like charity would make us all catholics, fo I told him I believed, had all the members of his church the like moderation, they would foon be all protestants. And there we left that part; for we never disputed at all. HOWEVER, I talked to him another way, and taking him by the hand, My friend, fays I, I wifh all the clergy of the Roman church were bleft with fuch moderation, and had an equal fhare of your charity. I am entirely of your opinion; but I must tell you, that if you fhould preach fuch doctrine in Spain or Italy, they would put you into the inquisition.

It may be fo, faid he, I know not what they would do in Spain or Italy, but I will not fay, they would be the better Christians for that feverity, for I am fure there is no herefy in abounding with charity.

WELL, as W. Atkins and his wife were gone, our bufinefs there was over; fo we went back our own way, and when we came back we found them waiting to be called in: obferving this, I afked my clergyman if we fhould difcover to him that we had feen him under the bufh, or not ? and it was his opinion we fhould not, but that we fhould talk to him first and hear what he would fay to us: fo we called him in alone, no body being in the place but ourfelves; and I began with him thus:

WILL. ATKINS, faid I, prithee what education had you? what was your father?

$\mathbf{P}$	4

W. A. A

216 ADVENTURES OF

W. A. A better man than ever I shall be : Sir, my father was a clergyman.

R. C. What education did he give you?

W. A. He would have taught me well, Sir, but I defpifed all education, inftruction, or correction, like a beaft as I was.

R. C. It is true, Solomon fays, "He that defpifes reproof is brutifh."

W. A. Ay, Sir, I was brutish indeed, for I murdered my father: for God's fake, Sir, talk no more about that, Sir, I murdered my poor father.

Pr. Ha! a murderer!

HERE the priest started (for I interpreted every word as he spoke) and looked pale; it seems he believed that Will. had really killed his father.

R. C. No; no, Sir, I do not underftand him fo. W. Atkins explain yourfelf; you did not kill your father, did you, with your own hands?

W. A. No, Sir, I did not cut his throat, but I cut the thread of all his comforts, and fhortened his his days: I broke his heart by the most ungrateful, unnatural return, for the most tender affectionate treatment that ever father gave, or child could receive.

R. C. Well, I did not alk you about your father, to extort this confession: I pray God give you repentance for it, and forgive you that and all your other fins; but I asked you because I fee that, though you have not much learning, yet you are not so-ignorant as some are in things that are good; that you have known more of religion a great deal than you have practifed.

W. A. Though you, Sir, did not extort the confession that I make about my father, confoience does; and when ever we come to look back upon our lives, the fins against our indulgent parents are certainly the first that touch us; the wounds they make lie deepest, and the weight they leave will lie heaviest upon the mind, of all the fins we can commit.

R. C. You talk too feelingly and fenfibly for me, Atkins; I cannot bear it.

W. A. You bear it, Master! I dare fay you know nothing of it

R. C. Yes,

R. C. Yes, Atkins, every fhore, every hill, nay, I may fay every tree in this ifland, is witnefs to the anguifh of my foul for my ingratitude and bafe ufage of a good tender father, a father much like yours, by your description, and I murdered my father as well as you, Will. Atkins, but I think for all that, my repentance is fhort of yours too by a great deal,

I would have faid more, if I could have reftrained my paffions; but I thought this poor man's repentance was fo much fincerer than mine, that I was going to leave off the difcourfe and retire, for I was furprized with what he faid, and thought, that inflead of my going about to teach and inftruct him, the man was made a teacher and inftructor to me, in a most furprizing and unexpected manner.

I LAID all this before the young clergyman, who was greatly affected with it, and faid to me, Did I not fay, Sir, that when this man was converted he would preach to us all? I tell you, Sir, if this one man be made a true penitent, here will be no need of me, he will make Chriftians of all in the ifland. But having a little composed myfelf, I renewed my discourse with Will. Atkins. But, Will. faid I, how comes the fenfe of this matter to touch you juft now?

W. A. Sir, you have fet me about a work that has ftruck a dart through my very foul; I have been talking about God and religion to my wife, in order, as you directed me, to make a Chriftian of her; and fhe has preached fuch a fermon to me as I fhall never forget while I live.

R. C. No, no, it is not your wife has preached to you; but when you were moving religious arguments to her, conficience has flung them back upon you.

W. A. Ay, Sir, with fuch force as is not to be refifted.

R. C. Pray Will. let us know what paffed between you and your wife, for I know fomething of it already.

W. A. Sir, it is impoffible to give you a full account of it; I am too full to hold it, and yet have no tongue to express it; but let her have faid what fhe will, and though I cannot give you an account of it, this I can tell you of it, that I refolve to amend and reform my life.

R. C. Rut

R. C. But tell us fome of it : how did you begin, Will? For this has been an extraordinary cafe, that's certain. She has preached a fermon indeed if fhe has wrought this upon you.

W. A. Why, I first told her the nature of our laws about marriage, and what the reasons were that men and women were obliged to enter into fuch compacts, as it was neither in the power of one or other to break; that otherwise order and justice could not be maintained, and men would run from their wives, and abandon their children, mix confusedly with one another, and neither families be kept entire or inheritances be settled by legal descent.

R. C. You talk like a civilian, Will. could you make her underftand what you meant by inheriz tance, and families? they know no fuch things among the favages, but marry any how, without regard to relation, confanguinity, or family; brother and fifter, nay, as I have been told, even the father and daughter, and fon and the mother

W. A. I believe, Sir, you are mifinformed, and my wife affures me of the contrary, and that they abhor it; perhaps, for any farther relations they may not be fo exact as we are; but the tells me they they never touch one another in the near relations you fpeak of.

R. C. Well, what did fhe fay to what you told her?

W. A. She faid fhe liked it very well, and it was much better than in her country.

R. C. But did you tell her what marriage was?

W. A. Ay, ay, there began our dialogue. I afked her if the would be married to me our way? She afked me what way that was? I told her marriage was appointed by God: and here we had a ftrange talk together indeed, as ever man and wife had, I believe.

N. B. This dialogue between Will. Atkins and his wife, I took down in writing, just after he told it me, which was as follows.

Wife. Appointed by your God! Why, have you a God in your country?

W. A. Yes, my dear, God is in every country.

Wife. No, your God in my country; my country have the great old Benamuckee God.

W. A. Child,

222 ADVENTURES OF

W. A. Child, I am very unfit to fhew you who God is; God is in heaven, and made the heaven and the earth, the fea, and all that in them is.

Wife, No makee de earth ; no, you God make all earth, no makee my country.

WILL. ATKINS laughed a little at her expreffion, of God not making her country.

Wife. No laugh, why laugh me? This no thing to laugh.

HE was justly reproved by his wife, for the was more ferious than he at first.

W. A. That's true indeed; I will not laugh any more, my dear.

Wife. Why you fay you God makee all?

W. A. Yes, child, our God made the whole world, and you, and me, and all things; for he is the only true God, and there is no God but him; he lives for ever in heaven.

Wife. Why you no tell me long ago?

W. A. That's

W. A. That's true, indeed, but I have been a wicked wretch, and have not only forgotten to acquaint thee with any thing before, but have lived without God in the world myfelf.

Wife. What have you a great God in you country, you no know him? No fay O to him? No do good thing for him? That no poffible?

W. A. It is too true; though for all that we live as if there was no God in heaven, or that he had no power on earth.

Wife. But why God let you do fo? Why he no makee you good live?

W. A. It is all our own fault.

Wife. But you fay me he is great, much great, have much great power, can makee kill, when he will, why he no makee kill when you no ferve him? No fay O to him, no be good mans?

W. A. That is true; he might firike me dead, and I ought to expect it, for I have been a wicked wretch, that is true; but God is merciful, and does not deal with us as we deferve.

Wife. But

224 ADVENTURES OF

Wife. But then do you not tell God thankee for that too.

W. A. No, indeed I have not thanked God for his mercy, any more than I have feared God for his power.

Wife. Then you God no God; me no think believe he be fuch one, great much power, ftrong; no makee kill you, though you make him much angry.

W. A. What ! will my wicked life hinder you from believing in God ? What a dreadful creature am I; and what a fad truth is it, that the horrid lives of Christians hinders the conversion of heathens?

Wife. How me think you have great much God up there (fhe points up to heaven), and yet no do well, no do good thing; can he tell? Sure he no tell what you do?

W. A. Yes, yes, he knows and fees all things; he hears us fpeak, fees what we do, knows what we think, though we do not fpeak.

Wife. What ! he no hear you curfe, fwear, fpeak the great damn ?

W. A. Yes,

5

W. A. Yes, yes, he hears it all.

Wife. Where be then the muchee great power ftrong ?

W. A. He is merciful, that is all we can fay for it; and this proves him to be the true God; he is God and not man; and therefore we are not confumed.

HERE Will. Atkins told us he was ftruck with horror, to think how he could tell his wife fo clearly that God fees, and hears, and knows the fecret thoughts of the heart, and all that we do, and yet that he had dared to do all the vile things he had done.

Wife. Merciful ! What you call that ?

W. A. He is our father and maker, and he pities and spares us.

Wife. So then he never makee kill, never angry when you do wicked; then he no good himfelf, or no great able.

W. A. Yes, yes, my dear, he is infinitely good and infinitely great, and able to punifh too, and fometimes to fhew his juffice and vengeance, he Vol. II. Q lets lets fly his anger to deftroy finners and make examples; many are cut off in their fins.

Wife. But no makee kill you yet, then he tell you, may be, that he no makee you kill, fo you makee de bargain with him, you do bad thing, he no be angry at you when he be angry at other mans.

W. A. No indeed, my fins are all prefumptions upon his goodnefs; and he would be infinitely just if he destroyed me, as he has done other men.

Wife. Well, and yet no kill, no makee you dead : what you fay to him for that? You no tell him thankee for all that too?

W. A. I am an unthankful, ungrateful dog, that is true.

Wife. Why he no makee you much good better? You fay he makee you.

W. A. He made me as he made all the world; it is I have deformed myfelf and abufed his goodnefs, and made myfelf an abominable wretch.

Wife. I

Wife. I wifh you makee God know me, I no makee him angry, I no do bad wicked thing.

HERE Will. Atkins faid his heart funk within him, to hear a poor untaught creature defire to be taught to know God, and he fuch a wicked wretch that he could not fay one word to her about God, but what the reproach of his own carriage would make most irrational to her to believe; nay, that already she had told him, that she could not believe in God, because he that was fo wicked was not deftroyed.

W. A. My dear, you mean, you with I could teach you to know God, not God to know you, for he knows you already, and every thought in your heart.

Wife. Why then he know what I fay to you now; he know me with to know him: how fhall me know who makee me.

W. A. Poor creature, he must teach thee, I cannot teach thee; I will pray to him to teach thee to know him, and forgive me that I am unworthy to teach thee.

THE poor fellow was in fuch an agony at her defiring him to make her know God, and her Q 2 wifhing wishing to know him, that he faid, he fell down on his knees before her, and prayed to God to enlighten her mind with the faving knowledge of Jesus Christ, and to pardon his fins, and accept of his being the unworthy instrument of instructing her in the principles of religion: after which he fat down by her again, and their dialogue went on.

N. B. This was the time when we faw him kneel down, and hold up his hands.

Wife. What you put down the knee for ? What you hold up the hand for ? What you fay ? Who you fpeak to ? What is all that ?

W. A. My dear, I bow my knees in token of my fubmiffion to him that made me; I faid O to him, as you call it, and as you fay, your old men do to their idol Benamuckee; that is, I prayed to him.

Wife. What you fay O to him for?

W. A. I prayed to him to open your eyes, and your understanding that you may know him, and be accepted by him.

Wife. Can he do that too?

W. A. Yes,

ROBINSON CRUSOE. 229

W. A. Yes, he can, he can do all things.

Wife. But now he hear what you fay?

W. A. Yes, he has bid us pray to him, and promifed to hear us.

Wife. Bid you pray ? When he bid you ? How he bid you ? What ! you hear him fpeak ?

W. A. No, we do not hear him fpeak, but he has revealed himfelf many ways to us.

HERE he was at a great loss to make her understand, that God has revealed himself to us by his word, and what his word was: but at last he told it her thus:

W. A. God has fpoken to fome good men in former days, even from heaven, by plain words; and God has infpired good men by his fpirit; and they have written all his laws down in a book.

Wife. Me no underftand that, where is book?

W. A. Alas, my poor creature, I have not this book; but I hope I shall one time or other get it for you, and help you to read it.

230

HERE he embraced her with great affection; but with inexpreffible grief, that he had not a bible.

Wife. But how you make mme know that God teachee them to write that book?

W. A. By the fame rule that we know him to be God.

Wife. What rule, what way you know him ?

W. A. Becaufe he teaches and commands nothing but what is good, righteous, and holy, and tends to make us perfectly good, as well as perfectly happy; and becaufe he forbids and commands us to avoid all that is wicked, that is evil in itfelf, or evil in its confequence.

Wife. That me would underftand, that me fain fee; if he teachee all good thing, forbid all wicked thing, he reward all good thing, punifh all wicked thing, he makee all good thing, he give all thing, he hear me when I fay O to him, as you go do juft now; he makee me good, if I wifh be good, he fpare me, no makee kill me, when I no be good: all this you fay he do, yet he be great God; me take, think, believe him to be great God; me fay O to him with you my dear. dear. Here the poor man could forbear no longer, but raifed her up, made her kneel by him, and he prayed to God aloud to inftruct her in the knowledge of himfelf by his fpirit, and that by fome good providence, if poffible, fhe might fome time or other come to have a bible, that fhe might read the word of God, and be taught by it to know him. This was the time that we faw him lift her up by the hand, and faw him kneel down by her as above.

THEY had feveral other difcourfes it feems after this, too long to fet down here, and particularly fhe made him promife, that fince he confeffed his own life had been a wicked abominable courfe of provocations against God, that he would reform it, and not make God angry any more, least he should make him dead, as she called it, and then she should be left alone, and never be taught to know this God better; and least he should be miserable, as he had told her wicked men should be after death.

THIS was a ftrange account, and very affecting to us both, but particularly to the young clergyman; he was indeed wonderfully furprized with it, but under the greatest affliction imaginable, that he could not talk to her, that he could not speak English to make her understand him; Q4 and and as the fpoke but very broken English he could not understand her; however, he turned himself to me, and told me, that he believed that there must be more to do with this woman than to marry her: I did not understand him at first, but at length he explained himfelf, viz. That the ought to be baptized.

I AGREED with him in that part readily, and was for going about it prefently; No, no, hold Sir, faid he, though I would have her be baptized by all means, yet I muft obferve that W. Atkins, her hufband, has indeed brought her in a wonderful manner to be willing to embrace a religious life, and has given her juft ideas of the being of a God; of his power, juftice, mercy; yet I defire to know of him, if he has faid any thing to her of Jefus Chrift, and of the falvation of finners; of the nature of faith in him, and redemption by him, of the holy fpirit, the refurrection, the laft judgment, and a future flate.

I CALLED Will. Atkins again, and afked him; but the poor fellow fell immediately into tears, and told us he had faid fomething to her of all those things, but that he was himself fo wicked a creature, and his own conficence fo reproached him with his horrid ungodly life, that he trembled at the apprehensions, that her knowledge of him him fhould leffen the attention fhe fhould give to those things, and make her rather contemn religion than receive it: but he was affured, he faid, that her mind was fo disposed to receive due impressions of all those things, that if I would but discourse with her she would make it appear to my fatisfaction, that my labour would not be lost upon her.

ACCORDINGLY I called her in, and placing myfelf as interpreter between my religious prieft and the woman, I intreated him to begin with her, but fure fuch a fermon was never preached by a popifh prieft in thefe later ages of the world; and, as I told him, I thought he had all the zeal, all the knowledge, all the fincerity of a chriftian without the error of a Roman Catholic, and that I took him to be fuch a clergyman as the Roman bifhops were before the church of Rome, affumed fpiritual fovereignty over the confciences of men.

IN a word, he brought the poor woman to embrace the knowledge of Chrift, and of redemption by him not with wonder and aftonifhment only, as fhe did the first notions of a God, but with joy and faith, with an affection and a furprizing degree of understanding, fcarce to be imagined, much lefs to be expressed, and at her own request the was baptized.

WHEN he was preparing to baptize her, I en. treated him that he would perform that office with fome caution, that the man might not perceive he was of the Roman church, if poffible. becaufe of other ill confequences which might attend a difference among us in that very religion. which we were inftructing the other in. He told me, that as he had no confectated chapel, nor proper things for the office, I fhould fee he would do it in a manner that I fhould not know by it that he was a Roman catholic myself, if I had not known it before; and fo he did, for faying only fome words over to himfelf in Latin, which I could not understand, he poured a whole difhful of water upon the woman's head, pronouncing in French very loud, Mary, which was the name her hufband defired me to give her, for I was her godfather, I baptize thee in the name of the father, and of the fon, and of the holy ghoft; fo that none could know any thing by it what religion he was of. He gave the benediction afterwards in Latin, but either Will. Atkins did not know but it was in French, or elfe did not take notice of it at that time.

As foon as this was over, we married them; and after the marriage was over he turned himfelf to Will. Atkins, and in a very affectionate manner exhorted him, not only to perfevere in that that good difpolition he was in, but to fupport the convictions that were upon him by a refolution to reform his life; told him it was in vain to fay he repented if he did not forfake his crimes; reprefented to him how God had honoured him with being the inftrument of bringing his wife to the knowledge of the chriftian religion, and that he fhould be careful he did not difhonour the grace of God, and that if he did, he would fee the heathen a better chriftian than himfelf, the favage converted, and the inftrument caft away.

234

Hz faid a great many good things to them both, and then recommending them to God's goodnefs, gave them the benediction again, I repeating every thing to them in English, and thus ended the ceremony. I think it was the most pleafant agreeable day to me that ever I passed in my whole life.

Bur my clergyman had not done yet, his thoughts hung continually upon the conversion of the feven and thirty favages, and fain he would have ftayed upon the island to have undertaken it; but I convinced him first, that his undertaking was impracticable in itself; and fecondly, that perhaps I would put it into a way of being done done in his abfence to his fatisfaction; of which by and by.

235

236 ADVENTURES OF

HAVING thus brought the affairs of the ifland to a narrow compass, I was preparing to go on board the fhip, when the young man I had taken out of the famifhed fhip's company came to me, and told me he understood I had a clergyman with me, and that I had caufed the Englishmen to be married to the favages; that he had a match too, which he defired might be finished before I went, between two christians, which he hoped would not be difagreeable to me.

I KNEW this must be the young woman who was his mother's fervant, for there was no other chriftian woman on the ifland, fo I began to perfuade him not to do any thing of that kind rafhly, or because he found himself in this solitary circumftance. I reprefented to him that he had fome confiderable fubftance in the world, and good friends as I underftood by himfelf and by his maid alfo; that the maid was not only poor and a fervant, but was unequal to him, fhe being fix or feven and twenty years old, and he not above feventeen or eighteen; that he might very probably with my affiftance make a remove from this wildernefs and come into his own country again, and that then it would be a thousand to one one but he would repent his choice, and the diflike of that circumstance might be difadvantageous to both. I was going to fay more but he interrupted, fmiling, and told me, with a great deal of modefty, that I miftook in my gueffes, that he had nothing of that kind in his thoughts, and he was very glad to hear that I had an intent of putting them in a way to fee their country again, and nothing fhould have put him upon flaying there, but that the voyage I was going was fo exceeding long and hazardous, and would carry him quite out of the reach of all his friends; that he had nothing to defire of me but that I would fettle him in fome little property in the ifland where he was, give him a fervant or two, and fome few neceffaries, and he would fettle himfelf here like a planter, waiting the good time when, if ever I returned to England, I would redeem him, and hoped I would not be unmindful of him when I came to England; that he would give me fome letters to his friends in London, to let them know how good I had been to him, and in what part of the world, and what circumstance I had left him in : that he promised me, that whenever I redeemed him, the plantation and all the improvements he had made upon it, let the value be what it would, fhould be wholly mine.

His discourse wasvery prettily delivered, con. fidering his youth, and was the more agreeable to me, because he told me positively the match was not for himfelf. I gave him all poffible affurances, that if I lived to come fafe to England. I would deliver his letters and do his bufinefs effectually, and that he might depend I should never forget the circumstance I had left him in: but still I was impatient to know who was the perfon to be married, upon which he told me it was my Jack of all trades and his maid Sufan. I was most agreeably furprized when he named the match, for indeed I thought it very fuitable. The character of that man I have given already, and as for the maid, fhe was a very honeft, modeft, fober, and religious young woman, had a very good share of sense, was agreeable enough in her perfon, fpoke very handfomely and to the purpofe, always with decency and good manners, and neither too backward to fpeak when requifite, nor impertinently forward when it was not her bufinefs; very handy and houfewifely, an excellent manager, fit indeed to have been governefs to the whole island, and the knew very well how to behave in every respect.

THE match being proposed in this manner, we married them the same day, and as I was father at the altar, as I may say, and gave her away, so I gave I gave her a portion, for I appointed her and her hufband a handfome, large, fpace of ground for their plantation, and indeed this match, and the propofal the young gentleman made, to give him a fmall property in the ifland, put me upon parcelling it out amongft them, that they might not quarrel afterwards about their fituation.

THIS fharing out the land to them I left to W. Atkins, who was now grown a fober, grave, managing fellow, perfectly reformed, exceeding pious and religious, and, as far as I may be allowed to fpeak positively in fuch a cafe, I verily believe he was a true penitent.

Hz divided things fo juftly, and fo much to every one's fatisfaction, that they only defired one general writing under my hand for the whole, which I caufed to be drawn up and figned and fealed to them, fetting out the bounds and fituation of every man's plantation, and teftifying that I gave them thereby feverally a right to the whole poffeffion and inheritance of the refpective plantations or farms, with their improvements, to them and their heirs, referving all the reft of the ifland as my own property, and a certain rent for every particular plantation after eleven years, if I, or any one from me, or in my name, came to demand it, producing an attested copy of the fame writing.

240 ADVENTURES OF

As to the government and laws among them, I told them I was not capable of giving them better rules than they were able to give themfelves, only made them promife me to live in love and good neighbourhood with one another, and fo I prepared to leave them.

ONE thing I must not omit, and that is, that being now fettled in a kind of commonwealth among themfelves, and having much bufinefs in hand, it was but odd to have feven and thirty Indians live in a nook of the ifland independent, and indeed unemployed; for, excepting the providing themfelves food, which they had difficulty enough in too, fometimes they had no manner of bufinefs or property to manage. I propofed therefore to the governor Spaniard, that he should go to them, with Friday's father, and propofe to them to remove, and either plant for themfelves, or take them into their feveral families as fervants, to be maintained for their labour, but without being abfolute flaves, for I would not admit them to make them flaves by force by any means, becaufe they had their liberty given them by capitulation, and as it were articles of furrender, which they ought not to break.

Тнбч

THEY most willingly embraced the proposal, and came all very chearfully along with him; fo we allotted them land and plantations, which three or four accepted of, but all the reft chose to be employed as fervants in the feveral families we had fettled : and thus my colony was in a manner fettled as follows: the Spaniards poffeffed my original habitation, which was the capital city, and extended their plantations all along the fide of the brook, which made the creek that I have fo often defcribed, as far as my bower; and as they increased their culture it went always eastward. The English lived in the north east part, where Will. Atkins and his comrades began, and came on fouthward and fouth-weft, towards the back part of the Spaniards; and every plantation had a great addition of land to take in, if they found occafion, fo that they need not joftle one another for want of room.

ALL the east end of the island was left uninhabited, that if any of the favages should come on shore there only for their usual customary barbarities, they might come and go if they disturbed nobody, nobody would disturb them; and no doubt but they were often ashore and went away again, for I never heard that the planters were ever attacked or disturbed any more.

Vol. II.

It now came into my thoughts, that I had hinted to my friend the clergyman, that the work of converting the favages might perhaps be fet on foot in his abfence to his fatisfaction; and I told him that now I thought it was put in a fair way, for the favages being thus divided among the chriftians, if they would but every one of them do their part with thofe which came under their hands, I hoped it might have a very good effect.

He agreed prefently in that, if, faid he, they will do their part; but how, fays he, shall we obtain that of them? I told him we would call them all together and leave it in charge with them or go to them one by one, which he thought beft; to we divided it, he to fpeak to the Spaniards, who were all papifts, and I to the Englifb, who were all protestants; and we recommended it earneftly to them, and made them promife that they would never make any diffinction of papift or protestant in their exhorting the favages to turn chriftians, but teach them the general knowledge of the true God, and of their faviour Jefus Chrift; and they likewife promifed us, that they would never have any differences or difputes one with another about religion.

242

WHEN

WHEN I came to Will. Atkins's houfe, I may call it fo, (for fuch a houfe, or fuch a piece of bafket-work I believe was not ftanding in the world again) there I found the young woman I have mentioned above, and Will. Atkins's wife were become intimates; and this prudent religious young woman had perfected the work Will. Atkins had begun; and though it was not above four days after what I have related, yet the newbaptized favage woman was made fuch a chriftian as I have feldom heard of in all my obfervation or converfation in the world.

It came next into my mind, in the morning before I went to them, that amongft all the needful things I had to leave with them I had not left them a bible, in which I fhewed myfelf lefs confidering for them than my good friend the widow was for me when fhe fent me the cargo of an hundred pounds from Lifbon, where fhe packed up three bibles and a prayer-book. However, the good woman's charity had a greater extent than ever fhe imagined, for they were referved for the comfort and inftruction of those that made much better use of them than I had done.

I TOOK one of the bibles in my pocket, and when I came to Will. Atkins's tent or houfe, and found the young woman and Atkins's baptized R 2 wife wife had been discoursing of religion together, for Will. Atkins's told it me with a great deal of joy, I asked if they were together now, and he faid yes; fo I went into the houfe and he with me, and we found them together very earneft in discourse. O, Sir, fays Will. Atkins, when God has finners to reconcile to himfelf and aliens to bring home, he never wants a meffenger; my wife has got a new inftructor; I knew I was unworthy as I was incapable of that work; that young woman has been fent hither from heaven, fhe is enough to convert a whole island of favages. The young woman blufhed, and rofe up to go away, but I defired her to fit still; I told her fhe had a good work upon her hands, and I hoped God would blefs her in it.

WE talked a little, and I did not perceive they had any book among them, though I did not afk, but I put my hand in my pocket and pulled out my bible; here, fays I to Atkins, I have brought you an affiftant that perhaps you had not before. The man was fo confounded that he was not able to speak for some time, but recovering himfelf he takes it with both his hands and turning to his wife, here, my dear, fays he, did not I tell you our God, though he lives above, could hear what we faid? Here's the book I prayed for when you and I kneeled down under the

ĩ

244

the bufh; now God has heard us and fent it. When he had faid fo the man fell into fuch tranfports of paffionate joy, that between the joy of having it and giving God thanks for it the tears ran down his face like a child that was crying.

THE woman was furprized, and was like to have run into a miftake that none of us were aware of, for the firmly believed God had fent the book upon her husband's petition. It's true, that providentially it was fo, and might be taken fo in a confequent fense; but I believe it would have been no difficult matter at that time to have perfuaded the poor woman to have believed that an express meffenger came from heaven on purpose to bring that individual book; but it was too ferious a matter to fuffer any delution to take place; fo I turned to the young woman and told her, we did not defire to impose upon the new convert, in her first and more ignorant underftanding of things, and begged her to explain to her, that God may be very properly faid to answer our petitions, when in the course of his providence fuch things are in a particular manner brought to pass as we petitioned for, but we did not expect returns from heaven in a miraculous and a particular manner, and that it is our mercy that it is not fo.

This the young woman did afterwards effectually, fo that there was, I affure you, no priestcraft used here, and I should have thought it one of the most unjustifiable frauds in the world to have had it fo; but the furprize of joy upon Will. Atkins is really not to be expressed, and there we may be fure there was no delution. Sure no man was ever more thankful in the world for any thing of its kind than he was for the bible; nor, I believe, never any man was glad of a bible from a better principle; and though he had been a most profligate creature, head-strong, furious, and defperately wicked, yet this man is a flanding rule to us all for the well inftructing children, viz. that parents should never give over to teach and inftruct, or ever defpair of the fuccefs of their endeavours, let the children be ever fo refractory, or to appearance infenfible of instruction; for if ever God in his providence touches the confcience of fuch, the force of their education returns upon them, and the early inftruction of parents is not loft, though it may have been many years laid afleep, but fome time or other they may find the benefit of it. Thus it was with this poor man, however ignorant he was of religion and christian knowledge, he found he had fome to do with now more ignorant than himfelf, and that the leaft part of the infruction flruction of his good father, that now came to his mind, was of use to him.

246

Among the reft it occurred to him, he faid how his father ufed to infift fo much on the inexpreffible value of the bible, the privilege and bleffing of it to nations, families, and perfons, but he never entertained the leaft notion of the worth of it till now, when being to talk to heathens, favages, and barbarians, he wanted the help of the written oracle for his affiftance.

