¶ Lesson from the Holy Gospel according to Luke, final. (xxiv. 13-35.) [Lesson j.]

AT that time. Behold, two of Jesus' disciples went, the same day, to a town which was sixty furlongs from Jerusalem, named Emmaus. And they talked together of all these things which had happened. And that which followeth.

Homily of Blessed Gregory, Pope.
(xxiiij.)²

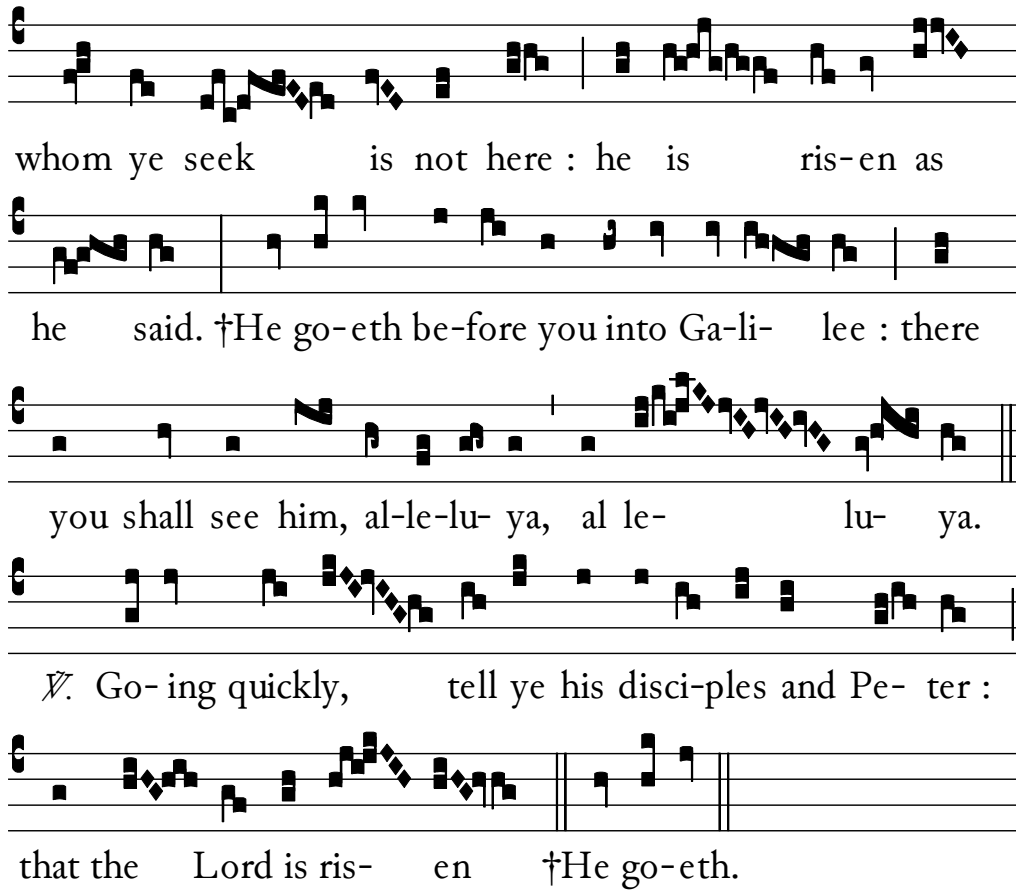

¶ Even though in the midst of a daily observance, a few words may be addressed to you³ : and perchance they shall profitably benefit. Seeing that often the nourishment which is less sufficient : is the more avidly consumed. Therefore I have determined to examine the meaning of the Gospel lesson summarily <and> not word by word : lest a more lengthy discourse of explanation should prevail to burden your good will. Behold, you have heard, dearly beloved brethren, that to two disciples as they walked in the way, indeed not believing but yet talking of him, the Lord appeared : but he did not shew them an appearance which they might recognize. The Lord therefore shewed outwardly in the eyes of <their> bodies : that which was taking place inwardly in themselves, in the eyes of <their> hearts. For in fact they both loved and doubted within themselves. For the Lord was present to them outwardly : and yet he shewed them not who he was. But thou.

*Maria Magdalene. AS:240; 1519:222r; 1531:128r.*⁴

went early in the morn-ing to the se-pul-chre : Je-sus whom ye seek is not here : he is ris-en as he said. †He go-eth be-fore you into Ga-li- lee : there you shall see him, al-le-lu- ya, al le- lu- ya.

