¶ Finis partis estivalis.<sup>25</sup>

Notes, pages 51*-92*.

<sup>1</sup> ST gives only one or two verses for each gospel canticle. The remainder of each canticle is pointed by the editor. The major portion of the psalms and canticles in Tonus Peregrinus are likewise set by the editor.

There is no evidence from Sarum sources to suggest the use of the flex in the first part of the tone. Should the performer choose to use the flex, the common forms are: Tones I, IV, VI, VII, VIII, a major second down; Tones II, III, V: a minor third down.

Mediations and endings must be regulated to the accents of the text. Trochaic accent patterns naturally accommodate the given forms. Dactylic accent patterns, such as Dóminus, require an additional note for the penultimate (or antepenultimate) syllable. These additional notes are shown as white notes in the music. The determination of these additional notes is the work of the editor.

Abrupt mediations are generally not used. However, ST:xxxv indicates the use of an abrupt mediation in Tone V. for the Hebrew word "Israel". This practice agrees with the note in LU:114 that recognizes this practice.

The Sarum psalm tones are set to English in OV:1**-13**, and in SP:iii-xxiii, 252-256, 266-268, and 274-279.

<sup>2</sup> According to G. H. Palmer (SP:xj.), the mediation has "no fixed accent"; the inflection is always sung to the penultimate syllable, whether accented or not.

<sup>3</sup> G. H. Palmer (SP:iiij.) draws attention to the fact that the Psalm De profundis in the office Commendatio animarum has a unique ending to Tone I (Manuale 1542:120r). This ending is not found in the Tonary, perhaps because it is used only in this one place. The ending is as follows :

atque sic fi-ní- tur.

<sup>4</sup> In the Gospel canticles italics indicates the inflections of the ornate mediation in the first half and of the upper inflection of the second half of the tone. The intonation is normally be used on every verse. '—' indicates the omission of the intonation in a particular verse. The Hebrew words Abraham and David have been pointed with the accent on the final syllable. This accords with the setting of Tonus Peregrinus found in 1519-P:27v.

<sup>5</sup> Ending ii. not found among the Roman forms, is especially associated with the O antiphons and their cognates. ST. gives an epiphonus (liquescent podatus) in each ending, thus :

i. atque sic fi-ní-tur. ii. atque sic fi- ní-tur.

The epiphonus also appears in a large number of the psalm-tone endings in AS. It would seem that this could be used ad libitum in Sarum chant, for it does not appear in the settings found in ST:xvii. and lxvii.

- <sup>7</sup> ST provides two different solemn forms.
- <sup>8</sup> Tone IV. is often transposed to the fourth above when endings iv. v. viii. and ix. are used. This transposition accomodates a major second above the finalis.
- <sup>9</sup> In ST:xxix. 'Israel' is set A.AB.A.
- <sup>10</sup> Tone V. has no solemn form. The alternate form of ending i. appears only infrequently, and appears to be a later development. See for example I. Vespers, Trinity, 5. Ant. Ex quo omnia. G. H. Palmer (SP:xvii.) suggests that an additional weak syllable between the accents of endings i. and ii. should be C, not B.
- <sup>11</sup> In ST:xxxv. and lxix. 'Israel' is set in the abrupt form, C.C.D. reflecting the Hebrew accentuation. 1520:69v. sets 'Israel' the same way.
- <sup>12</sup> In ST. these forms are transposed to the fifth above. The transposition allows for a major second below the finalis in the antiphon. In ST:lxix-lxx. the variant mediations appear in proximity to one another. The former seems to be more common in Sarum use. In AS. the penultimate neume frequently appears as a cephalicus (liquescent clivis), G-F.
- <sup>13</sup> Tone VII. is sometimes transposed to the fourth above when endings i. and ii. are used.
- <sup>14</sup> In ST:li. and lxx. 'Israel' is set D.C.D.
- <sup>15</sup> In ST:lj. 'Dóminum' is set C.B.BA.
- <sup>16</sup> Tone VIII. is occasionally found transposed down a fifth.
- <sup>17</sup> According to SP:xxij. 'The Irregular or Peregrine tone is probably of Byzantine origin, and was introduced into France in the ixth century. Even in the xth century it was styled tonus novissimus, and it was not until the beginning of the xjth century that it came into general use. Since that time it has been included in the various Tonalia under the head of Tone VIII. Owing to the complex nature of its ending (as given in English mss.) it requires to be noted throughout to any Psalm or Canticle with which it is used.'
- <sup>18</sup> ST:lxiv. gives only the first two verses. In ST:lxiv. and BL-52359:489r. 'Israel' is set AB<sub>2</sub>.G.G. In certain verse sBL-52359:489v. sets the conclusion F.E.ED (rather than F.F.ED); these are 9, 12, 17, 18, 21, 22, 25 and 27. In 1519-P:141v. at verse 20. 'Israel' is set G.G.F; at verse 21. 'Dóminum' is set G.G.F; at verse 21. 'super vos' is set G.G.F.
- <sup>19</sup> ST:lxiv. gives only the first three verses. 1519-P:24r. gives only the first two verses. The remainder has been set by the editor. In 1519-P:24r, verses 1. and 2. 'Dómino' is set G.G.F.
- <sup>20</sup> ST:lxiv. gives only the first four verses. 1519-P:27v. gives only the first two verses. The remainder has been set by the editor. In 1519-P:27v. verse 2. 'in domo' is set AB<sub>2</sub> G.G.
- <sup>21</sup> ST:lxiv gives only the first two verses. 1519-P:144r gives only the first verse. The remainder has been set by the editor. In ST:lxiv. 'Magníficat : ánima' is set AB<sub>2</sub>.A.A G.G.G.
- <sup>22</sup> In ST:xxix. the neuma omits the repetition of the first G. The repetition does appear in 1520:69r. and in 1519-P:22r.
- <sup>23</sup> This brief Tonale follows the Temporale in 1520:68v.-70r.
- <sup>24</sup> In 1520:70r. the last two endings are the same. In the edition the penultimate ending has been altered to conform to the Sarum Tonary.