THE young woman was glad of it also for the prefent occasion, though she had one, and so had the youth on board our ship among their goods, which were not yet brought on shore. And now, having said so many things of this young woman, I cannot omit telling one story more of her and myself, which has something in it very informing and remarkable.

I HAVE related to what extremity the poor young woman was reduced, how her miftrefs was flarved to death and died on board that unhappy fhip we met at fea, and how the whole fhip's company was reduced to the laft extremity. The gentlewoman and her fon and this maid were first hardly used as to provisions, and at last totally R 4 neglected neglected and ftarved, that is to fay, brought to the laft extremity of hunger.

ONE day being difcourfing with her on the extremities they fuffered, Iafked her if fhe could defcribe by what fhe had felt what it was to flarve, and how it appeared? She told me, fhe believed fhe could, and fhe told her tale very diffinctly, thus.

FIRST, Sir, faid fhe, we had for fome days fared exceeding hard, and fuffered very great hunger, but at last we were wholly without food of any kind, except fugar and a little wine and water. The first day, after I had received no food at all, I found myfelf towards evening firft empty and fickish at the ftomach, and nearer night much inclined to yawning and fleepy. I lay down on a couch in the great cabbin to fleep, and flept about three hours, and awaked a little refreshed, having taken a glass of wine when I lay down; after being about three hours awake, it being about five o'clock in the morning, I found myfelf empty and my ftomach fickifh and lay down again but could not fleep at all, being very faint and ill; and thus I continued all the fecond day, with a ftrange variety, first hungry, then fick again, with reachings to vomit: the fecond night, being obliged to go to bed again without any food, more than a draught of fair water, water, and, being afleep, I dreamed I was at Barbadoes, and that the market was mightily flocked with provisions; that I bought fome for my miftrefs, and went and dined very heartily:

I THOUGHT my ftomach was as full after this as any would have been after a good dinner; but when I awaked I was exceedingly funk in my fpirits to find myfelf in the extremity of famine. The laft glafs of wine we had I drank, and put fugar in it, becaufe of its having fome fpirit to fupply nourifhment; but there being no fubftance in the ftomach for the digefting office to work upon, I found the only effect of the wine was, to raife difagreeable fumes from the ftomach into the head, and I lay, as they told me, ftupid and fenfelefs, as one drunk, for fome time.

The third day in the morning, after a night of ftrange and confused inconfistent dreams, and rather dozing than fleeping, I waked ravenous and furious with hunger, and I question, had not my understanding returned and conquered it, I fay, I question whether if I had been a mother, and had had a little child with me, its life would have been fafe or not.

THIS lasted about three hours, during which time I was twice raging mad as any creature in Bedlam, Bedlam, as my young mafter told me, and as he can now inform you.

In one of these fits of lunacy or distraction, I fell down and struck my face against the corner of a palat-bed in which my mistress lay, and with the blow the blood gushed out of my nose, and the cabin-boy bringing me a little bason I fat down and bled into it a great deal, and as the blood came from me I came to myself, and the violence of the flame or fever I was in abated, and fo did the ravenous part of the hunger.

THEN I grew fick and reached to vomit, but could not, for I had nothing in my ftomach to bring up. After I had bled fome time I fwooned, and they all believed I was dead, but I came to myfelf foon after, and then had a most dreadful pain in my ftomach, not to be defcribed, not like the cholic, but a gnawing, eager pain for food, and towards the night it went off with a kind of earneft withing or longing for food, fomething like, as I fuppofe, the longing of a woman with child. I took another draught of water with fugar in it, but my ftomach loathed the fugat and brought it all up again; then I took a draught of water without fugar and that ftayed with me, and I laid me down upon the bed, praying most heartily, that it would pleafe God to take me away, away; and composing my mind in hopes of it, I flumbered awhile, and then waking, thought myfelf dying, being light with vapours from an empty ftomach; I recommended my foul then to God, and earnestly wished that fomebody would throw me into the fea.

ALL this while my miftrefs lay by me juft as I thought expiring, but bore it with much more patience than I, gave the laft bit of bread fhe had left to her child, my young mafter, who would not have taken it, but fhe obliged him to eat it; and I believe it faved his life.

Towards the morning I flept again, and firft when I awaked, I fell into a violent paffion of crying, and after that had a fecond fit of violent hunger; I got up ravenous, and in a moft dreadful condition; had my miftrefs been dead, as much as I loved her, I am certain, I fhould have eaten a piece of her flefh, with as much relifh, and as unconcerned, as ever I did eat the flefh of any creature appointed for food; and once or twice I was going to bite my own arm: at laft I faw the bafon in which was the blood I had bled at my nofe the day before; I ran to it, and fwallowed it with fuch hafte, and fuch a greedy appetite, as if I wondered no body had taken it before, and afraid it fhould be taken from me now.

Тноисн

252

THOUGH after it was down, the thoughts of it filled me with horror, yet it checked the fit of hunger, and I drank a draught of fair water, and was composed and refreshed for some hours after it. This was the fourth day, and thus I held it, 'till towards night, when within the compass of three hours, I had all the feveral circumstances over again, one after another, viz. fick, sleepy, eagerly hungry, pain in the stomach, then ravenous again, then fick, then lunatic, then crying, then ravenous again; and so every quarter of an hour, and my strength wasted exceedingly: at night I laid me down, having no comfort, but in the hope that I should die before morning.

ALL this night I had no fleep; but the hunger was now turned into a difeafe; and I had a terrible cholic and griping, by wind inftead of food, having found its way into the bowels; and in this condition I lay till morning, when I was furprized with the cries and lamentations of my young mafter, who called out to me that his mother was dead : I lifted myfelf up a little, for I had not ftrength to rife, but found fhe was not dead, though fhe was able to give very little figns of life.

I HAD then fuch convultions in my ftomach, for want of fome fuftenance, that I cannot defcribe, fcribe, with fuch frequent throws and pangs of appetite, that nothing but the tortures of death can imitate; and in this condition I was when I heard the feamen above cry out, A fail, a fail, and holoe and jump about, as if they were diftracted.

I was not able to get off from the bed, and my miftrefs much lefs; and my young mafter was fo fick, that I thought he had been expiring; fo we could not open the cabbin door, or get any account what it was that occafioned fuch a combuftion, nor had we any converfation with the fhip's company for two days: they having told us, that they had not a mouthful of any thing to eat in the fhip; and they told us afterwards, they thought we had been dead.

Ir was this dreadful condition we were in when you were fent to fave our lives; and how you found us, Sir, you know as well as I, and better too.

THIS was her own relation, and is fuch a diffinct account of flarving to death, as I confefs, I never met with, and was exceeding entertaining to me; I am the rather apt to believe it to be a true account, becaufe the youth gave me an account of a good part of it; though I muft own, own, not fo diffinct and fo feeling as his maid: and the rather, because it feems his mother fed him at the price of her own life; but the poor maid, though her conftitution being flronger than that of her miftrefs, who was in years, and a weakly woman too, fhe might ftruggle harder with it, I fay, the poor maid might be fuppofed to feel the extremity fomething fooner than her mistrefs, who might be allowed to keep the last-bit fomething longer than she parted with any to relieve the maid; no queffion, , as the cafe is here related, if our ship, or some other, had not fo providentially met them, a few days more would have ended all their lives, unless they had prevented it by eating one another; and that, even as their cafe flood, would have ferved them but a little while, they being 500 leagues from any land or any poffibility of relief, other than in the miraculous manner it happened : but this is by the way: I return to my disposition of things among the people.

AND first, it is to be observed here, that for many reasons I did not think fit to let them know any thing of the floop I had framed, and which I thought of setting up among them; for I found, at least at my first coming, such seeds of divisions among them, that I faw plainly had I set up the floop, and left it among them, they would upon every light disgust have separated, and gone away away from one another, or perhaps have turned pirates, and fo made the ifland a den of thieves, inflead of a plantation of fober and religious people, fo as I intended it; nor did I leave the two pieces of brafs cannon that I had on board, or the two quarter-deck guns that my nephew took extraordinary for the fame reafon: I thought it was enough to qualify them for a defenfive war againft any that fhould invade them, but not to fet them up for an offenfive war, or to encouragé them to go abroad to attack others, which in the end would only bring ruin and deftruction upon them; I referved the floop therefore and the guns for their fervice another way, as I fhall obferve in its place.

HAVING now done with the ifland, I left them all in good circumftances and in a flourifhing condition, and went on board my fhip again the faxth of May, having been about five and twenty days among them; and as they were all refolved to flay upon the ifland till I came to remove them, I promifed to fend them farther relief from the Brafils, if I could poffibly find an opportunity; and particularly I promifed to fend them fome cattle, fuch as fheep, hogs, and cows; for as to the two cows and calves which I brought from England, we had been obliged by the length of our voyage to kill them at fea, for want of hay to feed them. THE next day, giving them a falute of five guns at parting, we fet fail, and arrived at the bay of All-faints in the Brafils in about 22 days, meeting nothing remarkable in our paffage but this, that about three days after we failed, being becalmed, and the current fetting firong to the E. N. E. running as it were into a bay or gulph on the land fide, we were driven fomething out of our courfe, and once or twice our men cryed land to the eaftward; but whether it was the continent or iflands we could not tell by any means.

But the third day towards evening, the fea fmooth and the weather calm, we faw the fea as it were covered towards the land, with fomething very black, not being able to difcover what it was, 'till after fome time, our chief mate going up the main fhrouds a little way, and looking at them with a profpective, cried out it was an army. I could not imagine what he meant by an army, and thwarted him a little haftily: nay, Sir, fays he, don't be angry, for 'tis an army, and a fleet too; for I believe there are a thoufand canoes, and you may fee them paddle along, for they are coming towards us apace.

I was a little furprized then indeed, and fo was my nephew, the captain; for he had heard fuch terrible flories of them in the ifland, and having having never been in those feas before, that he could not tell what to think of it, but faid, two or three times, we fhould all be devoured. I must confess, confidering we were becalmed, and the current set ftrong towards the shore, I liked it the worfe: however, I bad them not be afraid, but bring the ship to an anchor, as soon as we came so near to know that we must engage them.

THE weather continued calm, and they came on apace towards us: fo I gave order to come to an anchor, and furl all our fails: as for the favages, I told them they had nothing to fear but fire, and therefore they fhould get their boats out and faften them, one clofe by the head, and the other by the ftern, and man them both well, and wait the iffue in that pofture: this I did, that the men in the boats might be ready with fkeets and buckets to put out any fire thefe favages would endeavour to fix to the outfide of the fhip.

In this pofture we lay by for them, and in a little while they came up with us: but never was fuch a horrid fight feen by Chriftians; though my mate was much miftaken in his calculation of their number, yet when they came up we reckoned about a hundred and twenty-fix; fome of them had fixteen or feventeen men in them, and fome more, and the leaft fix or feven.

Vol. II.

When

257

WHEN they came nearer to us, they feemed to be ftruck with wonder and aftonifhment, as at a fight which they had doubtlefs never feen before; nor could they at firft, as we afterwards underflood, know what to make of us: they came boldly up however very near to us, and feemed to go about to row round us; but we called to our men in the boats not to let them come too near them.

THIS very order brought us to an engagement with them without our defigning it; for five or fix of the large canoes came fo near our longboat, that our men beckoned with their hands to keep them back, which they underftood very well, and went back; but at their retreat, about 50 arrows came on board us from those boats, and one of our men in the long-boat was very much wounded.

HOWEVER, I called to them not to fire by any means; but we handed down fome deal boards into the boat, and the carpenter prefently fet up a kind of fence like wafte boards, to cover them from the arrows of the favages, if they fhould fhoot again.

About half an hour afterwards they all came up in a body a-ftern of us, and fo near as that we could could eafily difcern what they were, though we could not tell their defign; and I eafily found they were fome of my old friends, the fame fort of favages that I had been used to engage with; and in a fhort time more they rowed a little farther out to fea, till they came directly broadfide with us, and then rowed down strait upon us, till they came fo near that they could hear us fpeak : upon this I ordered all my men to keep clofe, left they fhould fhoot any more arrows, and made all our guns ready; but being fo near as to be within hearing, I made Friday go out upon the deck, and call out aloud to them in his language to to know what they meant; which accordingly he did: whether they understood him or not, that I know not, but as foon as he had called to them, fix of them who were in the foremost or nighest boat to us, turned their canoes from us, and stooping down shewed us their naked backfides, just as if in English, faving your prefence. they had bid us kifs ----- : whether this was a defiance or challenge we know not; or whether it was done in mere contempt, or as a fignal to the reft, but immediately Friday cried out they. were going to fhoot, and, unhappily for him poor fellow, they let fly about 300 of their arrows, and, to my inexpreffible grief, killed poor Friday, no other man being in their fight. The poor fellow was fhot with no lefs than three arrows, and about S 2 thiee three more fell very near him; fuch unlucky markimen they were.

260 ADVENTURES OF

I was fo enraged at the lofs of my old truffy fervant and companion, that I immediately ordered five guns to be loaded with fmall fhot, and and four with great, and gave them fuch a broadfide as they had never heard in their lives before, to be fure. They were not above half a cable length off, when we fired; and our gunners took their aim fo well that three or four of their canoes were overfet, as we had reafon to believe, by one fhot only.

THE ill manners of turning up their bare backfides to us gave us no great offence; neither did I know for certain, whether that which would país for the greatest contempt among us, might be underftood fo by them, or not; therefore, in return. I had only refolved to have fired four or five guns at them with powder only, which I knew would fright them fufficiently : but when they shot at us directly with all the fury they were capable of, and efpecially as they had killed. my poor Friday, whom I fo entirely loved and valued, and who indeed fo well deferved it; I thought myself not only justifiable before God and man, but would have been very glad if I could 5 could have overfet every canoe there, and drowned every one of them.

I CAN neither tell how many we killed or how many we wounded at this broadfide, but fure fuch a fright and hurry never was feen among fuch a multitude; there were thirteen or fourteen of their canoes fplit and overfet in all, and the men all fet a fwimming : the reft, frighted out of their wits, fcoured away as faft as they could, taking but little care to fave thofe whofe boats were fplit or fpoiled with our fhot : fo I fuppofe they were many of them loft; and our men took up one poor fellow fwimming for their life, above an hour after they were all gone.

Our finall fhot from our cannon muft needs kill and wound a great many; but, in fhort, we never knew any thing how it went with them, for they fled fo faft, that in three hours, or thereabouts, we could not fee above three or four ftraggling canoes; nor did we ever fee the reft any more, for a breeze of wind fpringing up the fame evening, we weighed and fet fail for the Brafils.

WE had a prifoner indeed, but the creature was fo fullen that he would neither eat or fpeak, and we all fancied he would ftarve himfelf to death: but I took a way to cure him, for I made S 3 them them take him and turn him into the long-boat, and make him believe they would tofs him into the fea again, and fo leave him where they found him, if he would not fpeak : nor would that do, but they really did throw him into the fea, and came away from him; and then he followed them, for he fwam like a cork, and called to them in his tongue, though they knew not one word of what he faid : however, at laft they took him in again, and then he began to be more tractable; nor did I ever defign they fhould drown him.

WE were now under fail again ; but I was the most disconfolate creature alive for want of my man Friday, and would have been very glad to have gone back to the ifland, to have taken one of the reft from thence for my occafion, but it could not be, fo we went on. We had one prifoner as I have faid, and it was a long time before we could make him understand any thing ; but in time our men taught him fome English, and he began to be a little tractable; afterwards we inquired what country he came from, but could make nothing of what he faid, for his fpeech was fo odd, all gutturals, and he fpoke in the throat in fuch a hollow odd manner, that we could never form a word after him; and we were all of opinion that they might speak that language as well if they

they were gagged as otherwife: nor could we perceive that they had any occasion either for teeth, tongue, lips or pallat, but formed their words just as a hunting horn forms a tune with an open throat : he told us, however, fome time after, when we had taught him to fpeak a little English, that they were going with their kings to fight a great battle. When he faid kings, we afked him how many kings? He faid they were five nation : (we could not make him understand the plural S) and that they all joined to go against two nation. We asked him, what made them come up to us ? He faid, to makee te great wonder look : where it is to be obferved, that all those natives, as also those of Africa, when they learn English, they always add two e's, at the end of the words where we use one, and they place the accent upon them, as makee, takee, and the like, and we could not break them of it; nay, I could hardly make Friday leave it off, though at last he did.

AND now I name the poor fellow once more, I must take my last leave of him: Poor honest Friday! we buried him with all the decency and folemnity poffible, by putting him into a coffin and throwing him into the fea; and I caufed them to fire eleven guns for him : and fo ended the life of

264 ADVENTURES OF

of the most grateful, faithful, honest and most affectionate fervant that ever man had.

WE went now away with a fair wind for Brafil, and in about twelve days time we made land in the latitude of five degrees fouth of the line, being the north eaftermost land of all that part of America. We kept on S. by E. in fight of the shore four days, when we made cape St. Augustine, and in three days came to an anchor off the bay of All Saints, the old place of my deliverance, from whence came both my good and evil fate.

NEVER fhip came to this port that had lefs bufiness than I had, and yet it was with great difficulty that we were admitted to hold the leaft correspondence on shore; not my partner himself, who was alive, and made a great figure among them, not my two merchants truftees, not the fame of my wonderful prefervation in the ifland, could obtain me that favour : but my partner remembering that I had given 500 moidores to the prior of the monastery of the Augustines, and 272 to the poor, went to the monastery, and obliged the prior that then was, to go to the governor and get leave for me perfonally, with the captain and one more; befides eight feamen, to come on fhore, and no more; and this upon condition abfolutely capitulated for, that we should not offer to land any any goods out of the ship, or to carry any person away without licence.

THEY were fo ftrict with us, as to landing any goods, that it was with extreme difficulty that I got on fhore three bales of English goods, fuch as fine broad cloths, ftuffs, and fome linen which I had brought for a prefent to my partner.

He was a very generous, open-hearted man, though like me, he came from a little at first; and though he knew not that I had the leaft defign of giving him any thing, he fent me on board a prefent of fresh provisions, wine and sweetmeats, worth above thirty moidores, including some tobacco, and three or four fine medals of gold : but I was even with him in my prefent, which, as I have faid, confifted of fine broad cloth, English stuffs, lace, and fine hollands; also I delivered him about the value of 1001, fterling, in the fame goods for other uses; and I obliged him to fet up the floop which I had brought with with me from England, as I have faid, for the ufe of my colony, in order to fend the refreshments I intended to my plantation.

ACCORDINGLY he got hands, and finished the sloop in a very few days, for she was already framed, and I gave the master of her such instructions ftructions as he could not mifs the place; nor did he mifs them, as I had an account from my partner afterwards. I got him foon loaded with the fmall cargo I fent them; and one of our feaman, that had been on fhore with me there, offered to go with the floop, and fettle there upon my letter to the governor Spaniard, to allot him a fufficient quantity of land for a plantation, and giving him fome cloaths and tools for his planting work, which he faid he underftood, having been an old planter at Maryland, and a buccaneer into the bargain.

I ENCOURAGED the fellow, by granting all he defired; and, as an addition, I gave him the favage which we had taken prifoner of war, to be his flave, and ordered the governor Spaniard to give him his fhare of every thing he wanted with the reft.

WHEN we came to fit this man out, my old partner told me there was a certain very honeft fellow, a Brafil planter of his acquaintance, who had fallen into the difpleafure of the church; I know not what the matter is with him; fays he, but on my confcience I think he is a heretic in his heart, and he has been obliged to conceal himfelf for fear of the inquifition; that he would be very glad of fuch an opportunity to make his efcape efcape with his wife and two daughters, and if I would let them go to my ifland, and allot them a plantation, he would give them a finall flock to begin with; for the officers of the inquifition had feized all his effects and eftate, and he had nothing left but a little houfhold fluff and two flaves: and adds he, though I hate his principles, yet I would not have him fall into their hands, for he would be affuredly burned alive if he does.

266

I GRANTED this prefently, and joined my Englishman with them, and we concealed the man, and his wife and daughters on board our ship, till the floop put out to go to sea, and then, having put all their goods on board the floop fome time before, we put them on board the floop, after he was got out of the bay.

OUR feaman was mightily pleafed with this new partner; and their flocks indeed were much alike rich in tools, in preparations, and a farm; but nothing to begin with, but as above: however they carried over with them, which was worth all the reft, fome materials for planting fugar canes, with fome plants of canes, which he, I mean the Portugal man, underflood very well.

Among

AMONG the reft of the fupplies fent my tenants in the ifland, I fent them by their floop three milch cows and five calves, about 22 hogs among them, three fows big with pig, two mares, and a ftonehorfe.

For my Spaniards, according to my promife, I engaged three Portugal women to go, and recommended it to them to marry them, and use them kindly. I could have procured more women, but I remembered that the poor perfecuted man had two daughters, and there were but five of the Spaniards that wanted, the reft had wives of their own, though in another country.

All this cargo arrived fafe, and as you may eafily fuppofe, were very welcome to my old inhabitants, who were now, with this addition, between fixty and feventy people, befides little children, of which there were a great many. I found letters at London from them all, by the way of Lifbon, when I came back to England, of which I fhall alfo take fome notice immediately.

I HAVE done now with my island, and all manner of difcourfe about it, and whoever reads the reft of my memorandums, would do well to turn his thoughts entirely from it, and expect to read of of the follies of an old man not warned by his own harms, much lefs by those of other men, to beware of the like; not cooled by almost forty years miseries and disappointments; not fatisfied with prosperity beyond expectation, nor made cautious by afflictions and distress beyond imitation.

I HAD no more bufiness to go to the East Indies than a man at full liberty has to go to the turnkey at Newgate and defire him to lock him up among the prifoners there and starve him. Had I taken a fmall veffel from England and went directly to the ifland; had I loaded her as I did the other veffel, with all the neceffaries for the plantation and for my people, took a patent from the government here to have fecured my property in fubjection only to that of England; had I carried over cannon and ammunition, fervants and people to plant, and taken pofferfion of the place, fortified and ftrengthened it in the name of England, and increafed it with people, as I might eafily have done; had I then fettled myfelf there and fent the fhip back loaden with good rice, as I might also have done in fix months time, and ordered my friends to have fitted her out again for our fupply; had I done this, and flayed there myfelf; I had at leaft acted like a man of common fenfe'; but I was poffeffed with a wandering fpirit, fpirit, scorned all advantages; I pleased myself with being the patron of the people I placed there, and doing for them in a kind of haughty majestic way, like an old patriarchal monarch, providing for them as if I had been father of the whole family, as well as of the plantation; but I never fo much as pretended to plant in the name of any government or nation, or to acknowledge any prince, or to call my people fubiects to any one nation more than another; nay, I never fo much as gave the place a name, but I left it as I found it, belonging to nobody, and the people under no discipline or government but my own; who, though I had influence over them as a father and benefactor, had no authority or power to act or command one way or other, farther than voluntary confent moved them to comply; yet even this, had I stayed there would have done well enough, but as I rambled from them and came there no more, the last letters I had from any of them was by my partner's means, who afterwards fent another floop to the place, and who fent me word, though I had not the letter till I got to London, feveral years after it was written; that they went on but poorly, were malecontent with their long flay there; that W. Atkins was dead; that five of the Spaniards were come away, and though they had not been much molefted by the favages yet they had fome fkirmifhes mifhes with them, and that they begged of him to write to me, to think of the promife I had made to fetch them away that they might fee their country again before they died.

But I was gone a wild goofe chafe indeed, and they that will have any more of me muft be content to follow me into a new variety of follies, hardfhips, and wild adventures, wherein the juffice of providence may be duly obferved; and we may fee how eafily heaven can gorge us with our own defires, make the ftrongeft of our wifhes be our affliction, and punifh usmoft feverely with those very things which we think it would be our utmoft happines to be allowed in. Whether I had bufines or no bufines away I went; tis no time now to enlarge upon the reason or abfurdity of my own conduct, but to come to the history, I was embarked for the voyage, and the voyage I went.

I SHALL only add a word or two concerning my honeft popifh clergyman, for let their opinion of us and all other heretics in general, as they call us, be as uncharitable as it may, I verily believe this man was very fincere and wifhed the good of all men, yet I believe he was upon the referve in many of his expressions, to prevent giving me offence, for I fcarce heard him once call 272

call on the bleffed Virgin or mention St. Jago, or his guardian angel, though fo common with the reft of them; however, I fay, I had not the leaft doubt of his fincerity and pious intentions on his own part, and I am firmly of opinion, if the reft of the popifh miffionaries were like him they would firive to vifit even the poor Tartars and Laplanders, where they have nothing to give them, as well as covet to flock to India, Perfia, China, &c. the moft wealthy of the heathen countries; for if they expected to bring no gains to their church by it, it may well be admired how they came to admit the Chinefe Confucius into the calendar of the chriftian faints? But this by the bye.

A SHIP being ready to fail for Lifbon, I fay, my pious prieft afked me leave to go thither, being ftill, as he obferved, bound never to finifh any voyage he began. How happy had it been for me if I had gone with him! but it was too late now; all things heaven appoints are beft; had I gone with him I had never had fo many things to be thankful for, and you had never heard of the fecond part of the travels and adveptures of Robinfon Crufoe; fo I muft here leave exclaiming at myfelf, and go on with my voyage. From the Brafils we made directly away over the Atlantic Sea to the Cape of Good Hope, and and had a tolerable good voyage, our courfe generally fouth-east, now and then a storm and fome contrary winds; but my difasters at fea were at an end, my future rubs and cross events were to befal me on shore, that it might appear the land was as well prepared to be our fcourge as the fea.

Our fhip was on a trading voyage, and had a fupercargo on board who was to direct all her motions after fhe arrived at the Cape, only being limited to a certain number of days for flay, by charter-party, at the feveral ports fhe was to go to. This was none of my bufinefs, neither did I meddle with it, my nephew the captain, and the fupercargo adjufting all those things between them as they thought fit.

We flayed at the Cape no longer than was needful to take in fresh water, but made the best of our way for the coast of Coromandel. We were indeed informed, that a French man of war of fifty guns, and two large merchant ships, were gone for the Indies, and as I knew we were at war with France, I had some apprehensions of them, but they went their own way and we heard no more of them.

I SHALL not pefter my account or the reader with a tedious defcription of places, journals of our Vol. II. T voyages, voyages, variations of the compais, latitudes, trade-winds, &c. it is enough to name the ports and places which we touched at and what occurred to us upon our paffing from one to another; we touched first at the island of Madagafcar. where, though the people are fierce and treacherous, and in particular, very well armed with lances and bows, which they use with unconceivable dexterity, vet we fared very well with them a while, they treated us very civilly, and for fome trifles which we gave them, fuch as knives, sciffars, &c. they brought us eleven good fat bullocks of a middling fize, which we took in; partly for fresh provisions for our prefent fpending, and the reft to falt for the ship's ufe.

WE were obliged to flay here fome time after we had furnished ourfelves with provisions, and I, that was always too curious to look into every nook of the world wherever I came, was for going on fhore as often as I could; it was on the east fide of the island that we went on fhore, one evening, and the people, who by the way are very numerous, came thronging about us, and flood gazing at us at a distance; but as we had traded freely with them and had been kindly used, we thought ourfelves in no danger, but when we faw the people we cut three boughs out of a tree and and fluck them up at a diftance from us, which it feems, is a mark in that country, not only of a truce and friendship, but when it is accepted the other fide fets up three poles or boughs, which is a fignal that they accept the truce too; but then this is a known condition of the truce too; that you are not to pass beyond their three poles towards them, nor they to come past your three poles or boughs towards you; fo that you are perfectly fecure within the three poles, and all the fpace between your poles and theirs, is allowed like a market for free converse, traffic, and commerce. When you go there you must not carry your weapons with you; and if they come into that fpace they flick up their javelins and launces all at the first poles and come on unarmed; but if any violence is offered them, and the truce thereby broken, away they run to the poles and lay hold of their weapons and the truce is at an end.

274

It happened one evening when we went on fhore, that a greater number of their people came down than ufual, but all very friendly and civil, and they brought in feveral kinds of provifions, for which we fatisfied them with fuch toys as we had; their women alfo brought us milk and roots, and feveral things very acceptable to us, and all was quiet, and we made us a little tent or hut T 2 of fome boughs of trees, and lay on thore all night.

I KNOW not what was the occafion, but I was not fo well fatisfied to lie on fhore as the reft, and the boat riding at anchor about a flone caft from the land, with two men in her to take care of her; I made one of them come on fhore, and getting fome boughs of trees to cover us alfo in the boat, I fpread the fail on the bottom of the boat, and lay under the cover of the branches of trees all night in the boat.

ABOUT two o'clock in the morning we heard one of our men make a terrible noise on the shore, calling out for God's fake to bring the boat in, and come and help them, for they were all like to be murdered; at the fome time I heard the fire of five muskets, which was the number of the guns they had, and that three times over; for it feems the natives here were not fo eafily frighted with guns as the favages were in America, where I had o do with them:

All this while I knew not what was the matter, but rouzing immediately from fleep with the noife, I caufed the boat to be thruft in, and refolved with three fuzees we had on board to land and affift our men.