 ⁊. Go-ing quickly, tell ye his disci-ples and Pe- ter :
 that the Lord is ris- en †He go-eth.

7128a.

Second Lesson.

AS they were talking of him he made his presence known to them : but as they had doubts he concealed his recognizeable appearance from them. He did indeed join the conversation, he reprov'd the hardness of <their> understanding, he opened the mysteries of holy scripture concerning himself : and yet because he was still a stranger to their hearts by faith, he made as though to go farther. Now we say 'to make' as to say 'to fashion', whence those who fashion with clay are called potters. Simple Truth therefore maketh nothing by duplicity : but he so shewed himself to them in body, as he was amongst them in the mind. For they had to be proved, whether these, which did not yet love him as [128v.] God : were yet able to love <him> as a stranger. But since these with whom Truth was walking could not be foreigners to charity : they called him to abide with them as though a stranger. But why say we, Called : when it is there written, They constrained him ? No doubt from this example it is inferred that strangers are not merely to be invited as guests : but are even to be pressed. They set the table, they offer food : and God, whom they had not known when he was explaining the holy Scriptures : they recognize in the breaking of bread. But thou, O Lord.

Congratulamini michi. AS:240; 1519:222v; 1531:128v.

6323. 2. Resp. III.  E-joice with me, * all you that love the Lord : for he whom I sought hath appear-ed

to me. †And while I was weep-ing at the se-pulchre, 6323b. I saw my Lord, al-le- lu- ya. ✠. When the dis-ci- ples went away, I went not a- way : but enkindled with the fire of love for him, I was a- flame with long- ing.

†And while.

Lesson iij.

NOT by hearing the commandments of God were they enlightened, therefore : they were enlightened by doing them : for it is written, Not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified. Let any therefore who wisheth to understand what is heard : hasten to fulfil in works what he hath already been able to understand. Behold the Lord was not recognized when he was speaking : but he deigned to be recognized when he was being fed. Love hospitality therefore, dearly beloved brethren : love works of charity. Hence indeed it is said by Paul, Let the charity of the brotherhood abide in you. And hospitality do not forget, for by this some, being not aware of it, have entertained angels. Hence Peter saith, Use hospitality one towards another, without murmuring. Hence Truth himself saith, I was a stranger : and you took me in. Consider, brethren, how great is the virtue of hospitality. Receive ye Christ at your tables : that you may prevail to be received by him at the eternal banquet. Offer hospitality now to Christ the stranger, that at the judgment he may not know you as if strangers : but that he may receive you into the kingdom as one of his own, who liveth and reigneth with the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost, God, world without end, amen. But thou.

Prayer.

 God, who in the Paschal Solemnity hast bestowed remedies upon the world : we beseech thee, [O Lord,]⁸ extend the heavenly gift unto thy people : that they may both deserve to attain to perfect freedom, and advance to life everlasting.⁹ Through our Lord.

On this day and on the other following days through the week after the first Let us bless the Lord. at Matins let a Procession be made to¹⁰ the Crucifix through the middle of the Quire and the west entrance : with an Acolyte in white bearing the Cross with Taperers and Thurifers and a boy bearing the Book before the Priest in a Surplice all of whom be in the same vestments as at Vespers on Easter Day [except the Acolyte]¹¹ singing [an Antiphon]¹² while walking, the Rulers of the Choir beginning, Christ being raised. 1283. and thus let be made a Station before the Cross as at Vespers except for the oil and chrism as above.

℟. Let the Jews now declare. 1284.

And let this ℟. be said this day : by two of the Superior Grade in Surplices before the entrance to the Quire facing the Clergy. But on the following two days : by two Clerks of the ij. Form in the aforesaid place and vestment. Nevertheless on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday let the aforesaid Antiphon be sung, but without first censing the Cross let first be said this ℟.

℟. Say ye among the nations. 1358.

Here let the Taperers approach the Priest, and the boy bearing the Book : and let the Priest say.

Let us pray.

Prayer. O God, who for our sake didst will thy Son. 1358.

Having finished saying the Prayer let the Taperers and the boy bearing the Book resume their places, and in the same way let them do and approach the Priest throughout the whole year.

At the entrance into the Quire let the Antiphon of Saint Mary be sung.