WE

WE got the boat foon to the flore, but our men were in too much haft, for being come to the flore they plunged into the water to get to the boat with all the expedition they could, being purfued by between three and four hundred men. Our men were but nine in all, and only five of them had fuzees with them, the reft had indeed piftols and fwords, but they were of finall use to them.

We took up feven of our men, and with difficulty enough too, three of them being very ill. wounded; and that which was flill worfe, was, that while we flood in the boat to take our men in, we were in as much danger as they were in on fhore, for they poured their arrows in upon us fo thick that we were fain to barricade the fide of the boat up with the benches, and two or three loofe boards, which to our great fatisfaction we had by mere accident in the boat.

AND yet, had it been day-light, they are, it feems, fuch exact markimen, that if they could have feen but the least part of any of us, they would have been fure of us; we had by the light of the moon a little fight of them, as they flood pelting us from the flore with darts and arrows; and having got ready our fire-arms, we T 3 gave gave them a vollev, that we could hear by the cries of fome of them that we had wounded feveral; however, they flood thus in battle array on the fhore till break of day, which we fuppofe was that they might fee the better to take their aim at us.

In this condition we lay and could not tell how to weigh our anchor or fet up our fail, becaufe we must needs stand up in the boat, and they were as fure to hit us, as we were to hit a bird in a tree with fmall fhot, we made fignals of diffrefs to the fhip, which, though we rode a league off, yet my nephew the captain hearing our firing, and by glaffes perceiving the pofture we lay in, and that we fired towards the shore, pretty well underflood us, and weighing anchor with all fpeed he flood as near the fhore as he durft with the flip, and then fent another boat with ten hands in her to affift us; but we called to them not to come too near, telling them what condition we were in; however, they flood in nearer to us, and one of the men taking the end of a tow-line in his hand, and keeping our boat between him and the enemy, fo that they could not perfectly fee him, fwam on board us and made fast the line to the boat, upon which we flipped out our little cable and leaving our anchor behind, they towed us out of reach of the arrows. we we all the while lying clofe behind the barricado we had made.

As foon as we were got from between the fhip and the thore, that fhe could lay her fide to the fhore, fhe run along just by them and poured in a broad fide among them loaden with pieces of iron and lead, fimall bullets, and fuch ftuff, befides the great fhot, which made a terrible havock among them.

WHEN we were got on board and out of danger, we had time to examine into the occasion of this fray; and indeed our fupercargo, who had been often in those parts, put me upon it, for he faid he was fure the inhabitants would not have touched us after we had made a truce, if we had not done fomething to provoke them to it; at length it came out, viz. that an old woman who had come to fell us fome milk, had brought it within our poles, with a young woman with her, who also brought fome roots or herbs; and while the old woman, whether she was mother to the young woman or no they could not tell, was felling us the milk, one of our men offered fome rudeness to the wench that was with her, at which the old woman made a great noife : however, the feaman would not quit his prize, but carried her out of the old woman's fight among the trees, it T<sub>4</sub> being being almost dark; the old woman went away without her, and as we may suppose, made an out-cry among the people she came from, who upon notice raised this great army upon us in three or four hours, and it was great odds but we had been all destroyed.

ONE of our men was killed with a lance thrown at him juft at the beginning of the attack as he fallyed out of the tent they had made; the reft came off free, all but the fellow who was the occafion of all the mifchief, who paid dear enough for his black miftrefs, for we could not hear what became of him a great while : we lay upon the fhore two days after, though the wind prefented, and made fignals for him, and made our boat fail up fhore and down fhore feveral leagues, but in vain, fo we were obliged to give him over, and if he alone had fuffered for it the lofs had been the lefs.

I COULD not fatisfy myfelf, however, without venturing on fhore once more, to try if I could learn any thing of him or them; it was the third night after the action that I had a great mind to learn, if I could by any means, what mifchief we had done, and how the game flood on the II d ns fide. I was careful to do it in the dark, left we fhould be attacked again, but I ought indeed indeed to have been fure that the men I went with had been under my command before I engaged in a thing fo hazardous and mifchievous as I was brought into by it without defign.

WE took twenty flout fellows with us as any in the fhip, befides the fupercargo and myfelf, and we landed two hours before midnight at the fame place where the Indians flood drawn up the evening before; I landed here, becaufe my defign, as I have faid, was chiefly to iee if they had quitted the field, and if they had left any marks behind them of the mifchief we had done them; and I thought if we could furprize one or two of them, perhaps we might get our man again by way of exchange.

WE landed without any noife, and divided our men into two bodies, whereof the boatfwain commanded one and I the other. We neither faw or heard any body flir when we landed, and we marched up one body at a diffance from the other to the place, but at first could fee nothing, it being very dark, till by and by our boatfwain, that led the first party stumbled, and fell over a dead body; this made them halt a while, for knowing by the circumstances that they were at the place where the Indians had stood, they waited for my coming up there. We concluded to halt till the moon moon began to rife, which we knew would be in lefs than an hour, when we could eafily difcern the havock we had made among them. We told thirty-two bodies upon the ground, whereof two were not quite dead; fome had an arm and fome a leg fhot off, and one his head; those that were wounded, we fuppose, they had carried away.

WHEN we had made, as I thought, a full difcovery of all we could come at the knowledge of, I was refolved for going on board, but the boatfwain and his party fent me word, that they were refolved to make a vifit to the Indian town, where thefe dogs, as they called them dwelt, and afked me to go along with them; and if they could find them, as they ftill fancied they fhould, they did not doubt getting a good booty, and it might be they might find Tho. Jeffry there; that was the man's name we had loft.

HAD they fent to afk my leave to go, I knew well enough what anfwer to have given them, for I fhould have commanded them inftantly on board, knowing it was not a hazard fit for us to run, who had a fhip and fhip loading in our charge, and a voyage to make which depended very much upon the lives of the men; but as they fent me word they were refolved to go, and only afked me and my company to go along with them them I politively refuled it, and role up, for I was fitting on the ground, in order to go to the boat. One or two of the men began to importune me to, go, and when I refused positively began to grumble, and fay they were not under. my command, and they would go. Come Jack, fays one of the men, will you go with me? I'll go for one. Iack faid he would, and another followed, and then another, and, in a word, they all left me but one, whom I perfuaded to flav. and a boy left in the boat. So the fupercargo and I with the third man went back to the boat. where we told them we would itay for them, and take care to take in as many of them as should be left; for I told them it was a mad thing they were going about, and supposed most of them would run the fate of Tho. Jeffry.

282

THEY told me, like feamen, they would warrant it, they would come off again, and they would take care, &c. fo away they went. I intreated them to confider the fhip and the voyage, that their lives were not their own, and that they were intrufted with the voyage, in fome measure; that if they mifcarried the fhip might be loft for want of their help, and that they could not anfwer it to God or man. But I might as well have talked to the mainmaft of the fhip; they were mad upon their journey, only they gave me good words words and begged I would not be angry; that they did not doubt but they would be back again in about an hour at fartheft, for the Indian town, they faid, was not above half a mile off, though they found it above two miles before they got to it.

WELL, they all went away as above, and the the attempt was desperate, and fuch as none but madmen would have gone about, yet to give them their due, they went about it as warily as boldly; they were gallantly armed, for they had every man a fuzee or mufket, a bayenet and a piftol; fome of them had broad cutlaffes, fome of them hangers, and the boats wain and two more had pole-axes; befides all which they had among them thirteen hand-grenadoes; bolder fellows, and better provided never went about any wicked work in the world.

WHEN they went out their chief defign was plunder, and they were in mighty hopes of finding gold there, but a circumftance which none of them were aware of, fet them on fire with revenge, and made devils of them all. When they came to the few Indian houfes which they thought had been the town, which was not above half a mile off; they were under a great difpointment, for there was not above twelve or thirteen houfes, 4 and and where the town was, or how big, they knew not; they confulted therefore what to do, and were fome time before they could refolve, for if they fell upon these they must cut all their throats, and it was ten to one but some of them might escape, it being in the night, though the moon was up; and if one efcaped he would run away and raife all the town, fo they fhould have a whole army upon them; again on the other hand, if they went away and left those untouched, for the people were all afleep, they could not tell which way to look for the town.

HOWEVER, the laft was the beft advice, fo they refolved to leave them, and look for the town as well as they could, they went on a little way and found a cow tied to a tree, this they prefently concluded would be a good guide to them, for they faid, the cow certainly belonged to the town before them, or the town behind them; and if they untied her they fhould fee which way fhe went; if the went back they had nothing to fay to her, but, if the went forward they would follow her; fo they cut the cord, which was made of twifted flags, and the cow went on before them, and led them directly to the town, which, as they report, confifted of above 200 houfes or huts, and in fome of these they found several families living together.

286

HERE they found all in filence, as profoundly fecure as fleep could make them; and firft, they called another council, to confider what they had to do; and, in a word, they refolved to divide themfelves into three bodies, and to fet three houfes on fire in three parts of the town; and as the men came out, to feize them and bind them; if any refifted, they need not be afked what to do then, and fo to fearch the reft of the houfes for plunder: but they refolved to march filently firft through the town, and fee what dimensions it was of, and if they might venture upon it or no.

THEY did fo, and defperately refolved that they would venture upon them; but while they were animating one another to the work, three of them that were a little before the reft called out aloud to them, and told them that they had found Tom Jeffry: they all ran up to the place, where they found the poor fellow hanged up haked by one arm, and his throat cut : there was an Indian houfe juft by the tree, where they found fixteen or feventeen of the principal Indians, who had been concerned in the fray with us before, and two or three of them wounded with our fhot; and our men found they were awake, and talking one to another in that houfe; but knew not their number.

The fight of their poor mangled comrade fo enraged them, as before, that they fwore to one another they would be revenged, and that not an Indian that came into their hands fhould have any quarter; and to work they went immediately, and yet not fo madly as by the rage and fury they were in, might be expected : their first care was to get fomething that would foon take fire, but after a little fearch they found that would be to no purpole; but the most of the houses were low, and thatched with flags or rufhes, of which the country is full; fo they prefently made fome wild fire, as we call it, by wetting a little powder in the palm of their hands, and in a quarter of an an hour they fet the town on fire in four or five places; and particularly in that house where the Indians were not gone to bed. As foon as the fire began to blaze, the poor frighted creatures began to rush out, to fave their lives, but met with their fate in the attempt, and efpecially at the door where they drove them back, the boatfwain himfelf killing one or two with his pole-ax : the house being large, and many in it, he did not care to go in, but called for a hand-grenado and threw it among them, which at first frighted them, but when it burft made fuch havock among them that they cried out in a hideous manner.

In fhort, most of the Indians who were in the open part of the house were killed or hurt with the grenado, except two or three more who preffed to the door, which the boats and two more kept, with their bayonets on the muzzles of their pieces, and dispatched all that came that way: but there was abother apartment in the house where the prince or king; or whatever he was, and several others were, and these they kept in till the house, which was by this time all in a light flame, fell in upon them and they were fmothered together.

ALL this while they fired not a gun, becaute they would not waken the people fafter than they could mafter them, but the fire began to waken them faft enough, and our fellows were glad to keep a little together in bodies; for the firegrew fo raging, all the houfes being made of light combuftible ftuff, that they could hardly bear the ftreet between them; and their bufinefs was to follow the fire, for the furer execution: as faft as the fire either forced the people out of those houfes which were burning, or frighted them out of others, our people were ready at their doors to knock them on the head, ftill calling and holoing one to another to remember Tom Jeffrys.

While

WHILE this was doing, I must confess I was very uneasy, and especially when I saw the flames of the town, which, it being night, seemed to be just by me.

My nephew, the captain, who was roufed by his men too, feeing fuch a fire, was very uneafy, not knowing what the matter was, or what danger I was in, efpecially hearing the guns too, for by this time they began to ufe their fire arms, a thoufand thoughts opprefied his mind concerning me and the fupercargo, what would become of us; and at laft, though he could ill fpare any thore men, yet not knowing what exigence we might be in, he takes another boat, and with thirteen men and himfelf comes on fhore to me.

He was furprized to fee me and the fupercargo in the boat with no more than two men; and though he was glad that we were well, yet he was in the fame impatience with us to know what was doing; for the noife continued and the flame increased; in short, it was next to an impossibility for any men in the world to restrain their curiosity to know what had happened, or their concern for the fastery of the men: in a word, the captain told me, he would go and help his men, let what would come. I argued with him, as I did before with the men, the fastery of the ship, the danger Vol. II. of the voyage, the intereft of the owners and merchants, &c. and told him I would go and the two men, and only fee if we could at a diftance learn what was like to be the event, and come back and tell him. It was all one to talk to my nephew as it was to talk to the reft before; he would go, he faid, and he only wifhed he had left but ten men in the fhip; for he could not think of having his men loft for want of help, he had rather lofe the fhip, the voyage and his life and all; and away he went.

I was no more able to ftay behind now than I was to perfuade them not to go; fo in fhort the captain ordered two men to row back the pinnace, and fetch twelve men more, leaving the long-boat at an anchor, and that when they came back, fix men fhould keep the two boats and fix more come after us; fo that he left only fixteen men in the fhip, for the whole fhip's company confifted of fixty-five men, whereof two were loft in the late quarrel which brought this mifchief on.

BEING now on the march, you may be fure we felt little of the ground we trod on; and being guided by the fire we kept no path, but went directly to the place of the flame. If the noife of the guns was furprizing to us before, the cries of the the poor people were now quite of another nature. and filled us with horror. I muft confefs, I was never at the facking a city; or at the taking a town by ftorm; I had heard of Oliver Cromwell taking Drogheda in Ireland, and killing man, woman and child; and I had read of count Tilly facking the city of Magdebourg, and cutting the throats of 22.000 of all fexes, but I never had an idea of the thing itfelf before, nor is it poffible to defcribe it, or the horror that was upon our minds at hearing it. However, we went on, and at length came to the town, though there was no entering the ftreets of it for the fire. The first object we met with was the ruins of a hut or house, or rather the afhes of it, for the house was confumed; and just before it, plain now to be feen by the light of the fire, lay four men and three women killed, and, as we thought, one or two more lay in the heap among the fire : in fhort, there were fuch inftances of a rage altogether barbarous, and of a fury fomething beyond what was human, that we thought it impoffible our men could be guilty of it, or if they were the authors of it, we thought they ought to be every one of them put to the worst of deaths: but this was not all, we faw the fire increafed forward, and the cry went on just as the fire went on; fo that we were in the utmost confusion. We advanced a little way farther, and behold to our aftonishment three women U 2 naked, naked, and crying in a most dreadful manner, came flying as if they had wings, and after them fixteen or feventeen men, natives, in the fame terror and confernation with three of our English butchers in their rear, who, when they could not overtake them, fired in among them, and one that was killed by their shot fell down in our fight: when the rest faw us, believing us to be their enemies, and that we would murder them as well as those that purfued them, they fet up a most dreadful shriek, especially the women, and two of them fell down, as if already dead with the fright.

My very foul fhrunk within me, and my blood ran chill in my veins when I faw this; and I believe had the three English failors that purfued them come on, I had made our men kill them all : however, we took fome ways to let the poor flying creatures know that we would not hurt them, and immediately they came up to us, and kneeling down with their hands lifted up, made piteous lamentation to us to fave them, which we let them know we would ; whereupon they crept altogether in a huddle close behind us, as for I left my men drawn up together, protection. and charging them to hurt nobody, but if poffible to get at fome of our people, and fee what devil it was poffeffed them, and what they intended to do.

do, and to command them off; affuring them that if they flayed till day-light they would have an hundred thoufand men about their ears : I fay I left them, and went among those flying people, taking only two of our men with me; and there was indeed a piteous spectacle among them; fome of them had their feet terribly burned with trampling and running through the fire, others their hands burned; one of the women had fallen down in the fire, and was very much burned before she could get out again, and two or three of the men had cuts in their backs and thighs from our men pursuing, and another was shot through the body, and died while I was there.

I would fain have learned what the occasion of all this was, but I could not understand one word they faid, though by figns I perceived that fome of them knew not what was the occasion themfelves. I was fo terrified in my thoughts at this outrageous attempt, that I could not ftay there, but went back to my own men, and refolved to go into the middle of the town through the fire, or whatever might be in the way, and put an end to it, coft what it would : accordingly as I came back to my men I told them my refolution, and commanded them to follow me; when in the very moment came four of our men, with the boatfwain at their head, roving over the heaps U 3 of of bodies they had killed, all covered with blood and duft, as if they wanted more people to maffacre, when our men holoed to them as loud as they could holoe, and with much ado one of them made them hear, fo that they knew who we were, and came up to us.

As foon as the boatfwain faw us he fet up a holoe, like a fhout of triumph; for having, as he thought, more help come, and without bearing to hear me, Captain, fays he, noble captain, I am glad you are come; we are not half done yet; villanous hell hound dogs, I'll kill as many of them as poor Tom has hairs upon his head: we have fworn to fpare none of them; we'll root out the very nation of them from the earth; and thus he ran on, out of breath too with action, and would not give us leave to fpeak a word.

At last raising my voice, that I might filence him a little, Barbarous dog, faid I, what are you doing ? I won't have one creature touched more, upon pain of death; I charge you upon your life to ftop your hands, and stand still here, or you are a dead man this minute.

WHY, Sir, fays he, do you know what you do, or what they have done? If you want a reason for what they have done, come hither; and with that that he fhewed me the poor fellow hanging, with his throat cut.

I CONFESS I was urged then myfelf, and at another time fhould have been forward enough: but I thought they had carried their rage too far, and remembered Jacob's words to his fon Simeon and Levi, "Curfed be their anger for it was " fierce, and their wrath for it was cruel." But I had now a new tafk upon my hands; for when the men I carried with me faw the fight as I had done, I had as much to do to reftrain them as I fhould have had with the other; nay my nephew himfelf fell in with them, and told me in their hearing, that he was only concerned for fear of the men being overpowered, for as to the people, he thought not one of them ought to live, for they had all glutted themfelves with the murder of the poor man, and that they ought to be used like murderers: upon these words, away ran eight of my men with the boatswain and his crew, to complete their bloody work; and I, feeing it quite out of my power to reftrain them, came away penfive and fad, for I could not bear the fight, much lefs the horrible noife and cries of the poor wretches that fell into their hands.

I GOT nobody to come back with me but the fupercargo and two men, and with thefe I walked U 4 back back to the boats. It was a very great piece of folly in me, I confefs, to venture back as it were alone; for as it began now to be almoft day, and the alarm had ran over the country, there ftood about forty men armed with lances and bows at the little place where the twelve or thirteen houfes ftood, mentioned before; but by accident I miffed the place, and came directly to the fea fide, and by the time I got to the fea fide it was broad day; immediately I took the pinnace and went aboard, and fent her back to affift the men in what might happen.

I OBSERVED, about the time that I came to the boat fide, that the fire was pretty well out, and the noife abated; but in about half an hour after I got on board I heard a volley of our mens fire arms, and faw a great fmoke : this, as I underftood afterwards, was our men falling upon the men, who as I faid, ftood at the few houses on the way, of whom they killed fixteen or feventeen, and fet all those houses on fire, but did not meddle with the women or children.

By that time the men got to the flore again with the pinnace our men began to appear; they came dropping in, not in two bodies as they went, but ftraggling here and there, in fuch a manner that that a fmall force of refolute men might have cut them all off.

But the dread of them was upon the whole country, and the men were furprized, and fo frighted, that I believe an hundred of them would have fled at the fight of but five of our men: nor in all this terrible action was there a man that made any confiderable defence; they were fo furprized between the terror of the fire and the fudden attack of our men in the dark, that they knew not which way to turn themfelves; for if they fled one way they were met by one party, if back again, by another; fo that they were every where knocked down: nor did any of our men receive the leaft hurt, except one that fprained his foot, and another had one of his hands burned.

I was very angry with my nephew the captain, and indeed with all the men, in my mind, but with him in particular, as well for his acting fo out of his duty as commander of the fhip, and having the charge of the voyage upon him, as in his prompting rather than cooling the rage of his men in fo bloody and cruel an enterprize. My nephew anfwered me very refpectfully, but told me, that when he faw the body of the poor feaman, whom they had murdered in fo cruel and barbarous barbarous manner, he was not mafter of himfelf, neither could he govern his paffion : he owned he fhould not have done fo, as he was commander of the fhip, but as he was a man, and nature moved him, he could not bear it. As for the reft of the men, they were not fubject to me at all, and they knew it well enough; fo they took no notice of my diflike.

THE next day we fet fail, fo we never heard any more of it. Our men differed in the account of the number they killed, but according to the beft of their accounts put all together, they killed or deftroyed about 150 people, men, women and children, and left not a house standing in the town.

As for the poor fellow Tho. Jeffry, as he was quite dead, for his throat was fo cut that his head was half off, it would do him no fervice to bring him away, fo they only took him down from the tree, where he was hanged by one hand.

However juft our men thought this action, I was against them in it; and I always after that time told them, God would blass the voyage; for I looked upon all the blood they shed that night to be murder in them; for though it is true that they had killed Tho. Jeffry, yet Jeffry was the aggression, aggreffor, had broken the truce, and had violated or debauched a young woman of theirs, who came down to them innocently, and on the faith of the public capitulation.

THE boatswain defended this quarrel when we were afterwards on board : he faid, it was true that we feemed to break the truce, but really had not, and that the war was begun the night before by the natives themfelves, who had shot at us, and killed one of our men without any just provocation; fo that as we were in a capacity to fight them now, we might be also in a capacity to do ourfelves justice upon them in an extraordinary manner; that though the poor man had taken a little liberty with a wench, he ought not to have been murdered, and that in such a villanous manner; and that they did nothing but what was just, and what the laws of God allowed to be done to murderers.

ONE would think this fhould have been enough to have warned us againft going on fhore amongft heathens and barbarians : but it is impoffible to make mankind wife, but at their own expence; and their experience feems to be always of moft use to them, when it is dearest bought. 300

WE were now bound to the gulph of Perfia, and from thence to the coaft of Coromandel, only to touch at Surat: but the chief of the fupercargo's defign lay at the bay of Bengal, where if he miffed of his bufinefs outward bound he was to go up to China, and return to the coaft as he came home.

THE first difaster that befel us, was in the gulph of Perfia, where five of our men venturing on fhore on the Arabian fide of the gulph, were furrounded by the Arabians, and either all killed or carried away into flavery; the reft of the boats crew were not able to refcue them, and had but just time to get off their boat. I began to upbraid them with the just retribution of heaven in this cafe: but the boatfwain very warmly told me. he thought I went farther in my cenfures than I could fnew any warrant for in fcripture, and referred to Luke xiii. 4. where our Saviour intimates, that those men on whom the tower of Siloam fell, were not finners above all the Gallileans : but that which indeed put me to filence in the cafe, was, that not one of these five men, who were now loft, were of those who went on fhore to the maffacre of Madagafcar; fo I always called it, though our men could not bear the word maffacre with any patience.

But my frequent preaching to them on this fubject had worfe confequences than I expected, and the boatfwain, who had been the head of the attempt, came up boldly to me one time, and told me he found that I continually brought that affair upon the ftage; that I made unjust reflections upon it, and had ufed the men very ill on that account, and himfelf in particular; that as I was but a paffenger, and no command in the ship, or concern in the voyage, they were not obliged to bear it; that they did not know but I might have fome ill defign in my head, and perhaps to call them to an account for it when they came to England, and that therefore, unless I would refolve to have done with it, and alfo, not to concern myself any farther with him, or any of his affairs, he would leave the ship, for he did not think it was fafe to fail with me among them.

I HEARD him patiently enough till he had done, and then told him, that I did confess I had all along opposed the maffacre of Madagascar, and that I had on all occasions spoken my mind freely about it, though not more upon him than any of the reft. That as to my having no command in the ship, that was true, nor did I exercise any authority, only took the liberty of speaking my mind in things which publickly concerned us all, and and what concern I had in the voyage was none of his bufines; that I was confiderable owner in the fhip, in that claim I conceived I had a right to fpeak even farther than I had yet done, and would not be accountable to him or any one elfe, and begun to be a little warm with him; he made but little reply to me at that time, and I thought the affair had been over. We were at. this time in the road at Bengal, and being willing to fee the place, I went on fhore with the fupercargo in the fhip's boat to divert myfelf, and towards evening was preparing to go on board, when one of the men came to me and told me, he would not have me trouble, myfelf to come down to the boat, for they had orders not to carry me on board any more. Any one may guess what a furprize I was in at fo infolent a meffage, and I asked the man, who bad him deliver that. errand to me? he told me the cockfwain. I faid no more to the fellow, but bad him let them know he had delivered his meffage, and that I had given him no answer to it.

I IMMEDIATELY went and found out the fupercargo, and told him the ftory, adding what I prefently forefaw, viz. That there would certainly be a mutiny in the fhip, and intreated him to go immediately on board the fhip in an Indian boat and acquaint the captain of it; but I might have have fpared this intelligence, for before I had fpoken to him on fhore the matter was effected on board. The boatswain, the gunner, the carpenter, and all the inferior officers, as foon as I was gone off in the boat came up to the quarterdeck and defired to speak with the captain, and there the boatfwain making a long harrangue, and repeating all he had faid to me, told the captain in few words, that I was now gone peaceably on fhore, they were loth to use any violence with me, which if I had not gone on fhore they would otherwife have done, to oblige to have gone; they therefore thought fit to tell him, that as they fhipped themfelves to ferve in the fhip under his command, they would perform it well and faithfully; but if I would not quit the ship, or the captain oblige me to quit it, they would all leave the fhip and fail no farther with him, and at that word ALL, he turned his face about towards the mainmast, which was it seems the fignal agreed on between them, at which all the feamen being got together, there cried out, One and all. One and all.

My nephew, the captain, was a man of fpirit, and of great prefence of mind; and though he was furprized, you may be fure, at the thing, yet he told them calmly, that he would confider of the matter, but that he could do nothing in it it till he had fpoken to me about it. He ufed fome arguments with them, to fhew them the unreafonablenefs and injuffice of the thing; but it was all in vain, they fwore, and fhook hands round before his face, that they would all go on fhore, unlefs he would engage to them, not to fuffer me to come any more on board the fhip.

THIS was a hard article upon him, who knew his obligation to me, and did not know how I might take it: So he began to talk fmartly to them, told them that I was a very confiderable owner of the ship, and that, in justice he could not put me out of my own house; that this was next door to ferving me as the famous pirate Kid had done, who made a mutiny in the fhip, fet the captain on fhore in an uninhabited island and ran away with the fhip; that let them go into what fhip they would, if ever they came to England again it would coft them dear; that the ship was mine, and that he could not put me out of it; and that he would rather lofe the fhip and the voyage too than difoblige me fo much, fo they might do as they pleafed; however, he would go on fhore and talk with me, and invited the boatfwain to go with him, and perhaps they might accommodate the matter with me.

Bur

But they all rejected the propofal, and faid they would have nothing to do with me any more, and if I came on board they would all go on fhore. Well, faid the captain, if you are all of this mind let me go on fhore and talk with him. So away he came to me with this account, a little after the meffage had been brought to me from the cockfwain.

I was very glad to fee my nephew, I muft confefs, for I was not without apprehenfions that they would confine him by violence, fet fail, and run away with the fhip, and then I had been ftripped naked in a remote country, having nothing to help myfelf; in fhort, I had been in a worfe cafe than when I was all alone in the ifland.

But they had not come that length it feems, to my great fatisfaction, and when my nephew told me what they had faid to him, and how they had fworn, and fhook hands, that they would one and all leave the fhip if I was fuffered to come on board : I told him he fhould not be concerned at it at all, for I would flay on fhore; I only defired he would take care and fend me all my neceffary things on fhore, and leave me a fufficient fum of money, and I would find my way to England as well as I could.

Vol. II.

THIS

THIS was a heavy piece of news to my nephew; but there was no way to help it but to comply: fo, in fhort, he went on board the fhip again and fatisfied the men, that his uncle had yielded to their importunity, and had fent for his goods from on board the fhip; fo that matter was over in a few hours, the men returned to their duty, and I began to confider what courfe I fhould fteer.

I was now alone in the remoteft part of the world, as I think I may call it, for I was near three thousand leagues by fea farther off from England than I was at my island; only it is true, I might travel here by land over the great Mogul's country to Surat, might go from thence to Baffora by fea up the gulph of Persia, and take the way of the caravans over the Defart of Arabia to Aleppo and Scanderoon, from thence by fea again to Italy, and fo over land into France; and this put together might at least be a full diameter of the globe, or more.

I HAD another way before me, which was to wait for fome English ships, which were coming to Bengal from Achin on the island of Sumatra, and get passage on board them for England. But as I came hither without any concern with the English East-India Company, fo it would be difficult ficult to go from hence without their licence, unlefs with great favour of the captains of the fhips, or of the company's factors, and to both I was an utter firanger.

HERE I had the mortification to fee the ship fet fail without me, a treatment I think a man in my circumstances scarce ever met with, except from pirates running away with a ship, and setting those that would not agree with their vilainy on fhore. Indeed this was next door to it both ways; however, my nephew left me two fervants, or rather one companion and one fervant, the first was clerk to the purfer, whom he engaged to go with me, and the other was his own fervant. I took me alfo a good lodging in the houfe of an Englishwoman, where feyeral merchants lodged, some French, two Italians, or rather Jews, and one Englishman; here I was handsomely enough entertained; and that I might not be faid to run rashly upon any thing, I stayed here above nine months confidering what courfe to take and how to manage myfelf. I had fome English goods with me of value, and a confiderable fum of money, my nephew furnishing me with a thousand pieces of eight, and a letter of credit for more if I had occafion, that I might not be ftraitened whatever might happen.

I QUICKLY difpoled of my goods to advantage, and as I originally intended, I bought here fome very good diamonds, which of all other things were the most proper for me in my prefent circumstances, because I might always carry my whole estate about me.

AFTER a long flay here, and many propofals made for my return to England, but none falling out to my mind, the English merchant who lodged with me, and whom I had contracted an intimate acquaintance with, came to me one morning, countryman, fays he, I have a project to communicate to you, which as it fuits with my thoughts, may, for aught I know, fuit with yours alfo, when you fhall have thoroughly confidered it. Here we are posted, fays he, you by accident and I by my own choice, in a part of the world very remote from our own country; but it is in a country, where by us who underftand trade and bufinefs, a great deal of money is to be got; if you will put 1000l. to my 1000l. we will hire a fhip here, the first we can get to our minds, you shall be captain, I'll be merchant, and we'll go a trading voyage to China; for what fhould we ftand ftill for? The whole world is in motion, rolling round and round; all the creatures of God, heavenly bodies and earthly, are bufy and diligent; why fhould we be idle ?

idle? There are no drones in the world but men, why fhould we be of that number?

I LIKED this propofal very well, and the more becaufe it feemed to be expressed with fo much good will and in fo friendly a manner. I will not fay, but that I might, by my loofe and unhinged circumstances, be the fitter to embrace a propofal for trade, or indeed for any thing elfe; whereas, otherwise trade was none of my element. However, I might perhaps fay, with fome truth, that if trade was not my element, rambling was, and no propofal for feeing any part of the world which I had never feen before, could possibly come amils to me.

It was, however, fome time before we could get a fhip to our minds, and when we had got a veffel it was not eafy to get Englifh failors, that is to fay, fo many as were neceffary to govern the voyage and manage the failors, which we fhould pick up there. After fome time we got a mate, a boatfwain, and gunner Englifh, a Dutch carpenter, and three Portugueze foremaft-mer. With thefe we found we could do well enough, having Indian feamen, fuch as they were, to make up.

THERE

Х 3

THERE are fo many travellers who have wrote the history of their voyages and travels this way, that it would be very little diversion to any body to give a long account of the places we went to and the people who inhabit there; thefe things I leave to others, and refer the reader to those journals and travels of Englishmen, of which many I find are published, and more promifed every day; 'tis enough for me to tell you, that I made this voyage to Achin, in the ifland of Sumatra, and from thence to Siam, where we exchanged fome of our wares for opium and fome arrack, the first a commodity which bears a great price among the Chinefe, and which at that time was very much wanted there. In a word, we went up to Sufkan, made a very great voyage, were eight months out, and returned to Bengal, and I was very well fatisfied with my adventure. I observe, that our people in England often admire how the officers which the Company fend into India, and the merchants which generally ftay there, get fuch very great eftates as they do, and fometimes come home worth fixty or feventy thousand pounds at a time; but, it is no wonder, or at least we shall see so much farther into it when we confider the innume-. rable ports and places where they have a free commerce, that it will then be none; and much lefs it will be fo when we confider that at all those places places and ports where the English ships come, there is such great and constant demands for the growth of all other countries, that there is a certain vent for the returns, as well as a market abroad for the goods carried out,

In fhort, we made a very good voyage, and I got fo much money by the first adventure, and fuch an infight into the method of getting more. that had I been twenty years younger I fhould have been tempted to have flayed here, and fought no farther for making my fortune; but what was all this to a man upwards of three-score, that was rich enough, and came abroad more in obedience to a reftless defire of feeing the world, than a covetous defire of getting it? And, indeed, I think itis with great justice that I now call it a reftless defire, for it was fo. When I was at home I was refilefs to go abroad; and now I was abroad, I was reftlefs to be at home. I fay, what was this gain to me? I was rich enough, nor had I any uneafy defires about getting more money, and therefore the profit of the voyage to me was of no great force, for the prompting me forward to farther undertakings; and I thought that by this voyage I had made no progrefs at all, becaufe I was come back, as I might call it, to the place from whence I came, as to a home : whereas my eye, which, like that which Solo-X 4 mon

mon fpeaks of, was never fatisfied with feeing, was ftill more defirous of wandering and feeing. I was come into a part of the world which I was never in before, and that part in particular which I had heard much of, and was refolved to fee as much of as I could, and then I thought I might fay I had feen all the world that was worth feeing.

BUT my fellow traveller and I had different notions. I do not name this to infift upon my own, for I acknowledge his were the most just, and the most fuited to the end of a merchant's life, who, when he is abroad upon adventures, 'tis his wildom to flick to that as the beft thing for him, which he is like to get the moft money by. My new friend kept himfelf to the nature of the thing, and would have been content to have gone like a carrier's horfe, always to the fame inn, backward and forward, provided he could, as he called it, find his account in it. On the other hand, mine was the notion of a mad rambling boy, that never cares to fee a thing twice over. But this was not all, I had a kind of impatience upon me to be nearer home, and yet the most unfettled resolutions imaginable which way to go. In the interval of these confultations my friend, who was always upon the fearch for bufinefs, proposed another voyage to me me among the fpice iflands, and to bring home a loading of cloves from the Manillas, or thereabouts; places where indeed the Dutch do trade, but iflands belonging partly to the Spaniards; though we went not fo far, but to fome other where they have not the whole power, as they have at Batavia, Ceylon, &c.

WE were not long in preparing for this voyage; the chief difficulty was in bringing me to come into it; however, at last, nothing else offering, and finding that really ftirring about and trading, the profit being fo great, and as I may fay certain, had more pleafure in it, and had more fatisfaction to the mind, than fitting ftill, which to me efpecially was the unhappiest part of life, I refolved on this voyage too, which we made very fuccefsfully, touching at Borneo, and feveral islands whofe names I-do not remember, and came home in about five months. We fold our fpice, which was chiefly cloves, and fome nutmegs, to the Perfian merchants, who carried them away for the gulph; and making near five of one, we really got a great deal of money.

My friend, when we made up this account, fmiled at me, Well now, faid he, with a fort of agreeable infulting my indolent temper, is not this better than walking about here, like a man of of nothing to do, and fpending our time in ftaring at the nonfenfe and ignorance of the pagans? Why truly, fays I, my friend, I think it is, and I begin to be a convert to the principles of merchandizing; but I must tell you, faid I, by the way, you do not know what I am doing; for if I once conquer my backwardnefs, and embark heartily, as old as I am I shall harrafs you up and down the world till I tire you; for I shall pursue it fo eagerly I shall nevet let you lie still.

But to be fhort with my fpeculations, a little. while after this there came in a Dutch fhip from Batavia; fhe was a coafter, not an European trader, of about two hundred tons burthen; the men, as they pretended, having been fo fickly that the captain had not hands enough to go to fea with, he lay at Bengal, and having, it feems, got money enough, or being willing for other reafons to go for Europe, he gave public notice he would fell his fhip: this came to my ears before my new partner heard of it, and I had a great mind to buy it: fo I went to him and told him of it : he confidered awhile, for he was no rash man neither; but mufing fome time he replied, She is a little too, big, but however we will have her : accordingly we bought the fhip, and agreeing with the mafter, we paid for her and took poffeifion : when we had done fo, we refolved to entertain the men, if we could.

could, to join them with those we had, for the pursuing our business; but on a fudden, they having not received their wages, but their fhare of the money, not one of them was to be found : we inquired much about them, and at length were told that they were all gone together by land to Agra, the great city of the Mogul's refidence, and from thence were to travel to Surat, and fo by fea to the gulph of Perfia.

Norming had to heartily troubled me a good. while, as that I miffed the opportunity of going with them; for fuch a ramble, I thought, and in fuch company as would both have guarded and diverted me, would have fuited mightily with my great defign; and I should both have feen the world and gone homewards too : but I was much better fatisfied a few days after, when I came to know what fort of fellows' they were: for, in fhort, their hiftory was, that this man they called captain was the gunner only, not the commander; that they had been a trading voyage, in which they were attacked on fhore by fome of the Mallayans, who had killed the captain and three of his men, and that after the captain was killed, these men, eleven in number, had resolved to run away with the fhip, which they did, and brought her in at the bay of Bengal, leaving the mate and five men more on fhore; of whom hereafter. Well,

316

WELL, let them get the fhip how they would, we came honeftly by her, as we thought, though we did not, I confefs, examine into things fo exactly as we ought, for we never inquired any thing of the feamen, who would certainly have faultered in their account, contradicted one another, and perhaps contradicted themfelves, or one how or other we fhould have reafon to have fufpected them; but the man fhewed us a bill of fale for the fhip, to one Emanuel Clofterfhoven, or fome fuch name, for I fuppofe it was all a forgery, and called himfelf by that name, and we could not contradict him; and withal, having no fufpicion of the thing, we went through with our bargain.

WE picked up fome more English feamen here, after this, and fome Dutch; and now we refolved for a fecond voyage to the fouth-east for cloves, &c. that is to fay, among the Phillipine and Molucco ifles; and in fhort, not to fill up this part of my flory with trifles, when what is yet to come is fo remarkable; I fpent from first to last fix years in this country, trading from port to port, backward and forward, and with very good fuccess, and was now the last year with my new partner, going in the fhip above mentioned on a voyage to China, but defigning first to Siam, to buy rice. In this voyage, being by contrary winds obliged to beat up and down a great while in the ftraits of Mallacca, and among the iflands, we were no fooner got clear of those difficult feas but we found our ship had sprung a leak, and we were not able by all our industry to find out where it was. This forced us to make some port, and my partner, who knew the country better than I did, directed the captain to put into the river of Cambodia, for I had made the English mate, one Mr. Thomson, captain, not being willing to take the charge of the spread the great bay or gulph which goes up to Siam.

WHILE we were here and going often on fhore for refreshment, there comes to me one day an Englishman, and he was it seems a gunner's mate on board an English East India ship which rode in the same river, up near the city of Cambodia: what brought him hither we know not; but he comes to me, and speaking English, Sir, says he, you are a stranger to me, and I to you, but I have something to tell you that very nearly concerns you.

I LOOKED stedfastly at him a good while, and thought at first I had known him, but I did not; if it very nearly concerns me, faid I, and not yourself, vourself, what moves you to tell it me? I am moved, fays he, by the imminent danger you are in. and for ought I fee you have no knowledge of it. I know no danger I am in, fays I, but that my thip is leaky, and I cannot find it out; but I purpofe to lay her a-ground to-morrow to fee if I can find it. But, Sir, fays he, leaky or not leaky. find it or not find it, you will be wifer than to lay your fhip on fhore to-morrow, when you hear what I have to fay to you : do you not know, Sir, faid he, the town of Cambodia lies about fifteen leagues up this river ? And there are two large English ships about five leagues on this fide, and three Dutch. Well, faid I, and what is that to me? Why, Sir, faid he, is it for a man that is upon fuch adventures as you are, to come into a port and not examine first what ships there are there, and whether he is able to deal with them? I suppose you do not think you are a match for them? I was amufed very much at his difcourfe, but not amazed at it, for I could not conceive what he meant; and I turned fhort upon him, and faid, Sir, I wifh you would explain yourfelf; I cannot imagine what reason I have to be afraid of any company fhips, or Dutch fhips: I am no interloper, what can they have to fay to me?

HE looked like a man half angry, half pleafed, and paufing awhile, but fimiling, Well, Sir, fays he, he, if you think yourfelf secure you must take your chance : I am forry your fate fhould blind you against good advice; but affure yourself if you do not put to fea immediately, you will the very next tide be attacked by five long-boats full of men, and perhaps if you are taken you will be hanged for a pirate, and the particulars be examined afterwards : I thought, Sir, added he, I thould have met with a better reception than this for doing you a piece of fervice of fuch importance. I can never be ungrateful, faid I, for any fervice, or to any man that offers me any kindnels; but it is past my comprehension, faid 1, what they flould have fuch a defign upon me for; however, fince you fay there is no time to be loft, and that there is fome villainous defign in hand against me; I will go on board this minute, and put to fea immediately if my men can ftop the leak, or if we can fwim without flopping it : but, Sir, faid I, fhall I go away ignorant of the reafon of all this? Can you give me no furtherlight into it?

I CAN tell you but part of the flory, Sir, fays he, but I have a Dutch feamen here with me, and I believe I could perfuade him to tell you the reft, but there is fearce time for it : but the flort of the flory is this, the first part of which I fuppofe you know well enough, viz. that you was with this this fhip at Sumatra, that there your captain was murdered by the Mallayans, with three of his men, and that you, or fome of those that were on board with you, ran away with the fhip, and are fince turned pirates. This is the fum of the ftory, and you will be all feized as pirates I can affure you, and executed with very little ceremony; for you know merchant fhips fhew but little law to pirates, if they get them into their power.

319

Now you fpeak fpeak plain English, faid I, and I than kyou, and though I know nothing that we have done like what you talk of, for I am fure we came honeftly and fairly by the fhip, yet feeing fuch work is a doing as you fay, and that you feem to mean honeftly, I will be upon my guard. Nay, Sir, fays he, do not talk of being upon your guard; the beft defence is to be out of the danger; if you have any regard to your life, and the lives of all your men, put out to fea without fail, at high water, and as you have a whole tide before you, you will be gone too far out before they can come down, for they came away at high water, and as they have twenty miles to come, you get near two hours of them by the difference of the tide, not reckoning the length of the way; befides, as they are only boats and not fhips, they will will not venture to follow you far out to fea, efpecially if it blows.

WELL, fays I, you have been very kind in this, what fhall I do for you to make you amends? Sir, fays he, you may not be fo willing to make me any amends, becaufe you may not be convinced of the truth of it : I will make an offer to you, I have nineteen months pay due to me on board the fhip _____, which I came out of England in, and the Dutchman that is with me has feven months pay due to him, if you will make good our pay to us we will go along with you; if you find nothing more in it, we will defire no more : but if we do convince you that we have faved your lives, and the fhip, and the lives of all the men in her, we will leave the reft to you.

I CONSENTED to this readily, and went immediately on board and the two men with me; as foon as I came to the fhip fide, my partner who was on board came out on the quarterdeck, and called to me with a great deal of foy, O ho! O ho! we have ftopped the leak! we have ftopped the leak! Say you fo, faid I, thank God; but weigh the anchor then immediately. Weigh ! fays he, What do you mean by that ? what is the matter ? fays he. Afk no queftions, faid I, but all hands to work and weigh without lofing a minute. He was furprized, but Vol. II. Y however he called the captain, and he immediately ordered the anchor to be got up; and though the tide was not quite done, yet a little land breeze blowing we flood out to fea; then I called him into the cabin and told him the flory, and we called in the men and they told us the rest of it; but as it took up a great deal of time, fo before we had done, a feaman comes to the cabin door, and calls out to us, that the captain bad him tell us we were chafed : Chafed, fays I, by what? By five floops or boats, fays the fellow, full of men. Very well, faid I, then it is apparent there is fomething in it; in the next place I ordered all our men to be called up, and told them there was a defign to feize the fhip, and to take us for pirates, and afked them if they would fland by us, and by one another ; the men answered chearfully, that one and all they would live and die with us: then I asked the captain what way he thought best for us to manage a fight with them, for refift them I was refolved we would, and that to the laft drop : he faid readily that the way was to keep them off with our great fhot, as long as we could, and then to fire at them with our small arms, as long as we could; but when neither of thefe would do any longer we fhould retire to out close quarters, perhaps they had not materials to break open our bulk heads, or get in upon us.

THE

322

THE gunner had, in the mean time, orders to bring two guns to bear fore and aft out of the fteerage to clear the deck, and load them with mufket bullets and fmall pieces of old iron, and what next came to hand, and thus we made ready for fight; but all this while we kept out to fea, with wind enough; and could fee the boats at a diftance, being five large long-boats, following us with all the fail they could make.

Two of those boats (which by our glasses we could see were English) out-failed the rest, were near two leagues a head of them, and gained upon us confiderably, so that we found they would come up with us; upon which we fired a gun without ball, to intimate that they should bring to; and we put out a flag of truce, as a signal for parley, but they kept crouding after us till they came within shot, when we took in our white flag; they having made no answer to it, hung out a red flag, and fired at them with a shot: notwithstanding this, they came on till they were near enough to call to them with a speaking trumpet which we had on board; so we called to them, and bid them keep off at their peril.

It was all one, they crouded after us, and endeavoured to come under our ftern, fo to board us on our quarter, upon which, feeing they were refolute for mifchief, and depended upon the  $Y_2$  ftrength ftrength that followed them, I ordered to bring the fhip too, fo that they lay upon our broadfide, when immediately we fired five guns at them, one of which had been levelled fo true as to carry away the ftern of the hindermost boat, and bring them to the necessfity of taking down their fail, and running all to the head of the boat to keep her from finking; fo she lay by, and had enough of it; but seeing the foremost boat croud on after us, we made ready to fire at her in particular.

WHILE this was doing, one of the three boats that was behind, being forwarder than the other two, made up to the boat which we had difabled, to relieve her, and we could fee her take out the men : we called again to the foremost boat, and offered a truce to parley again, and to know what her bufinefs was with us, but had no answer, only fhe crouded clofe under our ftern : upon this our gunner, who was a very dexterous fellow, run out his two chafe guns and fired again at her; but the fhot miffing, the men in the boat flouted, waved their caps and came on ; but the gunner getting quickly ready again, fired among them the fecond time, one fhot of which, though it miffed the boat itfelf, yet fell in among the men, and we could eafily fee, had done a great deal of mischief among them; but we taking no notice of that, wayed the fhip again, and brought our quarter.

quarter to bear upon them, and firing three guns more we found the boat was split almost to pieces, in particular her rudder and a piece of her stern was shot quite away, fo they handed her fail immediately, and were in great diforder; but to compleat their misfortune, our gunner let fly two guns at them again: where he hit them we could not tell, but we found the boat was finking, and fome of the men already in the water : upon this I immediately manned out our pinnace, which we had kept close by our fide, with orders to pick up fome of the men, if they could, and fave them from drowning, and immediately come on board with them, because we saw the rest of the boats began to come up : our men in the pinnace followed their orders and took up three men, one of which was just a drowning, and it was a good while before we could recover him. As foon as they were on board, we crouded all the fail we could make, and flood farther out to fea; and we found that when the other three boats came up to the first, they gave over their chace.

BEING thus delivered from a danger, which though I knew not the reason of it, yet seemed to be much greater than I apprehended. I took care that we fhould change our courfe, and not let any one know whither we were going : fo we flood out to fea eastward, quite out of the course ¥3 of

325

of all European fhips, whither they were bound to China or any where elfe, within the commerce of the European nations.

WHEN we were at fea, we began to confult with the two feamen, and inquire first what the meaning of all this should be; and the Dutchman let us into the fecret of it at once, telling us, that the fellow that fold us the fhip, as we faid, was no more than a thief that had ran away with her; then he told us how the captain, whole name too he told us, though I do not remember, was treacheroufly murdered by the natives on the coaft of Mallacca, with three of his men, and that he, this Dutchman and four more got into the woods, where they wandered about a great while, till at length he in particular, in a miraculous manner made his escape, and swam off to a Dutch ship, which failing near the shore in its way from China, had fent their boat on shore for fresh water; that he durst not come to that part of the fhore where the boat was, but fhift in the night to take the water farther off, and the ship's boat took him up,

HE then told us that he went to Batavia, where two of the feamen belonging to the fhip arrived, having deferted the reft in their travels, and gave an account that the fellow who had run away with with the fhip, fold her at Bengal to a fet of pirates, which were gone a cruizing in her; and that they had already taken an English ship and two Dutch ships very richly laden.

This latter part was found to concern us directly, though we knew it to be false; yet as my partner faid very justly, if we had fallen into their hands, and they had had fuch a prepoffeffion against us before-hand, it had been in vaim for us to have defended ourfelves, or to hope for any good quarter at their hands, and efpecially confidering that our accusers had been our judges. and that we could have expected nothing from them but what rage would have dictated, and an ungoverned paffion have executed; and therefore it was his opinion we fhould go directly back to Bengal, from whence we came, without putting in at any port whatever; because there we could give a good account of ourfelves, could prove where we were when the ship put in, of whom we bought her, and the like; and, which was more than all the reit, if we were put upon the neceffity of bringing it before the proper judges, we should be fure to have some justice, and not to be hanged first and judged afterwards.

I was fome time of my partner's opinion; but after a little more ferious thinking, I told him, I Y 4 thought thought it was a very great hazard for us to attempt returning to Bengal, for that we were on the wrong fide the ftraits of Mallacca, and that if the alarm was given we fhould be fure to be way-laid on every fide, as well by the Dutch of Batavia, as the English elsewhere; that if we should be taken, as it were running away, we fhould even condemn ourfelves, and there would want no more evidence to deftroy us : I also asked the English failor's opinion, who faid, he was of my mind, and that we should certainly be taken. This danger a little ftartled my partner, and all the fhip's company, and we imediately refolved to go away to the coaft of Tonquin, and fo on to the coaft of China, and, purfuing the first defign as to trade, find fome way or other to difpose of the ship, and come back in fome of the veffels of the country, fuch as we could get. This was approved of as the beft method for our fecurity; and accordingly we steered away N. N. E. keeping above fifty leagues off from the usual course to the eastward. This, however, put us to fome inconvenience; for first the winds, when we came to the diffance from the shore, seemed to be more fteadily against us, blowing almost trade, as we call it, from the E. and E. N. E. fo that we were a long while upon our voyage, and we were but ill provided with victuals for fo long a voyage; and, which was still worse, there was some danger that that those English and Dutch ships, whose boats pursued us, whereof some were bound that way, might be got in before us, and if not some other ship bound to China might have information of us from them, and pursue us with the same vigour.

I must confess, I was now very uneasy, and thought myfelf, including the late efcape from the longboats, to have been in the moft dangerous condition that ever I was in through all my paft life; for whatever ill circumstances I had been in, I was never purfued for a thief before, nor had I ever done any thing that merited the name of difhonest or fraudulent, much less, thievish; I had chiefly been my own enemy, or as I may rightly fay, I had been no body's enemy but my own; but now I was embarraffed in the worft condition imaginable, for though I was perfectly innocent, I was in no condition to make that innocence appear, and if I had been taken, it had been under a supposed guilt of the worst kind.

THIS made me very anxious to make an efcape though which way to do it I knew not, or what port or place we would go to; my partner feeing me thus dejected, though he was the most concerned at first, began to encourage me, and defcribing 330 fcribing to me the feveral ports of that coaft, told me he would put in on the coaft of Cochinchina, or the bay of Tonquin, intending to go afterwards to Macao, a town once in the poffeffion of the Portuguese, and where still a great many European families resided, and particularly the missionary priess usually went thither in order to their going forward to China.

HITHER then we refolved to go, and accordingly, though after a tedious and irregular course, and very much straitned for provisions, we came within fight of the coaft very early in the morning, and upon reflection upon the pair circumstances we were in, and the danger if we had not escaped, we resolved to put into a small river, which, however, had depth enough of water for us, and to fee if we could either over land, or by the ship's pinnace, come to know what fhips were in any port thereabouts. This happy ftep, was indeed our deliverance, for tho' we did not immediately fee any European ships in the bay of Tonquin, yet the next morning there came into the bay two Dutch fhips, and a third without any colours fpread out, but which we believed to be a Dutchman, paffed by at about two leagues distance, steering for the coast of China; and in the afternoon went by two English ships steering the same course; and, thus we thought thought we faw ourfelves befet with enemies both one way and another. The place we were in was wild and barbarous, the people thieves, even by occupation or profession; and, though it is true, we had not much to feek of them, and except getting a few provisions, cared not how little we had to do with them, yet it was with much difficulty that we kept ourfelves from being infulted by them feveral ways. We were in a fmall river of this country, within a few leagues of its utmost limits northward; and by our boat we coafted north-east to the point of land, which opens the great bay of Tonquin; and it was in this beating up along the fhore that we difcovered as above, that we were furrounded with enemies. The people we were among were the most barbarous of all the inhabitants of the coast, having no correspondence with any other nation, and dealing only in fifh and oil, and fuch grofs commodities; and it may be particularly feen, that they are the most barbarous of any of the inhabitants. Among other cuftoms they have this one, viz. that if any veffel has the misfortune to be fhipwrecked upon their coaft, they prefently make the men all prifoners or flaves; and it was not long before we found a fpice of their kindnefs this way on the occafion following.

I HAVE

I HAVE observed above, that our ship sprung a leak at sea, and that we could not find it out; and however, it happened that, as I have said, it was stopped unexpectedly in the happy minute of our being to be seized by the Dutch and English ships in the bay of Siam; yet as we did not find the ship so perfectly fit and found as we defired, we refolved to lay her on shore and take out what heavy things we had on board and to clean her bottom, and, if possible, to find out where the leaks were.

ACCORDINGLY, having lightened the fhip, and brought all our guns and other moveable things to one fide, we tryed to bring her down, that we might come at her bottom, but on fecond thoughts we did not care to lay her dry on ground, neither could we find out a proper place for it.

THE inhabitants, who had never been acquainted with fuch a fight, came wondering down the fhore to look at us, and feeing the fhip lie down on one fide in fuch a manner, and heeling in towards the fhore, and not feeing our men, who were at work on her bottom with ftages, and with their boats on the off fide, they prefently concluded that the fhip was caft away, and lay fo faft on the ground.

ØN

332

On this fupposition they all came about us in two or three hours time, with ten or twelve large boats, having fome of them eight, fome ten men in a boat, intending, no doubt, to have come on board and plundered the ship, and if they had found us there, to have carried us away for slaves to their king, or whatever they call him, for we knew nothing of their governor.

WHEN they came up to the fhip and began to row round her, they difcovered us all hard at work on the outfide of the fhip's bottom and fide, washing, and graving, and stopping, as every feafaring man knows how.

THEY flood for a while gazing at us, and we, who were a little furprized, could not imagine what their defign was; but, being willing to be fure, we took this opportunity to get fome of us into the fhip, and others to hand down arms and ammunition to thofe that were at work to defend themfelves with, if there fhould be occafion; and it was no more than need, for in lefs than a quarter of an hour's confultation they agreed, it feems, that the fhip was really a wreck; that we were all at work endeavouring to fave her, or to fave our lives by the help of our boats; and when we handed our arms into the boats, they concluded by that motion that we were endeavouring to to fave fome of our goods, upon this they took it for granted we all belonged to them, and away they all came down upon our men, as if it had been in a line of battle.

OUR men feeing fo many of them, began to be frighted, for we lay but in an ill pofture to fight, and cried out to know what they fhould do: I immediately called to the men who worked upon the ftages to flip them down and get up the fide into the fhip, and bad thofe in the boat to row round and come on board; and thofe few of us who were on board worked with all the ftrength and hands we had to bring the fhip to rights; but, however, neither the men upon the ftages, nor thofe in the boats could do as they were ordered before the Cochin-chinefes were upon them, and two of their boats boarded our longboat, and began to lay hold of the men as their prifoners.

THE first man they laid hold of was an English feaman, a stout, strong fellow, who having a musclet in his hand, never offered to fire it, but laid it down in the boat like a fool, as I thought, but he understood his business better than I could teach him, for he grappled the Pagan, and dragged him by main force out of their boat into ours, where, taking him by the two ears, he beat beat his head fo against the boat's gunnel, that the fellow died inftantly in his hands, and in the mean time a Dutchman, who stood next, took up the mufket, and with the but end of it fo laid about him, that he knocked down five of them, who attempted to enter the boat; but this was doing little towards refifting 30 or 40 men, who fearless, because ignorant of their danger, began to throw themfelves into the longboat, where we had but five men in all to defend it : but the following accident, which deferved our laughter, gave our men a compleat victory.

Our carpenter being preparing to grave the outfide of the fhip, as well as to pay the feams, where he had caulked her to ftop the leaks, had two kettles just let down into the boat, one filled with boiling pitch, and the other with rofin, tallow, and oil, and fuch fluff as the fhipwrights use for that work, and the man that tended the carpenter had a great iron ladle in his hand, with which he fupplied the men that were at work with that hot fluff; two of the enemies men entered the boat just where this fellow flood, being in the fore-sheets, he immediately faluted them with a ladle full of the ftuff boiling hot, which fo burned and fcalded them, being half naked, that they roared out like two bulls, and enraged with the fire leaped both into the fea. The carpenter penter faw it, and cried out, well done, Jack, give them fome more of it; and ftepping forward himfelf, takes one of their mops, and dipping it in the pitch-pot, he and his man threw it among them fo plentifully, that, in fhort, of all the men in the three boats there was not one that escaped being scalded and burned with it in a most frightful, pitiful manner, and made such a howling and crying that I never heard an uglier noife, for it is worth obferving, that though pain naturally makes all people cry out, yet every nation has a particular way of exclamation, and makes noifes as different from one another as their fpeech. I cannot give the noife thefe creatures made a better name than howling, nor a name more proper to the tone of it; for I never heard any thing more like the noife of the wolves, which, as I have faid. I heard howl in the forest on the frontiers of Languedoc.

I was never better pleafed with a victory in my life; not only as it was a perfect furprize to me, and that our danger was imminent before; but, as we got this victory without any bloodfhed, except of that man the fellow killed with his naked hands, and which I was very much concerned at; for I was fick of killing fuch poor favage wretches, even though it was in my own defence, knowing they came on errands which they

336

they thought just and knew no better; and that though it may be a just thing, because necessfary, for there is no necessfary wickedness in nature, yet I thought it was a fad life, which we must be always obliged to be killing our fellow creatures to preferve our own, and indeed I think fo still, and I would even now fussfer a great deal rather than I would take away the life even of that person injuring me; and I believe all confidering people, who know the value of life, would be of my opinion, at least, they would, if they entered feriously into the confideration of it.

But to return to my ftory, all the while this was doing my partner and I, who managed the reft of the men on board, had with great dexterity brought the ship almost to rights, and having gotten the guns into their places again, the gunner called to me to bid our boat get out of the way, for he would let fly among them. I called back again to him and bid him not offer to fire, for the carpenter would do the work without him, but bad him heat another pitch kettle, which our cook, who was on board took care of; but the enemy was fo terrified with what they had met with in their first attack, that they would not come on again, and fome of them that were farthest off, seeing the ship swim, as it were upright, began, as we suppose, to see their VOL. II.  $\mathbf{Z}$ mistake. mistake and give over the enterprize, finding it was not as they expected. Thus we got clear of this merry fight, and having gotten fome rice, and fome roots and bread, with about fixteen hogs on board two days before, we refolved to flay here no longer, but go forward whatever became of it, for we made no doubt but we fhould be furrounded the next day with rogues enough, perhaps more than our pitch-kettle would difpofe of for us.

WE therefore got all our things on board the fame evening, and the next morning were ready to fail; in the mean time, lying at anchor at fome distance, we were not so much concerned, being now in a fighting posture, as well as in a failing posture, if any enemy had presented. The next day, having finished our work within board, and finding our fhip was perfectly healed of all her leaks we fet fail. We would have gone into the bay of Tonquin, for we wanted to inform ourfelves of what was to be known concerning the Dutch ships that had been there, but we durft not stand in there, because we had seen several thips go in, as we supposed, but a little before, fo we kept on N. E. towards the ifle of Formofa, as much afraid of being feen by a Dutch or Englifh merchant fhip, as a Dutch, or Englifh merchant ship in the Mediterranean is of an Algerine man of war.

338

WHEN we were thus got to fea we kept out N. E. as if we would go to the Manillas or the Philippine iflands, and this we did that we might not fall into the way of any of our European fhips, and then we steered north till we came to the latitude of 22 deg. 30 min. by which means we made to the ifland Formofa directly, where we came to an anchor, in order to get water and fresh provisions, which the people there, who are very courteous and civil in their manners, fupplied us with willingly, and dealt very fairly and punctually with us in all their agreements and bargains, which is what we did not find among other people, and may be owing to the remains of christianity which was once planted here by a Dutch miffionary of Protestants, and is a testimony of what I have often observed, viz. That the chriftian religion always civilizes the people and reforms their manners, where it is received, whether it works faving effects upon them or no.

FROM thence we failed ftill north, keeping the coaft of China at an equal diftance, till we knew we were beyond all the ports of China where our European fhips ufually come; being refolved, if poffible, not to fall into any of their hands, efpecially in this country, where, as our circum-Z 2 ftances stances were, we could not fail of being entirely ruined.

340 ADVÉNTÜRÉS OF

BEINO now come to the latitude of 30 deg. we refolved to put into the first trading port we should come at, and standing in for the shore a boat came off two leagues to us, with an old Portugues fe pilot on board, who knowing us to be an European ship came to offer his service, which indeed we were glad of, and took him on board; upon which, without asking us whither we would go? he distinged the boat he came in and sent them back.

I THOUGHT it was now fo much in our choice to make the old man carry us whither we would, that I began to talk to him about carrying us to the gulph of Nanquin, which is the moft northern part of the coaft of China. The old man faid, he knew the gulph of Nanquin very well, but, fmiling, afked us, what we would do there?

I TOLD him we would fell our cargo and purchafe China wares, callicoes, raw-filks, tea, wrought filks, &c. and fo would return by the fame courfe we came. He told us our beft port had been to have put in at Macao, where we could not have failed of a market for our opium to our fatisfaction, and might for our money have purchafed chafed all forts of China goods as cheap as we could at Nanquin.

Not being able to put the old man out of his talk, of which he was very opiniated or conceited, I told him we were gentlemen as well as merchants, and that we had a mind to go and fee the great city of Pecking, and the famous court of the monarch of China. Why then, fays the old man, you fhould go to Ningpo, where, by the river which runs into the fea there, you may go up within five leagues of the great canal. This canal is a navigable river, which goes through the heart of that waft empire of China, croffes all the rivers, paffes fome confiderable hills by the help of fluices and gates, and goes up to the city of Pecking, being in length near 270 leagues.

WELL, faid I, Seignior Portugueze, but that is not our bufinefs now, the great queftion is, if you can carry us up to the city of Nanquin, from whence we can travel to Pecking afterwards? Yes, yes, he faid, he could do fo very well, and that there was a great Dutch fhip gone up that way just before. This gave me a little shock, for a Dutch ship was now our terror, and we had much rather have met the devil, at least if he had not come in too frightful a figure; and we depended upon it that a Dutch ship would be our Z 3 destruction, destruction, for we were in no condition to fight them; all the ships they trade with into those parts being of great burthen, and of much greater force than we were.

THE old man found me a little confused, and under fome concern when he named a Dutch ship, and faid to me, Sir, you need be under no apprehensions of the Dutch, I suppose they are not now at war with your nation. No, fays I, that's true, but I know not what liberties men may take when they are out of the reach of the law. Why, fays he, you are no pirates, what need you fear? They will not meddle with peaceable merchants fure.

IF I had any blood in my body that did not fly up into my face at that word, it was hindered by fome ftop in the veffels, appointed by nature to prevent it, for it put me into the greatest diforder and confusion imaginable; nor was it possible for me to conceal it fo, but the old man easily perceived it.

SIR, fays he, I find you are in fome diforder in your thoughts at my talk; pray be pleafed to go which way you think fit, and depend upon it I'll do you all the fervice I can. Why, Seignior, faid I, it is true, I am a little unfettled in my refolution folution at this time whither to go in particular; and I am fomething more for what you faid about pirates; I hope there are no pirates in these feas; we are but in an ill condition to meet with them, for you see we have but a small force, and but very weakly manned.

O SIR, fays he, don't be concerned, I do not know that there has been any pirates in these feas these 15 years, except one, which was seen, as I hear, in the bay of Siam, about a month fince, but you may be assured the is gone to the fouthward; nor was she a ship of any great force or fit for the work; she was not built for a privateer, but was run away by a reprobate crew that was on board, after the captain and some of his men had been murdered by the Mallayans, at or near the island of Sumatra,

WHAT! faid I, feeming to know nothing of the matter, did they murder the captain? No, faid he, I don't, understand that they murdered him, but as they afterwards run away with the ship, it is generally believed that they betrayed him into the hands of the Mallayans, who did murder him, and perhaps they procured them to do it. Why then, faid I, they deferve death as much as if they had done it themselves. Nay, fays the old man, they do deferve it, and they Z 4 will will certainly have it if they light upon any English or Dutch ship; for they have all agreed together, they if that meet that rogue they'll give him no quarter.

Bur, faid I to him, you fay the pirate is gone out of those seas, how can they meet with him? Why that's true, fays he, they do fay fo, but he was, as I tell you, in the bay of Siam, in the river Cambodia, and was difcovered there by fome Dutchmen who belonged to the ship, and who were left on fhore when they ran away with her; and fome English and Dutch traders being in the river, they were within a little of taking him: nay, faid he, if the foremost boats had been well feconded by the reft, they had certainly taken him; but he finding only two boats within reach of him tacked about and fired at those two and difabled them before the other came up, and then ftanding off to fea the others were not able to follow him, and fo he got away; but they have all fo exact a description of the ship, that they will be fure to know him, and wherever they find him they have vowed to give no quarter to either the captain or the feamen, but to hang them all up at the yard-arm.

WHAT! fays I, will they execute them right or wrong, hang them first and judge them afterwards? wards? O Sir, fays the old pilot, there is no need to make a formal bufinefs of it with fuch rogues as those; let them tie them back to back and fet them a diving, 'tis no more than they deferve.

I KNEW I had my old man fast on board, and that he could do me no harm, fo that I turned fhort upon him : Well now, Seignior faid I, and this is the very reafon why I would have you carry us up to Nanquin, and not put back to Macao, or to any other part of the country where the English or Dutch ships come; for be it known to you, Seignior, those captains of the English and Dutch ships are a parcel of rash, proud, infolent fellows, that neither know what belongs to juffice, or how to behave themfelves as the laws of God and nature direct; but being proud of their offices, and not understanding their power, they would act the murderer to punish robbers, would take upon them to infult men falfely accufed, and determine them guilty without due inquiry; and perhaps I may live to bring fome of them to an account for it, where they may be taught how justice is to be executed, and that no man ought to be treated as a criminal till fome evidence may be had of the crime, and that he is the man.

346

WITH this I told him, that this was the very fhip they attacked, and gave him a full account of the fkirmifh we had with their boats, and how foolifhly and coward-like they behaved. I told hm al the ftory of cur buying the fhip, and how the Dutchman ferved us. I told him the reafons I had to believe that this ftory of killing the mafter by the Mallayans was true, as alfo the running away with the fhip; but that it was all a fiction of their own to fuggeft that the men were turned pirates, and they ought to have been fure it was fo before they had ventured to attack us by furprize and oblige us to refift them; adding, that they would have the blood of thofe men, whom we killed there in our juft defence, to anfwer for.

THE old man was amazed at this relation, and told us we were very much in the right to go away to the north, and that if he might advife us, it fhould be to fell the fhip in China, which we might very well do, and buy or build another in the country; and, faid he, though you will not get fo good a fhip, yet you may get one able enough to carry you and all your goods back again to Bengal, or any where elfe. I told him I would take his advice when I came to any port where I could find a fhip for my turn, or get any cuftomer to buy this. He replied, I fhould meet with cuftomers enough for the fhip at Nanquin,' and that a Chinefe jonk would ferve me very well to go back again, and that he would procure me both people to buy one and fell the other.

WELL but, Seignior, fays I, as you fay they know the fhip fo well, I may perhaps, if I follow your measures, be instrumental to bring some honeft, innocent men into a terrible broil, and perhaps to be murdered in cold blood, for wherever they find the fhip they will prove the guilt upon the men, by proving this was the fhip, and fo innocent men may probably be overpowered and murdered. Why, fays the old man, I'll find out a way to prevent that alfo, for as I know all those commanders you speak of very well, and shall fee them all as they pass by, I will be fure to fet them to rights in the thing, and let them know that they had been fo much in the wrong; that though the people who were. on board at first might run away with the ship, yet it was not true that they had turned pirates; and, that in particular, thefe were not the men that first went off with the ship, but innocently bought her for their trade; and I am perfuaded they will fo far believe me as at least to act more cautiously for the time to come.

WHILE these things were passing between us, by way of discourse, we went forward directly for Nanquin, and in about thirteen days fail came to to an anchor at the fouth-weft point of the great gulph of Nanquin, where by the way, I came by accident to understand that two Dutch ships were gone the length before me, and that I should certainly fall into their hands. I confulted my partner again in this exigency, and he was as much at a lofs as I was, and would very gladly have been fafe on fhore almost any where : however, I was not in fuch perplexity neither, but I afked the old pilot, if there was no creek or harbour which I might put into and purfue my bufinefs with the Chinefe privately, and he in no danger of the enemy? He told me if I would fail to the fouthward about forty-two leagues, there was a little port called Quinchang, where the fathers of the miffion ufually landed from Macao, on their progrefs to teach the christian religion to the Chinese, and where no European ships ever put in; and if I-thought to put in there, I might confider what farther course to take when I was on shore. He confessed, he faid, it was not a place for merchants, except that at fome certain times they had a kind of fair there, when the merchants from Japan came over thither to buy the Chinefe merchandizes,

WE all agreed to go back to this place, the name of the port, as he called it, I may perhaps fpell wrong, for I do not particularly remember it, it; having loft this, together with the names of many other places fet down in a little pocketbook which was fpoiled by the water by an accident; but this I remember, that the Chinese or Japanese merchants we corresponded with called it by a different name from that which our Portugueze pilot gave it, and pronounced it as above, Quinchang.

348

As we were unanimous in our refolution to go to this place, we weighed the next day, having only gone twice on fhore where we were to get fresh water, on both which occasions the people of the country were very civil to us, and brought us abundance of things to fell to us, I mean of provisions, plants, roots, tea, rice, and some fowls, but nothing without money.

We came to the other port (the wind being contrary) not till five days, but it was very much to our fatisfaction; and I was joyful, and I may fay thankful, when I fet my foot on fhore, refolving, and my partner too, that if it was poffible to difpofe of ourfelves and effects any other way, though not every way to our fatisfaction, we would never fet one foot on board that unhappy veffel more; and indeed I muft acknowledge, that of all the circumftances of life that ever I had any experience of, nothing makes mankind 350 mankind fo completely miferable as that of being in conftant fear. Well does the fcripture fay, the fear of man brings a fnare; it is a life of death, and the mind is fo entirely fuppreffed by it that it is capable of no relief.

Nor did it fail of its usual operations upon the fancy, by heightening every danger, reprefenting the English and Dutch captains to be men incapable of hearing reafon, or of diffinguishing between honest men and rogues, or between a ftory calculated for our own turn, made out of nothing, on purpose to deceive, and a true genuine account of our whole voyage, progress and defign; for we might many ways have convinced any reafonable creature that we were not pirates; the goods we had on board, the courfe we steered, our frankly fhewing ourfelves, and entering into fuch and fuch ports; and even our very manner, the force we had, the number of men, the few arms, little ammunition, fhort provisions; all thefe would have ferved to convince any men that we were no pirates. The opium and other goods we had on board would make it appear the ship had been at Bengal. The Dutchman, who it was faid, had the names of all the men that were in the fhip, might eafily fee that we were a mixture of English, Portugueze, and Indians, and but two Dutchmen on board. Thefe and many many other particular circumstances, might have made it evident to the understanding of any commander, whose hands we might fall into, that we were no pirates.

But fear, that blind useless passion, worked inother way, and threw us into the vapours; it bewildered our understandings, and set the imagination at work to form a thousand terrible things that perhaps might never happen. We first supposed, as indeed every body had related to us, that the feamen on board the English and Dutch thips, but efpecially the Dutch, were fo enraged at the name of a pirate, and especially at our beating off their boats and escaping, that they would not give themfelves leave to inquire whether we were pirates or no, but would execute us off hand, as we call it, without giving us any room for a defence. We reflected, that there was really fo much apparent evidence before them, that they would fcarce inquire after any more; as first, that the ship was certainly the fame, and that fome of the feamen among them knew her and had been on board her; and fecondly, that when we had intelligence at the river of Cambodia, that they were coming down to examine us, we fought their boats and fled; fo that we made no doubt but they were fully fatisfied of our being pirates, as we were fatisfied of of the contrary; and, as I often faid, I know not but I fhould have been apt to have taken those circumstances for evidence if the tables were turned, and my cafe was theirs, and have made no foruple of cutting all the crew to pieces, without belleving, or perhaps confidering, what they might have to offer in their defence.

But let that be how it will, these were our apprehensions, and both my partner and I fearce flept a night without dreaming of halters and yard-atms, that is to fay, gibbets; of fighting and being taken, of killing and being killed; and one night I was in fuch a fury in my dream, fancying the Dutchmen had boarded us, and I was knocking one of their seamen down, that I struck my double fift against the fide of the cabin I lay in, with such a force as wounded my hand grievously, broke my knuckles, and cut and bruised the flesh; fo that it waked me out of my fleep.

ANOTHER apprehension I had, was of the cruel usage we might meet with from them, if we fell into their hands; then the story of Amboyna came into my head, and how the Dutch might perhaps torture us, as they did our countrymen there, and make some of our men, by extremity of torture, confess those crimes they never were guilty of, or own themselves and all of us to be pirates, and fo fo they would put us to death, with a formal appearance of juffice; and that they might be tempted to do this for the gain of our fhip and cargo, which was worth four or five thousand pounds, put all together.

THESE things tormented me and my partner too, night and day; nor did we confider that the captains of fhips have no authority to act thus; and if we had furrendered prifoners to them, they could not anfwer the deftroying us, or torturing us, but would be accountable for it when they came into their own country; this, I fay, gave me no fatisfaction; for if they will act thus with us, what advantage would it be to us that they fhould be called to an account for it; or if we were first to be murdered, what fatisfaction would it be to us to have them punished when they came home?

I CANNOT refrain taking notice here, what reflections I now had upon the vaft variety of my particular circumftances, how hard I thought it was that I, who had fpent forty years in a life of continued difficulties, and was at laft come as it were to the port or haven which all men drive at, viz. to have reft and plenty, fhould be a volunteer in new forrows, by my own unhappy choice; and that I, who had efcaped fo many dangers in my Vol. II. A 2 youth, youth, fhould now come to be hanged in my old age, and in fo remote a place, for a crime I was not in the leaft inclined to, much lefs guilty of.

 $\mathcal{D}$

AFTER these thoughts fomething of religion would come in; and I fhould be confidering, that this feemed to me to be a disposition of immediate providence, and I ought to look upon it and fubmit to'it as fuch; that although I was innocent as to men, I was far from being innocent as to my Maker, and I ought to look in and examine what other crimes in my life were most obvious to me, and for which providence might juftly inflict this punifhment as a retribution; and that I ought to fubmit to this just as I would to a shipwreck, if it had pleafed God to have brought fuch a difafter upon me.

In its turn, natural courage would fometimes take its place, and then I would be talking myfelf up to vigorous refolutions, that I would not be taken to be barbaroufly ufed by a parcel of mercilefs wretches in cold blood : that it were much better to have fallen into the hands of the favages, though I was fure they would feaft upon me, when they had taken me, than those, who would perhaps glut their rage upon me by inhuman tortures and barbarities; that in the cafe of the favages, I always refolved to die fighting, to the the laft gafp; and why fhould I not do fo, feeing it was much more dreadful to me, at leaft, to think of falling into thefe mens hands, than ever I was to think of being eaten by men; for the favages, give them their due, would not eat a man till he was killed and dead; but that thefe men had many arts beyond the cruelty of death. Whenever thefe thoughts prevailed, I was fure to put myfelf into a kind of fever, with the agitations of a fuppofed fight; my blood would boil, and my eyes fparkle, as if I was engaged, and I always refolved to take no quarter at their hands; but even at laft, if I could refift no longer, I would blow up the fhip and all that was in her, and leave them but little booty to boaft of.

By how much the greater weight, the anxieties and perplexities of these things were to our thoughts while we were at sea, by so much the greater was our fatisfaction, when we saw ourfelves on shore; and my partner told me he dreamed, that he had a very heavy load upon his back, which he was to carry up a hill, and found that he was not able to stand long under it, but that the Portugueze pilot came and took it off his back, and the hill disappeared, the ground before him shewing all smooth and plain, and truly it was so, we were all like men, who had a load taken off their backs.

A a 2

For
For my part, I had a weight taken off from my heart, that it was not able any longer to bear: and as I faid above, we refolved to go no more to fea in that fhip; when we came on fhore, the old pilot who was now our friend, got us a lodging and a warehouse for our goods, which by the way was much the fame; it was a little houfe or hut, with a larger house joining to it, all built with canes, and pallifadoed round with large canes, to keep out pilfering thieves, of which it feents there were not a few in that country; however, the magistrates allowed us also a little guard, and we had a centinel with a kind of halberd, or half pike, who ftood centinel at our door; to whom we allowed a pint of rice, and a little piece of money, about the value of three-pence per day, fo that our goods were kept very fafe.

The fair or mart, usually kept in this place, had been over fome time; however, we found that there were three or four jonks in the river, and two japanners, I mean, fhips from Japan, with goods which they had bought in China, and were not gone away, having fome Japanese merchants on shore.

The first thing our old Portugueze pilot did for us, was to bring us acquainted with three missionary Romiss priests who were in town, and who who had been there fome time, converting the people to Christianity; but we thought they made but poor work of it, and made them but forry Christians when they had done: however, that was none of our bufiness : one of these was a Frenchman, whom they called father Simon ; another was a Portugueze, and the third a Genoefe; but father Simon was courteous, easy in his manner, and very agreeable company; the other two were more referved, feemed rigid and auftere, and applied ferioufly to the work they came about, viz. to talk with and infinuate themfelves among the inhabitants, wherever they had opportunity; we often eat and drank with those men, and though I must confess the conversion, as they call it, of the Chineses to Christianity, is so far from the true conversion required, to bring heathen people to the faith of Chrift, that it feems to amount to little more than letting them know the name of Chrift, and fay fome prayers to the Virgin Mary and her Son, in a tongue which they understand not, and to crofs themfelves and the like; yet it must be- confessed that these religious, whom we call miffronaries, have a firm belief that these people shall be faved, and that they are the inftruments of it; and on this account they undergo not only the fatigue of the voyage, and the hazards of living in fuch places, but oftentimes A a z death death itfelf, with the most violent tortures, for the fake of this work.

But to return to my flory : this French prieft, father Simon, was appointed, it feems, by order of the chief of the miffion, to go up to Pecking, the royal feat of the Chinese emperor, and waited only for another prieft, who was ordered to come to him from Macao, to go along with him, and we fcarce ever met together but he was inviting me to go that journey, telling me how he would fhew me all the glorious things of that mighty empire, and among the reft, the greatest city in the world; a city, faid he, that your London and our Paris, put together, cannot be equal to, This was the city of Pecking, which I confess is very great, and infinitely full of people; but as I looked on those things with different eyes from other men, fo I shall give my opinion of them in few words, when I come in the course of my travels to fpeak more particularly of them.

But first, I come to my friar, or missionary: dining with him one day, and being very merry together, I shewing fome little inclination to go with him, and he pressed me and my partner very hard, and with a great many persuasions to confent: Why father Simon, fays my partner, should you defire our company fo much: you know we are are heretics, and you do not love us, nor cannot keep us company with any pleafure ! O, fays he, you may perhaps be good catholics in time ; my bufinefs here is to convert heathens, and who knows but I may convert you too. Very well. father, faid I, fo you will preach to us all the way. I will not be troublefome to you, fays he, our religion does not divest us of good manners; befides, fays he, we are here like countrymen, and fo we are, compared to the place we are in; and if you are hugonots, and I a catholic, we may all be chriftians at last; at least, faid he, we are all gentlemen, and we may converse fo, without being uneafy to one another. I liked that part of his difcourfe very well, and it began to put me in mind of my prieft that I had left in the Brafils; but this father Simon did not come up to his character, by a great deal; for though father Simon had no appearance of a criminal levity in him neither, yet he had not that fund of chriftian zeal, ftrict piety, and fincere affection to religion, that my other good ecclefiaftic had, of whom I. have faid fo much.

Bur to leave him a little, though he never left us, nor foliciting us to go with him; but we had fomething elfe before us at first, for we had all this while our ship and our merchandize to difpose of, and we began to be very doubtful what A a 4 we we fhould do, for we were now in a place of verw little bufines; and once I was about to venture to fail for the river of Kilam, and the city of Nanquin, but providence feemed now more vifibly, as I thought, than ever to concern itfelf in our affair; and I was encouraged from this very time to think, I fhould one way or other get out of this tangled circumftance, and be brought home to my own country again, though I had not the least view of the manner; and when I began to think of it, could not imagine by what method it was to be done; providence, I fay, began here to clear up our way a little; and the first thing that offered was, that our old Portugueze pilot brought a Japan merchant to us, who inquired what goods we had; and in the first place he bought all our opium, and gave us a very good price for it, paying us in gold by weight, fome in fmall pieces of their own coin, and fome in fmall wedges, of about ten or eleven ounces each : while we were dealing with him for our opium, it came into my head, that he might perhaps deal with us for the fhip too; and I ordered the interpreter to propose it to him; he fhrunk up his fhoulders at it, when it was first proposed to him : but in a few days after he came to me with one of the miffionary priefts for his interpreter, and told me he had a propofal to make to me, and that was this: he had bought a great quantity of goods of us, when he had no thoughts or propofals propofals made to him of buying the fhip : and that therefore, he had not money enough to pay for the fhip; but if I would let the fame men who were in the fhip navigate her, he would hire the ship to go to Japan, and would fend them from thence to the Philippine islands with another loading, which he would pay the freight of, before they went from Japan; and that at their return he would buy the fhip: I began to liften to his propofal, and fo eager did my head ftill run upon rambling, that I could not but begin to entertain a notion of going myfelf with him, and fo to fail from the Philippine iflands, away to the fouth feas; and accordingly I afked the Japanese merchant, if he would not hire us to the Philippine islands and discharge us there; he faid, no, he could not do that, for then he could not have the return of his cargo; but he would discharge us in Japan, he faid, at the fhip's return; well, still I was for taking him at that proposal, and going myfelf; but my partner wiser than myself, perfuaded me from it, representing the dangers as well of feas, as of the Japanese, who are a false, cruel and treacherous people; and then of the Spaniards at the Philippines, more falfe, more cruel, more treacherous than they.

BUT to bring this long turn of our affairs to a conclution; the first thing we had to do, was to confult with the captain of the ship, and with his men, men, and know if they were willing to go to Japan; and while I was doing this, the young man whom my nephew had left with me as my companion for my travels, came to me, and told me, that he thought that voyage promifed very fair, and that there was a great profpect of advantage, and he would be very glad if I undertook it; but that if I would not, and would give him leave, he would go as a merchant, or how I pleafed to order him; that if ever he came to England, and I was there and alive, he would render me a faithful account of his fuccefs, and it fhould be as much mine as I pleafed.

36 F

I was really loth to part with him, but confidering the profpect of advantage which was really confiderable, and that he was a young fellow, as likely to do well in it, as any I knew, I inclined to let him go: but first I told him I would confult my partner, and give him an anfwer the next day; my partner and I difcourfed about it, and my partner made a most generous offer; he told me, you know it has been an unlucky fhip, and we refolved not to go to fea in it again; if your steward, fo he called my man, will venture the voyage, I will leave my fhare of the veffel to him, and let him make the beft of it; and if we live to meet in England, and he meets with fuccefs abroad, he fhall account for one half of

of the profits of the ship's freight to us, the other shall be his own.

IF my partner, who was no way concerned with my young man, made him fuch an offer, I could do no lefs than offer him the fame; and all the fhip's company being willing to go with him, we made over half the fhip to him in property, and took a writing from him obliging him to account for the other, and away he went to Japan: the Japan merchant proved a very punctual honeft man to him, protected him at Japan, and got him a licence to come on shore, which the Europeans in general, have not lately obtained; payed him his freight very punctually, fent him to the Philippines, loaden with Japan and China wares, and a fupercago of their own, who trafficking with the Spaniards, brought back European goods again, and a great quantity of cloves and other fpices; and there he was not only payed his freight very well, and at a very good price, but being not willing to fell the fhip -then, the merchant furnished him with goods on his own account, that for fome money, and fome fpices of his own, which he brought with him, he went back to the Manillas to the Spaniards, where he fold his cargo very well; here having gotten a good acquaintance at Manilla, he got this fhip made a free fhip; and the governor of Manilla

Manilla hired him, to go to Acapulco in America, on the coaft of Mexico, and gave him a licence to land there, and to travel to Mexico, and to pais in any Spanish ship to Europe with all his men.

He made the voyage to Acapulco very happily, and there he fold his fhip; and having there alfo obtained allowance to travel by land to Porto Bello, he found means fome how or other to get to Jamaica, with all his treafure, and about eight years after came to England, exceeding rich; of which I fhall take notice in its place: in the mean time I return to our particular affairs.

BEING now to part with the fhip and fhip's company, it came before us of course to confider what recompence we fhould give to the two men that gave us fuch timely notice of the defign against us in the river Cambodia : the truth was, they had done us a confiderable fervice, and deferved well at our hands; though by the way they were a couple of rogues too; for as they believed the ftory of our being pirates, and that we had really run away with the fhip, they came down to us not only to betray the defign that was formed against us, but to go to fea with us as pirates; and one of them confessed afterwards, that nothing else but the hopes of going a roguing, brought brought him to do it : however, the fervice they did us was not the lefs, and therefore, as I had promifed to be grateful to them, I first ordered the money to be paid them, which they faid was due to them on board their respective spins; over and above that, I gave each of them a small sum of money in gold, which contented them very well: then I made the Englishman gunner in the spin, the gunner being now made second mate and purfer; the Dutchman I made boatswain; fo they were both very well pleased, and proved very ferviceable, being both able seamen, and very flout fellows.

WE were now on fhore in China; if I thought myfelf banifhed and remote from my own country at Bengal, where I had many ways to get home for my money, what could I think of myfelf now, when I was gotten about a thousand leagues farther off from home, and perfectly defitute of all manner of prospect of return.

ALL we had for it was this, that in about four months time there was to be another fair at the place where we were, and then we might be able to purchafe all forts of the manufactures of the country, and withal, might poffibly find fome Chinefe jonks or veffels from Tonquin, that would be to be fold, and would carry us and our goods whither whither we pleafed : this I liked very well, and refolved to wait; befides, as our particular perfons were not obnoxious, fo if any English or Dutch ships came thither, perhaps we might have an opportunity to load our goods, and get passage to fome other place in India, nearer home. Upon these hopes we refolved to continue here, but to divert ourselves we took two or three journeys into the country; first we went ten days journey, to see the city of Nanquin, a city well worth seeing indeed: they fay it has a million of 'people in it; it is regularly built, the streets all exactly strait, and cross one another in direct lines, which gives the figure of it, great advantage.

But when I come to compare the miferable people of these countries with ours, their fabrics, their manner of living, their government, their religion, their wealth, and their glory as fome call it, I must-confess that I fearcely think it worth my while to mention them here.

It is very obfervable that we wonder at the grandeur, the riches, the pomp, the ceremonies, the government, the manufactures, the commerce and the conduct of these people; not that it is to be wondered at, or indeed in the least to be regarded; but because, having first a true notion of the barbarity of those countries, the rudeness nefs and the ignorance that prevails there, we do not expect to find any fuch things fo far off.

OTHERWISE, what are their buildings to the palaces and royal buildings of Europe? What their trade to the universal commerce of England, Holland, France and Spain? What are their cities to ours, for wealth, ftrength, gaiety of apparel, rich furniture, and an infinite variety? What are their forts, fupplied with a few jonks and barks, to our navigation, our merchant fleets, our large and powerful navies? our city of London has more trade than half their mighty empire : one English, Dutch or French man of war of 80 guns, would be able to fight almost all the fhipping belonging to China: but the greatnefs of their wealth, their trade, the power of their government, and the ftrength of their armies, may be a little furprifing to us, becaufe, as I have faid, confidering them as a barbarous nation of Pagans, little better than favages, we did not expect fuch things among them : and this indeed is the advantage with which all their greatness and power is reprefented to us; otherwife it is in itfelf nothing at all; for as I have faid of their fhips, fo may be of their armies and troops; all the forces of their empire, though they were to bring two millions of men into the field together. would be able to do nothing but ruin the country, and and starve themselves, if they were to befiege a ftrong town in Flanders, or to fight a disciplined army; one good line of German cuiraffiers, or of French eavalry, might withstand all the horfe of China; a million of their foot could not stand before one embattled body of our infantry, posted fo as not to be furrounded, though they were to be not one to twenty in number; nay, I do not boaft if I fay that 30,000 German or English foot, and 10,000 horfe well managed could defeat all the forces of China; and fo of our fortified towns, and of the art of our engineers in affaulting and defending towns ; there is not a forrified town in China could hold out one month against the batteries and attacks of an European army, and at the fame time, all the armies of China could never take fuch a town as Dunkirk, provided it was not ftarved, no, not in a ten years fiege : they have fire-arms, it is true, but they are aukward and uncertain in thir going off; and their powder has but little ftrength; their armies are badly difciplined, and want skill to attack, or temper to refreat; and therefore I must confess it feemed ftrange to me, when I came home, and heard our people fay fuch fine things of the power, riches, glory, magnificence, and trade of the Chinefe; becaufe as far as I faw they appeared to be a contemptible hoord or croud of ignorant fordid flaves ; fubjected to a government qualified only only to rule fuch a people; and were not its diftance inconceivably great from Muscovy, and the Muscovite empire in a manner as rude, impotent, and ill-governed as they, the czar of Mufcovy might with eafe drive them all out of their country, and conquer them in one campaign; and had the czar (who is now a growing prince) fallen this way instead of attacking the warlike Swedes, and had he equally improved himfelf in the art of war, as they fay he has done, and if none of the powers of Europe would have envied or interrupted him, he might by this time have been emperor of China, inftead of being beaten by the king of Sweden at Narva, when the latter was not one to fix in number. As their ftrength and their grandeur, fo their navigation, commerce and hufbandry is very imperfect, compared to the fame things in Europe : alfo in their knowledge, their learning and in their skill in the fciences, they are either very aukward or defective, though they have globes and fpheres, and a imatch of the knowledge of the mathematics, and think they know more than all the world befides ; but they know little of the motions of the heavenly bodies, and fo grofly and abfurdly ignorant are their common people, that when the fun is eclipfed, they think a great dragon has affaulted it, and going to run away with it, and they fall a clattering with all the drums and kettles in the VOL. II. Bb country country to fright the monfter away, just as we do to hive a fwarm of bees.

370 ADVENTURÉS OF

As this is the only excursion of this kind which I have made in all the accounts I have given of my travels, fo I shall make no more such; it is none of my bufinels or any part of my defign. but to give an account of my own adventures through a life of inimitable wanderings, and a long variety of changes, which perhaps few that come after me will have heard the like of; I shall therefore fay very little of all the mighty places, defart countries, and numerous people I have yet to pafs through, more than relates to my own ftory, and which my concern among them will make neceffary. I was now as near as I can compute in the heart of China, about the latitude of 30 degrees north of the line, for we were returned from Nanquin: I had indeed a mind to fee the city of Pecking, which I had heard fo much of, and father Simon importuned me daily to do it; at length his time of going away' being fet, and the other miffionary who was to go with him being arrived from Maczo, it was neceffary that we should refolve either to go or not; fo I referred him to my partner, and left it wholly to his choice, who at length refolved it in the affirmative, and we prepared for our journey. We fet out with very good advantage, as to finding ing the way, for we got leave to travel in the retinue of one of their mandarins, a kind of viceroy or principal magistrate in the province where they refide, and who take great state upon them, travelling with great attendance, and with great homage from the people, who are fometimes greatly impoverished by them, being obliged to furnish provisions for them and all their attendants in their journies. That which I particularly obferved, as to our travelling with his baggage, was this, that though we received fufficient provisions both for ourfelves and our horfes, from the country, as belonging to the mandarin, yet we were obliged to pay for every thing we had, after the market price of the country, and the mandarin's fleward collected it duly from us; fo that our travelling in the retinue of the mandarin, though it was a very great kindnefs to us, was not fuch a mighty favour in him, but was indeed a great advantage to him, confidering there was above thirty other people travelled in the fame manner befide us, under the protection of his retinue; fo that I fay it was a great advantage to him; for the country furnished all the provisions for nothing, to him, and he took all our money for them.

WE were twenty-five days travelling to Pecking, through a country infinitely populous, but I B b 2 think think badly cultivated; the hufbandry, the œconomy, and the way of living milerable, though they boaft fo much of the industry of the people: I fay miferable, if compared with our own, but not fo to these poor wretches who know no other. The pride of the people is infinitely great, and exceeded by nothing but their poverty in fome parts, which adds to that which I call their mifery; and I must needs think the naked favages of America live much more happy than the poorer fort of these, because, as they have nothing, fo they defire nothing; whereas thefe are proud and infolent, and in the main are in many parts mere beggars and drudges; their oftentation is inexpreffible, and if they can, they love to keep multitudes of fervants or flaves, which is to the last degree ridiculous, as well as their contempt of all the world but themfelves.

I MUST confefs, I travelled more pleafantly afterwards in the defarts and vaft wilderneffes of Grand Tartary than here, and yet the roads here are well paved and well kept, and very convenient for travellers; but nothing was more aukward to me than to fee fuch a haughty, imperious, infolent people, in the midft of the groffeft fimplicity and ignorance; and my friend, father Simon, and I, used to be very merry upon these occasions, to fee the beggarly pride pride of these people: for example, coming by the house of a country gentleman, as father Simon called him, about ten leagues off the city of Nanquin, we had first of all the honour to ride with the master of the house about two miles; the state he rode in was a perfect Don Quixotism, being a mixture of pomp and poverty.

His habit was very proper for a fearamouch or merry Andrew, being a dirty callico, with hanging-fleeves, taffels, and cuts and flafhes almost on every fide; it covered a taffety vest, as greafy as a butcher, and which testified that his honour must needs be a most exquisite floven.

His horfe was but a poor, flarved, hobbling creature, and he had two flaves followed him on foot to drive the poor creature along; he had a whip in his hand, and he laboured the beaft as faft about the head as his flaves did about his tail, and thus he rode by us with about ten or twelve fervants, going from the city to his country-feat, about half a league before us: We travelled on gently, but this figure of a gentleman rode away before us, and as we ftopped at a village about an hour to refresh us, when we came by the country-feat of this great man we faw him in a little place before his door eating his repart. It was a kind of a garden, but he was eafy to be feen, and we were Bb 3 given given to understand, that the more we looked on him the better he would be pleafed.

374 ADV, ENTURES OF

He fat under a tree, fomething like the palmetto, which effectually fhaded him over the head and on the fouth fide, but under the tree alfo was placed a large umbrella, which made that part look well enough; he fat lolling back in a great elbow-chair, being a heavy, corpulent man, and had his meat brought him by two women flaves; he had two more, one of which fed the fquire with a fpoon, and the other held the difh with one hand, and fcraped off what he let fall upon his worfhip's beard and taffety veft.

Thus leaving the poor wretch to pleafe himfelf with our looking at him, as if we admired his pomp, though we really pitied and contemned him, we purfued our journey, only father Simon had the curiofity to ftay to inform himfelf what dainties the country-juffice had to feed on in all his ftate, which he faid he had the honour to tafte of, and which was, I think, a mefs of boiled rice with a great piece of garhic in it, and a little bag filled with green pepper, and another plant which they have there, fomething like our ginger, but fmelling like mufk and tafting like muftard; all this was put together, and a fmalllump or piece of mutton boiled in it, and this was his worfhip's worlhip's repair; four or five fervants more atten led at a diftance, who, we supposed, were to eat of the fame after their master.

As for our mandarin with whom we travelied, he was refpected as a king, furrounded always with his gentlemen, and attended in all his appearances with fuch pomp that I faw little of him but at a diftance; but this I øbferved, that there was not a horfe in his retinue but that our carriers pack-horfes in England feemed to me tø look much better, though it was hard to judge rightly, for they were fo covered with equipage, mantles, trappings, &c. that we could fcarce fee any thing but their feet and their heads as they went along.

I was now light-hearted, and all my trouble and perplexity, that I have given an account of, being over, I had no anxious thought about mc, which made this journey the pleafanter to me,; nor had I any ill accident attended me, only is the paffing or fording a final river my horfe feld and made me free of the country, as they call it, that is to fay, threw me in; the place was not deep, but it wetted me all over. I mention it becaufe it fpoiled my pocket-book, wherein I had fet down the name of feveral people and places which I had occasion to remember, B b 4 and and which, not taking due care of, the leaves rotted, and the words were never after to be read, to my great lofs, as to the names of fome places I touched at in this voyage or journey.

At length we arrived at Pecking; I had no body with me but the youth my nephew the captain, had given me to attend me as a fervant, and who proved very trufty and diligent, and my partner had no body with him but one fervant, who was a kiniman; as for the Portugueze pilot. he being defirous to fee the court, we bore his charges for his company, and to use him as an interpreter, for he underftood the language of the country, and fpoke good French, and a little English; and indeed this old man was a most ufeful implement to us every where, for we had not been above a week at Pecking, when he came laughing: Ah, Seignior Inglefe, fays he, I have fomething to tell you, will make your heart glad. My heart glad, fays I, what can that be? I don't know any thing in this country can either give me joy or grief to any great degree. Yes, yes, faid the old man in broken English, make you glad, me forry. Why, faid I, will it make vou forry? Becaufe, faid he, you have brought me here twenty-five days journey, and will leave me to go back alone, and which way fhall I get to my port afterwards without a fhip, without a horfe, horfe, without pecune: So he called money, being his broken Latin, of which he had abundance to make us merry with.

In fhort, he told us there was a great caravan of Muscovite and Polish merchants in the city, preparing to fet out on their journey by land to Muscovy within four or five weeks, and he was fure we would take the opportunity to go with them, and leave him behind to go back all alone,

I CONFESS I was greatly furprized with this good news, and had fcarce power to fpeak to him for fome time, but at laft I turned to him, how do you know this, faid I, are you fure it is true? Yes, fays he, I met this morning in the ftreet an old acquaintance of mine, an Armenian, who is among them, he came last from Astracan, and was defigning to go to Tonquin, where I formerly knew him, but has altered his mind, and is now refolved to go with the caravan to Muicow, and fo down the river Wolga to Affracan. Well, Seignior, fays I, do not be uneafy about being left to go back alone, if this be a method for my return to England, it shall be your fault if you go back to Macao at all. We then went to confult together what was to be done, and I afked my partner what he thought of the pilot's news, news, and whether it would fuit with his affairs? He told me he would do juft as I would, for he had fettled all his affairs fo well at Bengal, and left his effects in fuch good hands, that as we had made a good voyage here, if he could veft it in China filks, wrought and raw, fuch as might be worth the carriage, he would be content to go to England, and then make his voyage back to Bengal by the Company's fhips.

HAVING refolved upon this we agreed, that if our Portugueze pilot would go with us we would bear his charges to Muscow or to England if he pleafed; nor indeed were we to be efteemed over generous in that part neither, if we had not rewarded him farther, for the fervice he had done us was really worth that and more, for he had not only been a pilot to us at fea, but he had been like a broker for us on fhore; and his procuring for us the Japan merchant, was fome hundreds of pounds in our pockets. So we confulted together, about it, and being willing to gratify him, which was indeed but doing him juffice, and very willing also to have him with us befides, for he was a most neceffary man on all occasions, we agreed to give him a quantity of coined gold, which as I compute it, came to about 1751. fterling between us, and to bear all his charges, both. for 4 for himfelf and horfe, except only a horfe to carry his goods.

HAVING fettled this among ourfelves, we called him to let him know what we had refolved: I told him, he had complained of our being to let him go back alone, and I was now to tell him we were refolved he fhould not go back at all; that as we had refolved to go to Europe with the caravan, we refolved alfo he fhould go with us, and that we called him to know his mind. He shook his head and faid, it was a long journey, and he had no becune to carry him thither, or to subfift himfelf when he came there. We told him we believed it was fo, and therefore we had refolved to do fomething for him that should let him fee how fenfible we were of the fervice he had done us, and also how agreeable he was to us; and then I told him what we had refolved to give him here, which he might lay out as we would do our own, and that as for his charges, if he would go with us we would fet him fafe ashore (life and casualties excepted) either in Muscovy or England, which he would, at our own charge, except only the carriage of his He received the propofal like a man goods. transported, and told us he would go with us over the whole world; and fo, in fhort, we all prepared for our journey. However, as it was with with us, fo it was with the other merchants, they had many things to do, and inftead of being ready in five weeks, it was four months and fome days before all things were got together.

It was the beginning of February, our file, when we fet out from Pecking, my partner and the old pilot had gone express back to the port where we had first put in, to dispose of some goods which we had left there, and I, with a Chinefe merchant, whom I had fome knowledge of at Nanquin; and who came to Pecking on his own affairs, went to Nanquin, where I bought 90 pieces of fine damasks, with about 200 pieces of other very fine filks of feveral forts, fome mixed with gold, and had all thefe brought to Pecking against my partner's return; befides this, we bought a very large quantity of raw filk, and fome other goods, our cargo amounting in these goods only to about 3500l. fterling, which, together with tea, and fome fine callicoes, and three camels loads of nutmegs and cloves, loaded in all eight camels for our thare, befides those we rode upon, which with two or three fpare horfes, and two horfes loaded with provisions, made us in fhort twenty-fix camels and horfes in our retinue.

THE whole company was very great, and, as near as I can remember, made between 3 and 400 horfe, and upards of 120 men, very well armed, and provided for all events, for as the eaftern caravans are fubject to be attacked by the Arabs, fo are thefe by the Tartars; but they are not altogether fo dangerous as the Arabs, nor fo barbarous when they prevail.

THE company confifted of people of feveral hations, but there were above fixty of them merchants or inhabitants of Muscow, though of them fome were Livonians, and to our particular fatisfaction five of them were Scots, who appeared also to be men of great experience in business, and of very good fubflance.

WHEN we had travelled one day's journey, the guides, who were five in number, called all the gentlemen and merchants, that is to fay, all the paffengers, except the fervants, to a great council, as they called it; at this great council every one deposited a certain quantity of money to a common flock, for the neceffary expence of buying forage on the way, where it was not otherwife to be had, and for fatisfying the guides, getting horfes, and the like; and here they conflituted the journey, as they call it, viz. they named captains and officers to draw us all up and give give the word of command in cafe of an attack; and give every one their turn of command; nor was this forming us into any order any more than what we found needful upon the way, as shall be observed:

The road all on this fide of the country is very populous, and is full of potters and earth-makers. that is to fay, people that tempered the earth for the China-ware; and as I was coming along our Portugal pilot, who had always fomething or other to fay to make us merry, came fneering to me, and told me he would fhew me the greateft rarity in all the country, and that I should have this to fay of China after all the ill-humoured things I had faid of it, that I had feen one thing which was not to be feen in all the world befide. I was very importunate to know what it was, at laft he told me it was a gentleman's house built with China-ware. Well, fays I, are not the materials of their buildings the product of their own country, and fo it is all China-ware, is it not? No, no, fays he, I mean it is a house all made of Chinaware, fuch as you call it in England, or as it is called in our country, porcellain. Well, fays I, fuch a thing may be; how big is it? Can we carry it in a box upon a camel? If we can we will buy it. Upon a camel! fays the old pilot, holding ing up both his hands, why there is a family of thirty people lives in it.

I was then curious indeed to fee it, and when I came to it, it was nothing but this; it was a timber-houfe, or a houfe built, as we call it in England, with lath and plaifter, but all the plaiftering was really China-ware, that is to fay, it was plaiftered with the earth that makes Chinaware.

THE outfide, which the fun fhone hot upon, was glazed, and looked very well, perfect white and painted with blue figures, as the large Chinaware in England is painted, and hard as if it had been burned; as to the infide, all the walls, inftead of wainfoot were lined up with hardened and painted tiles. like the little fquare tiles we call galley tiles in England, all made of the fineft China, and the figures exceeding fine indeed, with extraordinary variety of colours mixed with gold, many tiles making but one figure, but joined fo artificially, the mortar being made of the fame earth, that it was very hard to fee where the tiles met; the floors of the rooms were of the fame composition, and as hard as the earthen floors we have in use in feveral parts of England, as hard as ftone and fmooth, but not burned and painted, except fome fmaller 100ms, rooms, like clofets, which were all, as it were, paved with the fame tile; the cielings and all the plaiftering work in the whole houfe were of the fame earth; and after all, the roof was covered with tiles of the fame, but of a deep fhining black.

THIS Was a China-warehoufe indeed, truly and literally to be called fo, and had I not been upon the journey I could have ftaid fome days to fee and examine the particulars of it; they told me there were fountains and fifh-ponds in the garden all paved to the bottom and fides with the fame, and fine ftatutes fet up in rows on the walks, entirely formed of the porcellain earth, and burned whole.

As this is one of the fingularities of China, fo they may be allowed to excel in it, but I am very fure they excel in their accounts of it; for they told me fuch incredible things of their performance in crockery-ware, for fuch it is, that I care not to relate, as knowing it could not be true. They told me in particular, of one workman that made a fhip with all its tackle, and mafts and fails in earthen-ware, big enough to carry fifty men; if he had told me he launched it and made a voyage to Japan in it, I might have faid fomething to it indeed, but as it was, I knew the whole whole of the flory, which was, in fhort, afking pardon for the word, that the fellow lyed, fo I fmiled and faid nothing to it.

THIS odd fight kept me two hours behind the caravan, for which the leader of it for the day, fined me about the value of three fhillings, and told me, if it had been three days journey without the wall, as it was three days within, he muft have fined me four times as much, and made me afk pardon the next council day, fo I promifed to be more orderly, for indeed I found afterwards the orders made for keeping all together were abfolutely neceffary for our common fafety.

In two days more we paffed the great China wall made for a fortification against the Tartars, and a very great work it is, going over hills and mountains in a needless track, where the rocks are impassible, and the precipices fuch as no enemy could possibly enter, or indeed climb up, or where, if they did, no wall could hinder them; they tell us its length is near a thousand English miles, but that the country is five hundred in a strait measured line which the wall bounds; without measuring the windings and turnings it takes; 'tis about four fathoms high, and as many thick in fome places.

VOL. II.

I stood

I STOOD still an hour, or thereabout, without trefpaffing our orders for fo long the caravan was in paffing the gate) to look at it on every fide. near and far off, I mean what was within my view; and the guide of our caravan, who had been extolling it for the wonder of the world, was mighty eager to hear my opinion of it. I told him it was a most excellent thing to keep of the Tartars, which he happened not to understand as I meant it, and fo took it for a compliment, but the old pilot laughed. O, Seignior Inglefe, fays he, you fpeak in colours. In colours, faid I, what do you mean by that? Why you fpeak what looks white this way, and black that way; gay one way and dull another. You tell him it is a good wall to keep out Tartars; you tell me it is by that good for nothing but to keep out Tartars. I understand you, Seignior Inglese, I understand you, fays he, but Seignior Chinefe understood you his own way.

WELL, fays I, Seignior, do you think it would ftand out an army of our country people with a good train of artillery, or our engineers with two companies of miners, would not they batter it down in ten days, that an army might enter in battalia, or blow it up in the air foundation and all, that there fhould be no fign of it left? Ay, ay, fays he, I know that. The Chinefe wanted mightily mightily to know what I faid, and I gave him leave to tell him a few days after, for we were then almost out of their country, and he was to leave us in a little time afterward; but when he knew what I had faid he was dumb all the rest of the way, and we heard no more of his fine story of the Chinese power and greatness while he ftayed.

AFTER we paffed this mighty wall, fomething like the Picts wall, and fo famous in Northumberland, built by the Romans, we began to find the country thinly inhabited, and the people rather confined to live in fortified towns and cities, as being fubject to the inroads and depredations of the Tartars, who rob in great armies, and therefore are not to be refifted by the naked inhabitants of an open country.

AND here I began to find the neceffity of keeping together in a caravan as we travelled, for we faw feveral troops of Tartars roving about, but when I came to fee them diffinctly, I wondered more that the Chinefe empire could be conquered by fuch contemptible fellows, for they are a mere hord or croud of wild fellows, keeping no order, and underftanding no difcipline, or manner of fight.

Cc2

THEIR

THBIR horfes are poor lean creatures, taught nothing and fit for nothing, and this we faid the firft day we faw them, which was after we entered the wilder part of the country. Our leader for the day gave leave for about fixteen of us to go a hunting, as they call it; and what was this but hunting of fheep; however, it may be called hunting too, for the creatures are the wildeft and fwifteft of foot that ever I faw of their kind; only they will not run a great way, and you are fure of fport when you begin the chace, for they appear generally thirty or forty in a flock, and like true fheep, always keep together when they fly.

In purfuit of this odd fort of game, it was our hap to meet with about forty Tartars, whether they were hunting mutton as we were, or whether they looked for another kind of prey, I know not, but as foon as they faw us one of them blew a kind of a horn very loud, but with a barbarous found, that I had never heard before, and by the way never care to hear again; we all fuppofed this was to call their friends about them, and fo it was, for in lefs than half of an hour, a troop of forty or fifty more appeared at about a mile diftance, but our work was over first as it happened.

ONE of the Scots merchants of Muscow happened to be amongst us, and as foon as he heard the horn he told us in fhort, that we had nothing to do but to charge them immediately without loss of time; and drawing us up in a line, he afked if we were refolved, we told him we were ready to follow him, fo he rode directly towards them; they flood gazing at us like a mere croud drawn up in no order, nor shewing the face of any order at all; but as foon as they faw us advance they let fly their arrows, which however miffed us very happily; it feems they miftook not their aim but their diffance, for their arrows all fell a little fhort of .us, but with fo true an aim, that had we been about twenty yards nearer, we must have had feveral men wounded, if not killed.

IMMEDIATELY we halted, and though it was at a great diffance, we fired and fent them leaden bullets for wooden arrows, following our fhot full gallop, to fall in among them fword in hand, for fo our bold Scot that led us directed; he was indeed but a merchant, but he behaved with that vigour and bravery on this occafion; and yet, with fuch cool courage too, that I never faw any man in action fitter for command. As foon as we came up to them we fired our piftols in their faces and then drew, but they fled in C c 3 the 390 the greatest confusion imaginable; the only stand any of them made was on our right, when three of them flood, and by figns called the reft to come back to them, having a kind of fcymitar in their hands, and their bows hanging to their backs. Our brave commander, without afking any body to follow him, gallops up close to them, and with his fuzee knocks one of them off his horfe, killed the fecond with his piftol, and the third ran away; and thus ended our fight; but we had ... is misfortune attending it, viz. that all our mutton we had in chace got away. We had not a man killed or hurt : but as for the Tartars there were about five of them killed; who were wounded we knew not, but this we knew, that the other party was fo frighted with the noife of our guns that they made off, and never made any attempt upon us,

We were all this while in the Chinese dominions, and therefore the Tartars were not so bold as afterwards, but in about five days we entered a vast great wild defart, which held us three days and nights march, and we were obliged to carry our water with us in great leather bottles, and to encamp all night, just as I have heard they do in the defart of Arabia.

I ASKED

I ASKED whole dominions this was in ! and they told me this was a kind of border that might be called no man's land, being a great part of that Karakathaie, or grand Tartary, but that however it was all reckoned to China; but that there was no care taken here to preferve it from the inroads of thieves, and therefore it was reckoned the worft defart in the whole world, though we were to go over fome much larger.

In paffing this wildernefs, which was at first very frightful to me, we faw two or three times little parties of the Tartars, but they feemed to be upon their own affairs, and to have no defign upon us : and fo, like the man who met the devil, if they had nothing to fay to us, we had nothing to fay to them, we let them go.

ONCE, however, a party of them came fo near as to ftand and gaze at us; whether it was to confider if they fhould attack us or not, we knew not, but when we were paffed at fome diffance by them, we made a rear guard of forty men and ftood ready for them, letting the caravan pafs half a mile or thereabouts before us; but after a while they marched off, only we found they faluted us with five arrows at their parting, one of which wounded a horfe fo that it difabled him, and we left him the next day, poor creature, in C c 4 great great need of a good farrier : We suppose they might shoot more arrows, which might fall short of us, but we saw no more arrows or Tartars that time.

WE travelled near a month after this, the ways being not fo good as at first, though still in the dominions of the emperor of China, but lay for the most part in villages, fome of which were fortified, becaufe of the incursions of the Tartars. When we were come to one of these towns, (it was about two days and a half journey before we were to come to the city of Naum) I wanted to buy a camel, of which there are plenty to be fold all the way upon that road, and of horfes alfo, fuch as they are, becaufe fo many caravans coming that way they are often wanted ; the perfon that I fpoke to, to get me a camel, would have gone and fetched it for me, but I like a fool muft be officious and go myfelf along with him; the place was about two miles out of the village, where it feems they kept the camels and horfes feeding under a guard.

I WALKED it on foot with my old pilot, being very defirous forfooth of a little variety : when we came to the place it was a low marfhy ground, walled round with a flone wall piled up dry, without mortar or earth among it, like a park, with with a little guard of Chinefe foldiers at the door. Having bought a camel and agreed for the price, I came away, and the Chinese man that went with me led the camel; when on a fudden came up five Tartars on horfeback; two of them feized the fellow and took the camel from him, while the other three stepped up to me, and my old pilot feeing us as it were unarmed, for I had no weapon about me but my fword, which could but ill defend me against three horsemen; the first that came up flopped fhort upon my drawing my fword, (for they are arrant cowards) but a fecond coming upon my left, gave me a blow on the head, which I never felt till afterward, and wondered when I came to myfelf what was the matter, and where I was, for he laid me flat on the ground; but my never failing old pilot the Portugueze, (fo providence unlooked for directs deliverances from dangers, which to us are unforefeen) had a pistol in his pocket which I knew nothing of, nor the Tartars neither, if they had, I suppose they would not have attacked us; but cowards are always boldeft when there is no danger.

THE old man feeing me down, with a bold heart ftepped up to the fellow that had ftruck me, and laying hold of his arm with one hand, and pulling him down by main force a little towards him with the other, fhot him into the head, and laid him dead upon upon the fpot; he then immediately stepped up to him that had flopped us, as I faid, and before he could come forward again, made a blow at him with a fcymitar, which he always wore, but miffing the man cut his horfe into the fide of his head, cut one of the ears off by the root, and a great flice down by the fide of his face; the poor beaft, enraged with the wound, was no more to be governed by his rider, though the fellow fat well enough too, but away he flew, and carried him quite out of the pilot's reach, and at fome distance, rifing npon his hind legs, threw down the Tartar and fell upon him.

In this interval the poor Chinese came in, who had loft the camel, but he had no weapon; however, feeing the Tartar down, and his horfe fallen upon him, away he runs to him, and feizing upon an ugly ill favoured weapon he had by his fide, fomething like a pole-axe, he wrenched it from him, and made a shift to knock his Tartarian brains out with it : but my old man had the third Tartar to deal with ftill, and feeing he did not fly, as he expected, nor come on to fight him, as he apprehended, but ftand ftock ftill, the old man ftood still too and fell to work with his tackle to charge his piftol again; but as foon as the Tartar faw the piftol away he fcoured, and left left my pilot, my champion I called him afterwards, a compleat victory.

By this time I was a little recovered, for I thought when first I began to wake that I had been in a fweet fleep; but, as I faid above, I wondered where I was, how I came upon the ground, and what was the matter; but a few moments after, as fense returned, I felt pain, (though I did not know where) fo I clapped my hand to my head, and took it away bloody; then I felt my head ach, and then in a moment memory returned, and every thing was prefent to me again.

I JUMPED upon my feet inftantly, and got hold of my fword, but no enemies in view: I found a Tartar lie dead, and his horfe ftanding very quietly by him; and looking farther I faw my champion and deliverer, who had been to fee what the Chinefe had done, coming back with his hanger in his hand; the old man feeing me on my feet, came running to me, and embraced me with a great deal of joy, being afraid before that I had been killed; and feeing me bloody, would fee how I was hurt, but it was not much, only what we call a broken head; neither did I afterwards find any great inconvenience from the blow, for it was well again in two or three days. WE

WE made no great gain however by this victory, for we loft a camel and gained a horfe; but that which was remarkable, when we came back to the village the man demanded to be paid for the camel; I difputed it, and it was brought to a hearing before the Chinese judge of the place : give him his due, he acted with a great deal of prudence and impartiality; and having heard both fides, he gravely asked the Chinese man that went with me to buy the camel, whofe fervant he was? I am no fervant, says he, but went with the ftranger. At whole request ? fays the justice. At the stranger's request, fays he. Why then, fays the juffice, you were the ftranger's fervant for the time, and the camel being delivered to his fervant, it was delivered to him, and he must pay for it.

I CONFESS the thing was fo clear that I had not a word to fay; but admiring to fee fuch juft reafoning upon the confequence, and fo accurate ftating the cafe, I paid willingly for the camel, and fent for another; I did not go to fetch it myfelf any more, I had enough of that.

THE city of Naum is a frontier of the Chinefe empire, they call it fortified, and fo it is as fortifications go there; for this I will venture to affirm, that all the Tartars in Karakathaie, which I be-

÷ .

396

I believe are fome millions, could not batter down the walls with their bows and arrows; but to call it ftrong, if it were attacked with cannon, would be to make those who understand it laugh at you.

We wanted, as I have faid, above two days journey of this city, when meffengers were fent express to every part of the road, to tell all travellers and caravans to halt till they had a guard fent for them; for that an unufual body of Tartars, making 10,000 in all, had appeared in the way, about thirty miles beyond the city.

THIS was very bad news to travellers; however it was carefully done of the governor, and we were very glad to hear we fhould have a guard : accordingly, two days after, we had two hundred foldiers fent us from a garrifon of the Chinefes, on our left, and three hundred more from the city of Naum, and with thefe we advanced boldly; the three hundred foldiers from Naum marched in our front, the two hundred in our rear, and our men on each fide of our camels with our baggage, and the whole caravan in the center : in this order, and well prepared for battle, we thought ourfelves a match for the whole ten thoufand Mogul Tartars, if they had appeared; but but the next day, when they did appear, it was quite another thing.

398 ADVENTURÉS OF

It was early in the morning when, marching from a little well fituated town called Changhu, we had a river to pafs, where we were obliged to ferry; and had the Tartars had any intelligence, then had been the time to have attacked us, when the caravan being over, the rear guard was behind; but they did not appear.

About three hours after, when we were entered upon a defart of about fifteen or fixteen miles over, behold, by a cloud of duft they raifed, we faw an enemy was at hand; and they were at hand indeed, for they came on upon the fpur.

THE Chinefes, our guard on the front, who had talked fo big the day before, began to ftagger, and the foldiers frequently looked behind them, which is a certain fign in a foldier that he is juft ready to run away; my old pilot was of my mind, and being near me called out, Seignior Inglefe, fays he, those fellows must be encouraged, or they will ruin us all; for if the Tartars come on, they will never ftand it; I am of your mind, faid I, but what courfe must be done? Done ! fays he, let fifty of our men advance, and flank them on each wing, and encourage them, and they they will fight like brave fellows in brave company; but without this, they will every man turn his back; immediately I rode up to our leader, and told him, who was exactly of our mind, and accordingly, fifty of us marched to the right wing, and fifty to the left, and the reft made a a line of refcue; and fo we marched, leaving the laft two hundred men to make another body by themfelves, and to guard the camels, only that if need were they fhould fend an hundred men to affift the laft fifty.

In a word, the Tartars came on, and an innumerable company they were; how many we could not tell, but ten thousand we thought was the leaft: a party of them came on first and viewed our pofture, traverfing the ground in the front of our line; and as we found them within gun-fhot, our leader ordered the two wings to advance fwiftly, and give them a falvo on each wing, with their shot, which was done, but they went off, and I fuppofe back to give an account of the reception they were like to meet with; and indeed that falute cloyed their ftomachs, for they immediately halted, flood a while to confider of it, and wheeling off to the left they gave over their defign, and faid no more to us for that time, which was very agreeable to our circumftances, which were were but very indifferent, of a battle with fuch a number.

399

Two days after this we came to the city of Naun, or Naum; we thanked the governor for his care for us, and collected to the value of an hundred crowns or thereabouts, which we gave to the foldiers fent to guard us; and here we rested one day: this is a garrison indeed, and there were nine hundred foldiers kept here; but the reason of it, was that formerly, the Muscovite frontiers lay nearer to them than they do now, the Muscovites having abandoned that part of the country, (which lies from this city weft, for about two hundred miles) as defolate and unfit for use: and more especially being so very remote, and fo difficult to fend troops thither for its defence; for we had yet above two thousand miles to Muscovy, properly fo called.

AFTER this, we paffed feveral great rivers, and two dreadful defarts: one of which we were fixteen days paffing over, and which as I faid, was to be called no man's land; and on the 13th of April, we came to the frontiers of the Mufcovite dominions: I think the firft town, or fortrefs, whatever it might be called, that belonged to the czar of Mufcovy, was called Argun, being on the weft fide of the river Argun.

I COULD

3

I COULD not but discover an infinite satisfaction that I was fo foon arrived in, as I called it, 'a Christian country, or at least in a country governed by Chriftians; for though the Muscovites do, in my opinion, but just deferve the name of Chriftians; yet fuch they pretend to be, and are very devout in their way : it would certainly occur to any man who travels the world as I have done, and who had any power of reflection; I fav, it would occur to him, to reflect what a bleffing it is to be brought into the world, where the name of God and a Redeemer is known, worfhipped, and adored : and not where the people given up by heaven to ftrong delufions, worfhip the devil, and profirate themfelves to flocks and flones; worfhip monfters, elements, horrible shaped animals, and statues, or images of monsters: not a town or city we paffed through, but had their pagods, their idols, and their temples, and ignorant people worfhipping, even the works of their own hands.

Now we came, where at leaft the face of the Chriftian worfhip appeared; where the knee was bowed to Jefus; and whether ignorantly or not, yet the Chriftian religion was owned, and the name of the true God, was called upon and adored; and it made my foul rejoice to fee it : I faluted the brave Scots merchant I mentioned Vol. II. D d above, above, with my first acknowledgment of this; and taking him by the hand, I faid to him, bleffed be God, we are once again come among Christians; he fmiled and answered, do not rejoice too foon countryman, these Muscovites are but an odd fort of Christians; and but for the name of it, you may see very little of the substance, for some months farther of our journey.

WELL, fays I, but ftill it is better than Paganifm, and worfhipping of devils : Why, I will tell you, fays he, except the Ruffian foldiers in the garrifons, and a few of the inhabitants of the cities upon the road, all the reft of this country for above a thoufand miles farther, is inhabited by the worft and most ignorant of Pagans; and fo indeed we found it.

WE were now launched into the greatest piece of solid earth, if I understand any thing of the surface of the globe, that is to be found in any part of the earth, we had at least 1200 miles to the fea, eastward; 2000 to the bottom of the Baltick fea, westward; and above 3000 miles, if we left that fea, and went on west to the British and French channels: we had full 5000 miles to the Indian or Persian fea, south; and about 800 miles to the frozen sea, north; nay if some people may be believed, there might be no sea north eaft, till we come round the pole, and confequently into the north weft, and fo had a continent of land into America, the lord knows where, though I could give fome reafons, why I believe that to be a miftake.

402

As we entered into the Muscovite dominions, a good while before we came to any confiderable towns, we had nothing to observe there but this : first, that all the rivers that run to the east, as I understood by the charts, which fome in our caravan had with them; it was plain, all those rivers ran into the great river Yamour, or Gammour: this river, by the natural course of it, must run into the east sea, or Chinese ocean ; the ftory they tell us, that the mouth of this river, is choaked up with bull-rushes, of a monstrous growth, viz. three feet about, and twenty or thirty feet high; I must be allowed to fay, I believe nothing of; but as its navigation is of no use, because there is no trade that way, the Tartars to whom alone it belongs, dealing in nothing but cattle, fo nobody that ever I heard of, has been curious enough, either to go down to the mouth of it in boats, or come up from the mouth of it either in boats or fhips, as far as I can find; but this is certain, that this river running eaft, in the latitude of about fifty degrees, carries a vast concourse of rivers along with it, and finds an ocean to empty itself in that latitude, fo we are fure of D d 2 fe2 fea there. Some leagues to the north of this river, there are feveral confiderable rivers, whofe ftreams run as due north, as the Yamour runs eaft, and thefe are all found to join their waters, with the great river Tartarus, named fo, from the northernmost nations of the Mogul Tartars, who the Chinese fay, were the first Tartars in the world; and who, as our geographers alledge, are the Gog and Magog, mentioned in facred ftory.

THESE rivers running all northward, as well as all the other rivers, I am yet to fpeak of, make it evident that the northern ocean bounds the land also on that fide, so that it does not seem rational in the leaft to think, that the land can extend itfelf to join with America on that fide, or that there is not a communication between the northern and the eaftern ocean; but of this this I shall fay no more, it was my observation at that time, and therefore I take notice of it in this place. We now advanced from the river Arguna by eafy and moderate journies, and were very vifibly obliged to the care the czar of Mufcovy has taken to have cities and towns built in as many places as are pollible to place them, where his foldiers keep garrifon fomething like the flationary foldiers placed by the Romans in the remoteft countries of the empire, fome of which I had read read particularly were placed in Britain for the fecurity of commerce, and for the lodging travellers; and thus it was here; for wherever we came, though at thefe towns and flations, the garrifons and governor were Ruffians, and profeffed chriftians, yet the inhabitants of the country were mere Pagans, facrificing to idols, and worfhipping the fun, moon, and flars, or all the hoft of heaven, and not only fo, but were, of all the heathens and Pagans that ever I met with, the most barbarous, except only that they did not eat man's flefh, as our favages of America did.

404

Some inflances of this we met with in the country between Arguna, where we enter the Muscovite dominions, and a city of Tartars and Ruffians together, called Nortziouskov, in which is a continued defart or foreft, which cost us twenty days to travel over it; in a village near the last of these places I had the curiosity to go and fee their way of living, which is most brutish and unfufferable; they had I fuppofe a great facrifice that day, for there flood out upon an old ftump of a tree, an idol made of wood, frightful as the devil, at least as any thing we can think of to reprefent the devil, can be made; it had a head certainly not as much refembling any creature that the world ever faw; ears as big as goatshorns, and as high; eyes as big as a crown piece, Dd 3 a nofe a nofe like a crooked ram's horn, and a mouth extended four cornered like that of a lion, with horrible teeth, hooked like a parrot's under bill; it was dreffed up in the filthieft manner that you could fuppofe; its upper garment was of fheep fkins, with the wool outward, a great Tartar bonnet on the head, with two horns growing through it, it was about eight feet high, yet had no feet or legs, or any other proportion of parts.

.406

This fcare crow was fet up at the outer fide of the village, and when I came near to it, there were fixteen or feventeen creatures, whether men or women, I could not tell, for they make no diftinction by their habits; thefe lay all flat upon the ground, round this formidable block of fhapeless wood: I faw no motion among them any more than if they had been all logs of wood like the idol, and at first really thought they had been fo; but when I came a little nearer, they ftarted up upon their feet, and raifed a howling cry, as if it had been fo many deep mouthed hounds, and walked away as if they were difpleafed at our diffurbing them : a little way off from the idol, and at the door of that tent or hut, made all of sheep-fkins and cow-skins, dried, flood three butchers, I thought they were fuch, when I came nearer to them I found they had long knives in their hands, and in the middle of . of the tent appeared three fheep killed; and one young bullock or fleer. These it seems were facrifices to that sense log of an idol, and these three men, priests belonging to it, and the seventeen prostrated wretches were the people v ho brought the offering, and were making their prayers to that flock.

I CONFESS I was more moved at their flupidity and brutish worship of a hobgoblin, than ever I was at any thing in my life, to fee God's most glorious and best creature, to whom he had granted fo many advantages, even by creation, above the reft of the works of his hands, vefted with a reafonable foul, and that foul adorned with faculties and capacities, adapted both to honour his maker and be honoured by him, funk and degenerated to a degree fo very flupid as to prostrate itself to a frightful nothing, a meer imaginary object dreffed up by themfelves, and made terrible to themfelves by their own contrivance, adorned only with clouts and rags; and that this should be the effect of mere ignorance, wrought up into hellish devotion by the devil himfelf, who envying (to his maker) the homage and adoration of his creatures, had deluded them into fuch fordid and brutish things as one would think fhould fhock nature itfelf.

But what fignified all the aftonifhment and reflection of thoughts; thus it was, and I faw it before my eyes, and there was no room to wonder at it or think it impoffible; all my admiration turned to rage, and I rode up to the image or monfter, call it what you will, and with my fword made a ftroke at the bonnet that was on its head, and one of our men that was with me took hold of the fheep-fkin that covered it and pulled at it, when behold a moft hideous outcry and howling ran through the village, and two or three hundred people came about my ears, fo that I was glad to fcour for it, for we faw fome had bows and arrows, but I refolved from that moment to vifit them again,

OUR caravan refted three nights at the town, which was about four miles off, in order to provide fome horfes which they wanted, feveral of the horfes having been lamed and jaded with the badnefs of the way and long march over the laft defart; fo we had fome leifure here to put my defign in execution. I communicated my project to the Scots merchant of Mufco, of whofe courage I had fufficient teftimony, as above; I told him what I had feen, and with what indignation I had fince thought that human nature could be fo degenerate; I told him I was refolved, if I could get but four or five men well armed armed to go with me, I was refolved to go and deftroy that vile abominable idol, and let them fee it had no power to help itfelf, and confequently could not be an object of worfhip, or to be prayed to, much lefs help them that offered facrifices to it.

He laughed at me. Says he, your zeal may be good, but what do you propofe to yourfelf by it? Propofe, faid I, to vindicate the honour of God, which is infulted by this devil-worfhip. But how will it vindicate the honour of God, faid he, while the people will not be able to know what you mean by it, unless you could speak to them and tell them fo, and then they will fight you and beat you too, I'll affure you, for they are desperate fellows, and that especially in defence of their idolatry? Can we not, faid I, do it in the night, and then leave them the reafons and causes in writing in their own language? Writing! faid he, why there is not a man in five nations of them that knows any thing of a letter, or how to read a word any way. Wretched ignorance, faid I to him, however, I have a great mind to do it, perhaps nature may draw inferences from it to them, to let them fee how brutish they are to worship fuch horrid things. Look you, Sir, faid he, if your zeal prompts you to it fo warmly you must do it, but in the next next place I would have you confider these wild nations of people are subjected by force to the Czar of Muscovy's dominions, and if you do this it is ten to one but they will come by thousands to the governor of Nertsinskay and complain and demand satisfaction, and if he cannot give them fatisfaction, 'tis ten to one but they revolt, and it will occasion a new war with all the Tartars in the country.

THIS I confess put new thoughts into my head for a while, but still I found that my inclination increased for executing the projects I had been forming to deftroy the monster, if it were poffible to do it with any fafety, and upon meeting the Scots merchant by accident the next evening, and confulting him again, I found he was growing as earnest for it as myself, fo we fat down to contrive how we fhould effectually execute our purpose, and when we had laid the scheme to our mind, with the affiftance of a trufty companion and a fervant or two, we went out privately, and came up to their priefts in the night, and then, by a ftratagem, having confined them and their attendants in their house or tent, we stuffed wild fire in the filthy idol's mouth and ears, and with the addition of other combustible stuff we burned the frightful image to ashes, without being then apprehended.

After

AFTER the feat was performed we appeared in the morning among our fellow-travellers exceeding bufy in getting ready for our journey; nor could any man fuggeft that we had been any where but in our beds, as travellers might be fuppofed to be, to fit themfelves for the fatigues of the day's journey.

Bur the affair did not end fo; the next day came a great multitude of the country people to the town gates, and in a most outrageous manner demanded fatisfaction of the Ruffian governor for the infulting their priest, and burning their great Cham Chi-Thaungu. The people of Nertfinskay were at first in a great consternation, for they faid the Tartars were already no less than thirty thousand firong.

THE Ruffian governor fent out meffengers to appeale them, and gave them all the good words imaginable, affuring them he knew nothing of it, and that there had not a foul of his garrifon been abroad, fo that it could not be from any body there, but if they could let him know who did it, they fhould be exemplarily punished. They returned haughtily, that all the country reverenced the great Cham Chi-Thaungu, who dwelt in the fun, and no mortal would have dared to offer violence to his image but fome Chriftian miscreant; miscreant; and they therefore refolved to denounce war against him and all the Russians, who, they faid, were miscreants and Christians.

THE governor still patient, and unwilling to make a breach, or to have any caufe of war alledged to be given by him, the czar having ftrictly charged them to treat the conquered country with gentleness and civility, gave them ftill all the good words he could, at laft he told them there was a caravan gone towards Ruffia that morning, and perhaps it was fome of them who had done them this injury, and that if they would be fatisfied with that, he would fend after them to inquire into it. This feemed to appeale them a little, and accordingly the governor fent after us, and gave us a particular account how the thing was, intimating withal, that if any in our caravan had done it they fhould make their efcape; but that whether we had done it or no, we should make all the haste forward that was poffible, and that in the mean time he would keep them in play as long as he could.

This was very friendly in the governor; however, when it came to the caravan there was nobody knew any thing of the matter; and as for us that were guilty, we were the leaft of all fufpected : however, the captain of the caravan for the the time, took the hint that the governor gave us, and we travelled two days and two nights without any confiderable ftop, and then we lay at a village called Plothus, nor did we make any long ftop here, but hastened on towards Jarawena, another of the czar of Muscovy's colonies, and where we expected we should be fafe; but upon the fecond day's march from Plothus, by the clouds of duft behind us at a great diffance, fome of our people began to be fenfible we were pursued. We had entered a great defart, and had paffed by a great lake called Schacks Ofer, when we perceived a very great body of horfe appear on the other fide of the lake to the north, we travelling weft. We observed they went away weft as we did, but had fuppofed we would have taken that fide of the lake, whereas we very happily took the fouth fide, and in two days more they difappeared again, for they believing we were still before them pushed on till they came to the river Udda; a very great river when it paffes farther north, but where we came to it we found it narrow and fordable.

The third day they had either found their miftake or had intelligence of us, and came pouring in upon us towards the dufk of the evening. We had, to our great fatisfaction, just pitched upon a place for our camp, which was very convenient venient for the night, for as we were upon a defart, though but at the beginning of it, that was above five hundred miles over, we had no towns to lodge at, and indeed expected none but the city Jarawena, which we had yet two days march to; the defart, however, had fome few woods in it on this fide, and little rivers which ran all into the great river Udda, it was in a narrow firait between two little but very thick woods, that we pitched our litle camp for that night, expecting to be attacked in the night.

No body knew but ourfelves what we were purfued for, but as it was ufual for the Mogul Tartars to go about in troops in that defart, fo the caravans always fortify themfelves every night against them, as against armies of robbers; and it was therefore no new thing to be purfued.

But we had this night, of all the nights of our travels, a most advantageous camp, for we lay between two woods, with a little rivulet running just before our front, fo that we could not be furrounded or attacked any way but in our front or rear. We took care also to make our front as firong as we could, by placing our packs, with our camels and horses, all in a line on the infide of the river, and felling fome trees in our rear.

In this pofture we encamped for the night, but the enemy was upon us before we had finished our fituation. They did not come on us like thieves, as we expected, but fent three meffengers to us to demand the men to be delivered to them that had abused their prieft sand burned their god Cham Chi-Thaungu with fire, that they might burn them with fire, and upon this they faid they would go away and do us no farther harm, otherwise they would deftroy us all. Our men looked very blank at this meffage, and began to flare at one another, to fee who looked with the most guilt in their faces, but no body was the word, no body did it. The leader of the caravan fent word he was well affured it was not done by any of our camp; that we were peaceable merchants travelling on our bufinefs; that we had done no harm to them or to any one elfe; and that therefore they muft look farther for their enemies who had injured them, for we were not the people, fo defired them not to difturb us, for if they did we fhould defend ourfelves.

They were far from being fatisfied with this for an anfwer, but a great croud of them came down in the morning by break of day to our camp, but feeing us in fuch an unaccountable fituation they durft come no farther than the brook in our front, where they ftood and fhewed us 416 us fuch a number that indeed terrified us very much, for those that spoke least of them spoke of many thousands. Here they stood and looked at us a while, and then setting up a great houl they let fly a cloud of arrows among us, but we were well enough fortified for that, for we sheltered under our baggage, and I do not remember that one of us was hurt.

Some time after this we faw them move a little to our right and expected them on the rear, when a cunning fellow, a Coffack of Jarawena, in the pay of the Muscovites, calling to the leader of the caravan, faid to him, I'll go fend all thefe people away to Siheilka. This was a city four or five days journey at least to the fouth, and rather behind us; fo he takes his bow and arrows, and getting on horfeback he rides away from our rear directly, as it were to Nertfinskay; after this he takes a great circuit about and comes unfufpected to the army of the Tartars, as if he had been fent express to tell them a long ftory, that the people who had burned the Cham Chi-Thaungu were gone to Siheilka, with a caravan of mifcreants, as he called them, that is to fay, Chriftians, and that they had refolved to burn the God Schal Ifar, belonging to the Tonguefes.

As this fellow himfelf was a mere Tartar, and perfectly fpoke their language, he counterfeited fo well that they all took it from him, and away they drove in a most violent hurry to Siheilka, which it feems was five days journey to the north, and in less than three hours they were entirely out of our fight, and we never heard any more of them, whether they went to Siheilka or no.

So we paffed fafely on to Jarewena, where there was a garrifon of Mufcovites, and there we refted five days, the caravan being exceedingly fatigued with the laft day's hard march, and with want of reft in the night.

FROM this city we had a frightful defert, which held us twenty-three days march. We furnished ourfelves with fome tents here, for the better accommodating ourfelves in the night, and the leader of the caravan procured fixteen carriages or waggons of the country for carrying our water or provisions, and these carriages were our defence every night round our little camp; fo that had the Tartars appeared, unless they had been very numerous indeed, they would not have been able to hurt us.

WE may well be fuppofed to want reft again after this long journey, for in this defert we Vol. II. E e neither neither faw houfe or tree or fcarce a bufh, though we faw abundance of the fable hunters, who are all Tartars of the Mogul Tartary, of which this country is a part, and they frequently attack fmall caravans, but we faw no numbers of them together.

AFTER we had paffed this defart we came into a country pretty well inhabited; that is to fay, we found towns and caffles fettled by the czar of Mufcovy, with garrifons of flationary foldiers to protect the caravans and defend the country against the Tartars, who would otherwife make it very dangerous travelling; and his czarish majesty has given such strict orders for the well guarding the caravans and merchants, that if there are any Tartars heard of in the country, detachments of the garrifons are always fent to fee the travellers safe from flation to station.

AND thus the governnor of Adinfkoy, whom I had opportunity to make a vifit to by means of the Scots merchant, who was acquainted with him, offered us a guard of fifty men, if we thought there was any danger, to the next flation.

I THOUGHT long before, that as we come nearer to Europe we fhould find the country better peopled, and the people more civilized, but I 5 found found myfelf miftaken in both, for we had yet the nation of the Tonguefes to pafs through, where we faw the fame tokens of Paganifm and barbarity as before, only as they were conquered by the Mufcovites they were not fo dangerous; but for rudenefs of manners and idolatry, no people in the world ever went beyond them; they are cloathed all in fkins of beafts, and their houfes are built of the fame; you know not a man from a woman, neither by the ruggednefs of their countenances or their cloaths, and in the winter, when the ground is covered with fnow, they live under ground in vaults, which have ca vities going from one to another.

IF the Tartars had their Cham Chi-Thaungu for a whole village or country, these had idols in every hut and in every cave; befides, they worship the stars, the fun, the water, the snow, and, in a word, every thing that they don't understand, and they understand but little. But I am no more to describe people than countries, any farther than my own ftory comes to be concerned in them; I met with nothing peculiar to myself in all this country, which I reckon was from the defert which I spoke of last, at least, four hundred miles, half of it being another defert, which took us up twelve days fevere travelling, without house or tree, but were obliged again to Ee 2 carry carry our own provisions, as well water as bread. After we were out of this defart and had travelled two days we came to Janezay, a Mufcovite city or flation, on the great river Janezay, which they told us there parted Europe from Afia.

419

420

AND yet here I observed ignorance and paganism still prevailed, except in the Muscovite garrifons; all the country between the river Oby and the river Janezay is as entirly pagan, and the people as barbarous as the remoteft of the Tartars, nay, as any nation, for ought I know, in Afia or America. I alfo found, which I obferved to the Mufcovite governors, whom I had opportunity to converse with, that the poor pagans are not much wifer or nearer christianity for being under the Muscovite government, which they acknowledged was true enough, but that, as they faid, was none of their business; that if the czar expected to convert his Siberian or Tonguefe or Tartar fubjects, it fhould be done by fending clergymen among them not foldiers; and they added, with more fincerity than I expected, that they found it was not fo much the concern of their monarch to make the people christians as it was to make them fubjects.

FROM this river to the great river Oby we croffed a wild uncultivated country, barren of 1 people. people and good management, otherwife it is in itfelf a most pleafant, fruitful, and agreeable country. What inhabitants we found in it are all pagans, except fuch as are fent among them from Russia ; for this is the country, I mean on both fides the river Oby, whither the Musscovite criminals that are not put to death, are banished, and from whence it is next to impossible they should ever come away.

I HAVE nothing material to fay of my particular affairs till I came to Tobolski, the capital city of Siberia, where I continued fome time on the following occasion.

WE had now been almost feven months on our iourney, and winter began to come on apace, whereupon my partner and I called a council about our particular affairs, in which we found it proper, confidering we were bound for England, to confider how to difpofe of ourfelves. They told us of fledges and rein deer to carry us over the fnow in the winter time; and indeed they have fuch things that it would be incredible to relate the particulars of, by which means the Ruffians travel more in the winter than they can in fummer, becaufe in these fledges they are able to run night and day, the fnow being frozen is one univerfal covering to nature, by which the Ee 3 hills.

hills, the vales, the rivers, the lakes, all are finooth and hard as a ftone, and they run upon the furface without any regard to what is underneath.

But I had no occasion to push at a winter journey of this kind, I was bound to England not to Moscow, and my rout lay two ways, either I must go on as the caravan went till I came to Jaroslaw, and then go off west for Narva and the gulph of Finland, and so to Dantzick, where I might posfibly fell my China cargo to good advantage, or I must leave the caravan at a little town on the Dwina, from whence I had but fix days by water to Archangel, and from thence might be fure of shipping either to England, Holland, or Hamburgh.

Now to go any of thefe journies in the winter would have been prepofterous; for as to Dantzick, the Baltick would be frozen up, and I could not get paffage; and to go by land in those countries was far less faste than among the Mogul Tartars; likewise to go to Archangel in October, all the ships would be gone from thence, and even the merchants who dwell there in summer retire fouth to Moscow in the winter when the sare gone; so that I could have nothing but extremity of could to encounter, with a fcarcity of provisions, provifions, and must lie in an empty town all the winter; fo that upon the whole I thought much my better way to let the caravan go and to make provifion to winter where I was, viz. at Tobolski in Siberia, in the latitude of about fixty degrees, where I was fure of three things to wear out a cold winter with, viz. plenty of provision, such as the country afforded, a warm house with fuel enough, and excellent company; of all which I shall give a full account in it's place.

I was now in a quite different climate from my beloved ifland, where I never felt cold, except when I had my ague; on the contrary, I had much to do to bear any cloaths on my back, and never made any fire but without doors, and for my neceffity in dreffing my food, &c. Now I made me three good yefts, with large robes or gowns over them to hang down to the feet and button clofe to the wrifts, and all thefe lined with furs to make them fufficiently warm.

As to a warm house, I must confess I greatly difliked our way in England of making fires in every room in the house in open chimneys, which when the fire was out always kept the air in the room cold as the climate; but taking an apartment in a good house in the town, I ordered a chimney to be built like a furnace, in the center E e 4 of of fix feveral rooms, like a flove, the funnel to carry the fmoke went up one way, the door to come at the fire went in another, and all the rooms were kept equally warm, but no fire feen, just as they heat the bagnios in England. By this means we had always the fame climate in all the rooms, and an equal heat was preferved; and how cold foever it was without, it was always warm within, and yet we faw no fire, nor were ever incommoded with fmoke.

THE most wonderful thing of all was, that it fhould be possible to meet with good company here, in a country so barbarous as that of the most northerly parts of Europe near the frozen ocean, within but a very few degrees of Nova Zembla.

BUT this being the country where the flate criminals of Muſcovy, as I obſerved beſore, are all baniſhed, this city was full of noblemen, gentry, foldiers, and courtiers of Muſcovy. Here was the famous prince Galliezen, the old general Roboſtiſki, and ſeveral other perſons of note, and fome ladies.

By means of my Scots merchant, whom neverthelefs I parted with here, I made an acquaintance with feveral of thefe gentlemen, and from thefe in the long winter nights in which I ftaid here, here, I received feveral very agreeable vifits. It was talking one night with prince ———, one of the banished ministers of state belonging to the czar of Muscovy, that the discourse of my particular case began; he had been telling me abundance of fine things of the greatness, the magnificence, the dominions, and the absolute power of the emperor of the Russians; I interrupted him, and told him I was a greater and more powerful prince than ever the czar of Muscovy was, though my dominions were not fo large or my people fo many. The Russian grandee looked a little furprized, and, fixing his eyes steadily upon me, began to wonder what I meant.

I told him his wonder would ceafe when I had explained myfelf. First, I told him I had the abfolute difposal of the lives and fortunes of all my subjects; that notwithstanding my absolute power, I had not one perfon disaffected to my government or to my perfon in all my dominions. He shook his head at that and faid, there indeed I outdid the czar of Muscovy. I told him that all the lands in my kingdom were my own, and and all my subjects were not only my tenants but tenants at will; that they would all fight for me to the last drop, and that never tyrant, for such I acknowledged myself to be, was ever so universally verfally beloved, and yet fo horribly feared by his fubjects.

AFTER amufing him with these riddles in government for a while, I opened the cafe, and told him the flory at large of my living in the ifland, and how I managed both myfelf and the people there that were under me just as I have fince minuted it down. They were exceedingly taken with the flory, and efpecially the prince, who told me with a figh, that the true greatness of life was to be mafter of ourfelves; that he would not have exchanged fuch a flate of life as mine to be czar of Muscovy; and that he found more felicity in the retirement he feemed to be banifhed to there, than ever he found in the highest authority he enjoyed in the court of his master the czar; that the height of human wifdom was to bring our tempers down to our circumftances. and to make a calm within, under the weight of the greatest scorns without. When he came first, hither, he faid he used to tear the hair from his head and the cloaths from his back, as others had done before him, but a little time and confideration had made him look into himfelf, as well as round him to things without; that he found the mind of man, if it was but once brought to reflect upon the ftate of universal life, and how little this world was concerned in its true true felicity, was perfectly capable of making a felicity for itfelf, fully fatisfying to itfelf, and fuitable to it's own best ends and defires, with but very little affiftance from the world; that air to breathe in, food to fuftain life, cloaths for warmth, and liberty for exercise in order to health, compleated in his opinion, all that the world could do for us; and though the greatnefs, the authority, the riches and the pleafures which fome enjoyed in the world, had much in them that was agreeable to us, yet he observed that all those things chiefly gratified the coarfest of our affections, fuch as our ambition, our particular pride, our avarice, our vanity, and our fenfuality; all which being the mere product of the worst part of man, were in themselves crimes, and had in them the feeds of all manner of crimes. but neither were related to, or concerned with any of those virtues that constituted us wife men, or of those graces that distinguished us as christians; that being now deprived of all the fancied felicity which he enjoyed, in the full exercise of all those vices, he faid, he was at leifure to look upon the dark fide of them, where he found all manner of deformity, and was now convinced that virtue only makes a man truly wife, rich, and great, and preferves him in the way to a fuperior happiness in a future state; and in this, he faid, they were more happy in their banishment, ment, than all their enemies were who had the full poffeffion of all the wealth and power they had left behind them.

426

Nor, Sir, fays he, do I bring my mind to this politically, by the neceffity of my circumftances, which fome call miferable, but, if I know any thing of myfelf I would not now go back, though the czar my mafter fhould call me and reinftate me in all my former grandeur; I fay, I would no more go back to it than I believe my foul, when it fhall be delivered from this prifon of the body, and has had a tafte of the glorious flate beyond life, would come back to the goal of flefh and blood it is now inclofed in, and leave heaven to deal in the dirt and crime of human affairs.

He fpoke this with fo much warmth in his temper, fo much earneftnefs and motion of his fpirits, that it was evident it was the true fenfe of his foul. There was no room to doubt his fincerity. I told him I once thought myfelf a kind of a monarch in my old flation, of which I had given him an account, but that I thought that he was not a monarch only, but a great conqueror, for he that has got a victory over his own exorbitant defires, and the abfolute dominion over himfelf, whofe reafon entirely governs his his will, is certainly greater than he that conquers a city. But, my lord, faid I, fhall I take the liberty to afk you a queftion? With all my heart, fays he. If the door of your liberty was opened, faid I, would you not take hold of it to deliver you from this exile?

HOLD, faid he, your queftion is fubtil, and requires fome ferious distinctions to give it a fincere anfwer, and I will give it you from the bottom of my heart. Nothing that I know of in this world would move me to deliver myfelf from this state of banishment, except these two; first, the enjoyment of my relations, and fecondly, a little warmer climate; but I proteft to you, that to go back to the pomp of the court, the glory, the power, the hurry of a minister of state, the wealth, the gaiety, and the pleafures of a courtier; if my master should send me word this moment that he reftores me to all he banished me from; I proteft, if I know myfelf at all, I would not leave this wildernefs, these deferts, an dthese frozen lakes, for the palace at Mofcow.

Bur, my lord, faid I, perhaps you not only are banished from the pleasures of the court, and from the power and authority and wealth you enjoyed before, but you may be absent too from fome of the conveniencies of life, your estate perhaps perhaps confifcated, and your effects plundered, and the fupplies left you here may not be fuitable to the ordinary demands of life.

Av, fays he, that is as you suppose me to be a lord or a prince, &c. So indeed I am; but you are now to confider me only as a man, a human creature, not at all diffinguished from another, and fo I can fuffer no want unlefs I fhould be vifited with fickness and distempers. However, to put the question out of dispute, you see our manner, we are in this place five perfons of rank, we live perfectly retired, as fuited to a flate of banifhment; we have fomething refcued from the shipwreck of our fortunes, which keeps us from the mere neceffity of hunting for food; but the poor foldiers who are here without that help, live in as much plenty as we, who go into the woods and catch fables and foxes, the labour of a month will maintain them a year, and as the way of living is not expensive, fo it is not hard to get fufficient to ourfelves. So that objection is out of doors.

I HAVE not room to give a full account of the most agreeable conversation I had with this truly great man, in all which he shewed that his mind was so inspired with a superior knowledge of things, so supported by religion, as well as by a vast waft fhare of wildom, that his contempt of the world was really as much as he had expressed, and that he was always the fame to the last, as will appear in the story I am going to tell.

I HAD been here eight months, and a dark dreadful winter I thought; the cold fo intenfe that I could not fo much as look abroad without being wrapped in furs, and a mafk of fur before my face, or rather a hood with only a hole for breath and two for fight; the little day light we had, was as we reckoned for three months, not above five hours a day, and fix'at most, only that the fnow lying on the ground continually, and the weather clear, it was never quite dark. Our horfes were kept (or rather ftarved) under ground, and as for our fervants, for we hired three fervants here to look after our horfes and felves, we had every now and then their fingers and toes to thaw and take care of, least they should mortify and fall off.

It is true, within doors we were warm, the houfes being clofe, the walls thick, the lights fmall, and the glafs all double; our food was chiefly the flefh of deer, dryed and cured in the feafon; bread good enough, but baked as bifcuits; dried fifh of feveral forts, and fome flefh of mutton and of the buffaloes, which is pretty good good meat. All the flores of provision for the winter are laid up in the fummer and well cured; our drink was water mixed with aqua-vitæ inftead of brandy, and for a treat, mead inftead of wine, which, however, they have excellent good. The hunters, who venture abroad all weathers, frequently brought us in fresh venison, and sometimes bear's flesh, but we did not much care for the last. We had a good stock of tea, with which we treated our friends as above, and we lived very chearfully and well, all things confidered.

It was now March, and the days grown confiderably longer, and the weather at leaft tolerable, fo the other travellers began to prepare fleds to carry them over the fnow, and to get things ready to be going; but my measures being fixed, as I have faid, for Archangel, and not for Muscovy or the Baltic, I made no motion, knowing very well that the fhips from the fouth do not fet out for that part of the world till May or June, and that if I was there by the beginning of August, it would be as soon as any ships would be ready to go away, and therefore, I fay, I made no haste to be gone, as others did; in a word, I faw a great many people, nay, all the travellers go away before me. It feems every year they go' from thence to Muscovy for trade, viz. to carry furs, furs, and buy neceffaries with them which they bring back to furnish their shops; also others went of the same errand to Archangel, but then they also being to come back again above 800 miles, went all out before me.

IN the month of May I began to make all ready to pack up, and as I was doing this it occurred to me, that feeing all thefe were banifhed by the czar of Mufcovy to Siberia, and yet when they came there were let at liberty to go whither they would; why did they not then go away to any part of the world wherever they thought fit, and I began to examine what fhould hinder them from making fuch an attempt.

But my wonder was over when I entered upon that fubject with the perfon I have mentioned, who answered me thus. Confider, first, Sir, faid he, the place where we are; and fecondly, the condition we are in; especially, faid he, the generality of the people who are banifhed hither; we are furrounded, faid he, with ftronger things than bars and bolts; on the north fide an unnavigable ocean, where fbip never failed; every other way, faid he, we have above a 1000 miles to pass through the czar's own_dominions, and by ways utterly unpaffable, except by the roads made by the governor, and by the towns garri-VOL. II. Ff rifoned foned by his troops; fo that we could neither pafs undifcovered by the road, or fubfift any other way, fo that it is in vain to attempt it.

I was filenced indeed at once, and found that they were in a prifon, every jot as fecure as if they had been locked up in the caffle at Mofcow; however, it came into my thoughts, that I might certainly be made an inftrument to procure the escape of this excellent person, and that whatever hazard I run, I would certainly try if I could carry him off. Upon this I took an occafion one evening to tell him my thoughts; I reprefented to him, that it was very easy for me to carry him away, there being no guard over him in the country, and as I was not going to Molcow, but to Archangel, and that I went in the nature of a caravan, by which I was not obliged to lye in the stationary towns in the defert, but could encamp every night where I would, we might eafily pass uninterrupted to Archangel, where I would immediately fecure him on board an Englifh or Dutch ship, and carry him off fafe along with me, and as to his fubfiftance, and other particulars, it should be my care till he could better fupply himfelf.

He heard me very attentively, and looked earnestly on me all the while I fpoke, nay, I could fee fee in his very face, that what I faid put his fpirits into an exceeding ferment; his colour frequently changed, his eyes looked red, and his heart fluttered, that it might be even perceived in his countenance; nor could he immediately anfwer me, when I had done, and as it were expected what he would fay to it; but after he had paufed a little, he embraced me, and faid, how unhappy are we, unguarded creatures as we are. that even our greateft acts of friendship are made fnares unto us, and we are made tempters of one another! My dear friend, faid he, your offer is fo fincere, has fuch kindnefs in it, is fo difinterested in itself, and is fo calculated for my advantage, that I must have very little knowledge of the world, if I did not both wonder at it, and acknowledge the obligation I have upon me to you for it. But did you believe I was fincere in what I have often faid to you of my contempt of the world? Did you believe I fpoke my very foul to you, and that I had really obtained that degree of felicity here, that had placed me above all that the world could give me? Did you believe I was fincere, when I told you I would not go back, if I was recalled even to be all, that once I was in the court with the favour of the czar my master? Did you believe me, my friend, to be an honeft man, or did you think me to be a boafting hypocrite ? Here he stopped as if he Ff 2 would would hear what I would fay, but indeed, I foon after perceived, that he ftopped becaufe his fpirits were in motion, his great heart was full of ftruggles, and he could not go on. I was, I confefs, aftonifhed at the thing as well as at the man, and I ufed fome arguments with him to urge him to fet himfelf free; that he ought to look upon this as a door opened by heaven for his deliverance, and a fummons by providence, who has the care and difpofition of all events, to do himfelf good, and to render himfelf ufeful in the world.

He had by this time recovered himfelf: how do you know Sir, fays he warmly, that inftead of a fummons from heaven, it may not be a feint of another inftrument; reprefenting in all the alluring colours to me the fhew of felicity as a deliverance, which may in itfelf be my fnare, and tend directly to my ruin? here I am free from the temptation of returning to my former miferable greatnefs: there I am not fure but that all the feeds of pride, ambition, avarice and luxury, which I know remain in nature, may revive and take root, and in a word again overwhelm me, and then the happy prifoner, who you fee now mafter of his foul's liberty, shall be the miserable flave of his own fenfes, in the full of all perfonal liberty.

DEAR Sir, let me remain in this bleffed confinement, banifhed from the crimes of life, rather than purchafe a flew of freedom, at the expence of the liberty of my reafon, and at the expence of the future happinefs which now I have in my view, but fhall then, I fear, quickly lofe fight of; for I am but flefh, a man, a mere man, have paffions and affections asli kely to poffefs, and overthrow me as any man, O be not my friend and my tempter both together.

IF I was furprized before, I was quite dumb now, and flood filent, looking at him, and indeed admired at what I faw; the flruggle in his foul was fo great, that though the weather was extremely cold, it put him into a most violent fweat, and I found he wanted to give vent to his mind; fo I faid a word or two, that I would leave him to confider of it, and wait on him again, and then I withdrew to my own apartment.

About two hours after I heard fome body at, or near the door of my room, and I was going to open the door, but he had opened it, and came in: my dear friend, fays he, you had almost overfet me, but I am recovered; do not take it ill that I do not close with your offer, I affure you it is not for want of fense of the kindness of it in you, F f 3 and and I came to make the most fincere acknowledgement of it to you; but I hope I have got the victory over myself.

Mx lord, faid I, I hope you are fully fatisfied that you do not refift the call of heaven. Sir, faid he, if it had been from heaven, the fame power would have influenced me to have  $ac_{\tau}$ cepted it: but I hope, and am fully fatisfied, that it is from heaven that I decline it, and I have infinite fatisfaction in the parting, that you fhall leave me an honeft man ftill, though not a freeman.

I HAD nothing to do but to acquiefce, and make profeffions to him of my having no end in it, but a fincere defire to ferve him : be embraced me very paffionately, and affured me, he was fenfible of that, and fhould always acknowledge it, and with that he offered me a very fine prefent of fables, too much indeed for me to accept from a man in his circumftances, and I would have avoided them, but he would not be refufed.

THE next morning I fent my fervant to his lordship with a small present of tea, and two pieces of China damask, and four little wedges of Japan gold, which did not all weigh above fix ounces, or thereabout, but were far short of the value value of his fables, which indeed when I came to England, I found worth near 2001. He accepted the tea, and one piece of the damask, and one of the pieces of gold, which had a fine stamp upon it, of the Japan coinage, which I found he took for the rarity of it, but would not take any more, and he sent word by my servant that he defired to speak to me,

WHEN I came to him, he told me, I knew what had paffed between us, and hoped I would not move him any more in that affair; but that fince I had made fuch a generous offer to him. he asked me, if I had kindness enough to offer the fame to another perfon that he would name to me, in whom he had a great fhare of concern; I told him, that I could not fay I inclined to do fo much for any one but himfelf, for whom I had a particular value, and fhould have been glad to have been the instrument of his deliverance; however, if he would please to name the person to me, I would give him my answer; he told me it was only his fon, who, though I had not feen him, yet he was in the fame conditition with himfelf, and above two hundred miles from him, on the other fide the Oby; but that if I confented, he would fend for him.

Ff4

I MADE

I MADE no hefitation, but told him I would do it. I made fome ceremony in letting him underftand that it was wholly on his account, and that feeing I could not prevail on him, I would fhew my refpect to him, by my concern for his fon; but thefe things are too tedious to repeat here; he fent away the next day for his fon, and in about twenty days he came back with the meffenger, bringing fix or feven horfes, loaded with very rich furs, and which in the whole, amounted to a very great value.

His fervants brought the horfes into the town, but left the young lord at a diftance, till night, when he came incognito into our apartment, and his father prefented him to me; and, in fhort, we concerted there the manner of our travelling, and every thing proper for the journey.

I HAD bought a confiderable quantity of fables, black fox fkins, fine ermines, and fuch other furs as are very rich; I fay, I had bought them in that city in exchange for fome of the goods I had brought from China, in particular for the cloves and nutmegs, of which I fold the greateft part here, and the reft afterwards at Archangel, for a much better price than I could have done at London; and my partner, who was fenfible of the profit, and whofe bufinefs more particularly than than mine was merchandize, was mightily pleafed with our flay, on account of the traffick we made here.

It was the beginning of June when I left this remote place, a city I believe little heard of in the world : and indeed it is fo far out of the road of commerce that I know not how it should be much talked of : we were now come to a very fmall caravan, being only twenty-two horfes and camels in all, and all of them paffed for mine. though my new guest was proprietor of eleven of them: it was most natural also that I should take more fervants with me than I had before; and the young lord paffed for my fleward : what great man I paffed for myfelf I know not, neither did it concern me to inquire. We had here the worft and the largest defert to pass over that we met with in all the journey; indeed I call it the worft becaufe the way was very deep in fome places and very uneven in others; the beft we had to fay for it was, that we thought we had no troops of Tartars or robbers to fear, and that they never came on this fide the river Oby, or at leaft but very feldom; but we found it otherwife.

My young lord had with him a faithful Siberian fervant, who was perfectly acquainted with the

the country, and led us by private roads, that we avoided coming into the principal towns and cities upon the great road, fuch as Tumen, Soloy-Kamíkoi, and feveral others; becaufe the Muscovite garrifons which are kept there are very curious and first in their observation upon travellers, and fearching left any of the banifhed perfons of note should make their escape that way into Muscovy; but by this means, as we were kept out of the cities, fo our whole journey was a defert, and we were obliged to encamp and lie in our tents, when we might have had very good accommodation in the cities on the way : this the young lord was fo fenfible of, that he would not allow us to lie abroad when we came to feveral cities on the way, but lay abroad himfelf with his fervant in the woods, and met us always at the appointed places.

WE were just entered Europe, having paffed the river Kana, which in these parts is the boundary between Europe and Asia, and the first city on the European fide was called Soloy Kamskoi, which is as much as to say, the great city on the river Kama; and here we thought to have seen fome evident alteration in the people, but we were mission is near 700 miles long in some places, but not above 200 miles over where we 5 passed paffed it, fo till we came paft that horrible place, we found very little difference between that country and the Mogul Tartary, the people moftly all pagans, and little better than the favages of America; their houfes and towns full of idols, and their way of living wholly barbarous, except in the cities as above, and the villages near them, where they are Chriftians, as they call themfelves of the Greek church, but have their religion mingled with fo many relics of fuperfition, that it is fcarce to be known in fome places from mere forcery and witchcraft.

In paffing this foreft I thought indeed we must, after all our dangers were to our imagination elcaped as before, have been plundered and robbed, and perhaps murdered by a troop of thieves; of what country they were I am yet at a lofs to know, but they were all on horfeback, carried bows and arrows, and were at first about forty-five in number; they came fo near to us as within about two mufket fhot, and afking no questions they furrounded us with their horse, and looked very earneftly upon us twice; at length they placed themselves just in our way, upon which we drew up in a little line before our camels, being not above fixteen men in all; and being drawn up thus, we halted and fent out the Siberian fervant who attended his lord, to fee who who they were : his mafter was the more willing to let him go, becaufe he was not a little apprehenfive that they were a Siberian troop fent out after him : the man came up near them with a flag of truce, and called to them, but though he fpoke feveral languages, or dialects of languages rather, he could not underftand a word they faid, however, after fome figns to him, not to come nearer to them at his peril, the fellow came back no wifer than he went, only that by their drefs he faid, he believed them to be fome Tartars of Kalmuck, or of the Circaffian hords, and that there muft be more of them upon the great defart, though he never heard that any of them were feen fo far north before.

THIS was fmall comfort to us; however, we had no remedy; there was on our left hand, at about a quarter of a mile's diftance, a little grove, and very near the road; I immediately refolved we fhould advance to those trees, and fortify ourselves as well as we could there; for first I confidered, that the trees would in a great meafure cover us from their arrows, and in the next place they could not come to charge us in a body: it was indeed my old Portugueze pilot who proposed it, and who had this excellency attending him, namely, that he was always readies, and most apt to direct and encourage us in in cafes of the most danger : we advanced immediately with what fpeed we could and gained that little wood ; the Tartars or thieves, for we knew not what to call them, keeping their fland, and not attempting to hinder us: when we came thither we found, to our great fatisfaction, that it was a fwampy piece of ground, and on the one fide a very great fpring of water, which running out in a little brook, was a little farther joined by another of the like bignefs, and was, in thort, the head or fource of a confiderable river, called afterwards the Wirtska: the trees which grew about this fpring were not all above two hundred, but very large, and flood pretty thick ; fo that as foon as we got in we faw ourfelves perfectly fafe from the enemy, unlefs they alighted and attacked us on foot.

WHILE we ftayed here waiting the motion of the enemy fome hours, without perceiving they made any motions, our Portugueze, with fome help, cut feveral arms of trees half off, and laid them hanging across from one tree to another, and in a manner fenced us in, when about two hours before night they came down directly upon us, and though we had not perceived it, we found they had been joined by fome more of the fame, fo that they were near fourfcore horfe, whereof, however, we fancied fome were women: they they came on till they were within half flot of our little wood, when we fired one mufket without ball, and called to them, in the Ruffian tongue to know what they wanted, and bad them keep off; but they came on with a double fury directly up to the wood fide, not imaginining we were fo barricadoed that they could not eafily break in; our old pilot was our captain, as well as our engineer, and defired us not to fire upon them till they came within piftol flot, and that we might be fure to kill, we fhould be fure to take good aim when we fired : we bad him give the word of command, which he delayed fo long that they were fome of them within two pikes length of us when we let fly.

• WE aimed fo true that we killed fourteen of them and wounded feveral others, as also feveral of their horfes: for we had all of us loaded our pieces with two or three bullets at least.

THEY were terribly furprized with our fire, and retreated immediately about one hundred rod from us, in which time we loaded our pieces again, and feeing them keep that diftance, we fallied out and catched four or five of their horfes, whofe riders we fuppofed were killed, and coming up to the dead, we judged they were Tartars, but knew not from what country, or how they they came to make an excursion such an unufual length.

About an hour after, they made a motion to attack us again, and rode round our little wood to fee where they might break in; but finding us always ready to face them they went off again; and we refolved not to ftir from the place for that night

WE flept little you may be fure, but fpent the most part of the night in strengthening our fituation and barricadoing the entrances into the wood, and keeping a firict watch, we waited for day-light, and when it came it gave us a very unwelcome difcovery indeed, for the enemy who we thought were difcouraged with the reception they met with, were now greatly increased, and had fet up eleven or twelve huts or tents, as if they were refolved to befiege us; and this little camp they had pitched upon the open plain, about three. quarters of a mile from us. We were indeed furprized at this discovery; and now, I confess, I gave myfelf over for loft, and all that I had : the loss of my effects did not lie so near me, though very confiderable, as the thoughts of falling into the hands of fuch barbarians at the latter end of my journey, after fo many difficulties and hazards as I had gone through, and even in fight of our port, port, where we expected fafety and deliverance: my partner was raging, and declared, that to lofe his goods would be his ruin, and that he would rather die than be ftarved; and he was for fighting to the laft drop.

THE young lord, a gallant youth, was for fighting to the laft alfo, and my old pilot was of the opinion we were able to refift them all in the fituation we were then in : and thus we fpent the day in debates of what we fhould do, but towards evening we found that the number of our enemies ftill increafed, and we did not know but by the morning they might ftill be a greater number : fo I began to inquire of those people we had brought from Tobolski, if there were no other or more private ways, by which we might avoid them in the night, and perhaps retreat to fome town, or get help to guard us over the defert.

THE Siberian who was fervant to the young lord, told us if we defigned to avoid them, and not fight, he would engage to carry us off in the night, to a way that went north towards the Petrou, by which he made no queftion but we might get away, and the Tartars never the wifer; but he faid, his lord had told him he would not retreat, but would rather chufe to fight. I told 3 *him him he miftook his lord, for that he was too wife a man to love fighting for the fake of it; but that I knew his lord was brave enough, by what he had fhewed already, but that his lord knew better than to defire 17 or 18 men to fight 500, unlefs an unavoidable neceffity forced them to it; and that if he thought it poffible for us to efcape in the night, we had nothing elfe to do but to attempt it. He anfwered, if his lordfhip gave him fuch orders he would lofe his life if he did not perform it: we foon brought his lord to give that order, though privately, and we immediately prepared for the putting it in practice.

AND first, as soon as it began to be dark we kindled a fire in our little camp, which we kept burning, and prepared so as to make it burn all night, that the Tartars might conclude we were still there: but as soon as it was dark and we could see the stars (for our guide would not stir before) having all our horses and camels ready loaden, we followed our new guide, who I soon found steered himself by the north star, all the country being level for a long way.

AFTER we had travelled two hours very hard it began to be lighter ftill, not that it was quite dark all night, but the moon began to rife, fo that in fhort it was rather lighter than we wifhed YoL. II. G g it it to be; but by fix o'clock the next morning we were gotten above thirty miles, having almost spoiled our horses, Here we found a Ruffian village, named Kermazinskoy, where we rested, and heard nothing of the Kalmuck Tartars that day : about two hours before night we fet out again, and travelled till eight the next morning, though not quite fo hard as before, and about feven o'clock we paffed a little river called Kirtza, and came to a good large town inhabited by Ruffians, called Ozomoys; there we heard that feveral troops or hords of Kalmucks had been abroad upon the defert, but that we were now compleatly out of danger of them, which was to our great fatisfaction. Here we were obliged to get fome fresh horses, and having need enough of reft we staved five days; and my partner and I agreed to give the honeft Siberian who brought us thither, the value of ten piftoles for conducting us.

In five days more we came to Veuftima, upon the river Wirtzogda, and running into the Dwina; we were there very happily near the end of our travels by land, that river being navigable in feven days paffage to Archangel. From hence we came to Lawrenskoy the third of July, and providing ourfelves with two luggage boats, and a barge for our own convenience, we embarked 3 the feventh, and arrived all fafe at Archangel the eighteenth, having been a year five months and three days on the journey, including our ftay of eight months and odd days at Tobolski. We flayed at this place fix weeks for the arrival of the ships, and must have tarried longer had not a Hamburgher come in above a month sooner than usual.

.450

WE then fet fail from Archangel the 20th of August, the fame year, and after no extraordinary bad voyage, arrived in the Elbe the 13th of September. Here my partner and I found a very good fale for our goods, as well those of China, as the fables, &c. of Siberia; and dividing the produce of our effects, my fhare amounted to 34751. 17s. 3d. notwithstanding fo many loss we had fustained, and charges we had been at; only remembering that I had included in this about 6001. worth of diamonds which I had purchasfed at Bengal.

HERE the young lord took his leave of us, and went up the Elbe, in order to go to the court of Vienna, where he refolved to feek protection, and where he could correspond with those of his father's friends who were left alive. He did not part without all the testimonies he could give me of gratitude for the fervice I had done G g 2 him, him, and the fenfe of my kindness to the prince his father. -

To conclude, having flayed near four months in Hamburgh, I came from thence over land to the Hague, where I embarked in the pacquet, and arrived in London the tenth of January, 1705, having been abfent from England ten years and pine months.

AND here intending to harrafs myfelf no more, I refolved to prepare for a longer journey than all thefe, having lived feventy-two years a life of infinite variety, and learned fufficiently to know the value of retirement, and the bleffing of ending our days in peace.

FINIS.

452