¶ Yet it is to be noted that if the Great Litany or any other Feast occur in this week of Easter : nothing is made of the fast in that year : neither shall <anything> be made of the Procession nor of the Feast of the same : because all the saints arose with Christ, being restored to life in Christ, and the Feast of the Resurrection [of Christ]¹⁵ is applicable to all the saints : therefore in the week of Easter nothing is made of the Feast of any Saint unless by chance it should fall on the Octave of Easter, then indeed it can be deferred until the morrow : and there let be made three Lessons with Rulers of the Choir, if the Feast shall have Rulers of the Choir. Thus when the Feast of Saint Richard, Bishop should fall on the Octave of Easter : then let it be deferred until the following Tuesday. Nevertheless if a Double Feast should happen to fall within Easter Week or on the Octave of Easter or on the three days preceding Easter : let the service be made of the same Feast after the aforesaid Octave,¹⁶ when it may conveniently be made : that is to say where it is able to have both Vespers. If on the other hand it be a Simple Feast in that year let it be entirely omitted unless by chance it shall fall on the Octave of Easter. Let this same <rule> be kept on the Vigil of Pentecost and in the following week.

Lesson from the Holy Gospel according to Luke. Final. (xxiv. 36-47.)

AT that time. Jesus stood in the midst of his disciples, and saith to them, Peace be to you ; it is I, fear not. And that which followeth.

A Homily of the Venerable Bede, Priest.
(3. 2. libri).²⁸

IT should first be noted, and diligently committed to memory : that the Lord deigned to stand in their midst as the disciples were speaking of him, and to reveal <his> presence in a vision. For this is what he promised elsewhere to all the faithful, saying, Where there are two or three gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. In order to strengthen the constancy of our faith, which the presence²⁹ of divine goodness always inspireth : he wished at length to show <his> bodily presence in a vision. And now for us, although we <are> [129v.] lying far below the feet of the apostles, we ought to rely upon this itself to be done by his mercy : namely for himself to be in our midst, as often as we assemble gathered in that name. That name of course is Jesus : that is, Saviour. And when we assemble to speak of the attainment of eternal salvation : it is without doubt understood that we are gathered in the name of Jesus. Nor is it right to doubt him to be present as we are conferring about those things which he loveth. And certainly the more truly : the better we retain in a more perfect heart what we profess with <our> mouth. But thou.

Second Lesson.

Then it must be seen that the Saviour appearing to the disciples entrusteth to them the joys of peace : repeating that same thing, the celebrated glory of immortality :
seeing that he was about to go to the suffering of death, he had commended as a special pledge of salvation and life to them, saying, Peace

I leave with you, my peace I give unto
you. The angels which were seen soon after he was born likewise proclaimed the grace of the gift to the shepherds : praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace to men of good will. Because without doubt the whole of our Redeemer's dispensation in the flesh : is the reconciliation of the world. For this to be sure he became incarnate, for this he suffered, for this he was raised from the dead : that we which sinning had fallen into the wrath of God : might be led back by his reconciliation to the peace of God. Whence he was rightly named by the Prophet, The Father of the world to come, the Prince of Peace. And the Apostle, writing of him to those of the gentiles which had believed, saith, And coming, he preached peace to you that were afar off, and peace to them that were nigh. For by him we have access both in one Spirit to the Father. But thou.

7734b.  Now on the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were gather-ed to-ge-ther :

Je- sus stood in the midst, and saith to them.

†Peace.

Third Lesson.

NOW when the Lord appeared to them, the disciples, confused and much frightened, supposed that they were seeing a spirit : they indeed recognized it to be the Lord who appeared, but believed that they saw him not in the substance of his body but in that of his spirit. That is, since they knew that his body was dead and buried, in what they now saw raised from the dead : they supposed rather that they had before <their> eyes the spirit which, forsaking the body, he had committed into the hands of <his> Father. But this their error, by which they had been struck down at the new and unknown vision : the benevolent

Master, by most tender gift of consolation and of admonition, undertook to wipe away, Why, asketh he, are you troubled, and why do thoughts arise in your hearts ? See my hands and feet, that it is I myself. For not without cause ordered he them to see and recognize his hands and feet, rather than <his> countenance with which they had been familiar : but in that having seen the signs of the nails by which he had been fixed to the cross : they might be able to understand it not only to be a body which they saw, but the very body of their Lord which they had known to have been crucified.

Jesus³⁵ shewed

which followeth.

A Homily of Blessed Gregory, Pope.

(24.)³⁷

THE lesson from the holy Gospel which just now hath been read in your ears, my brethren, knocketh upon the soul with a question : but by its knocking sheweth power of discrimination. Indeed it may be asked, why Peter who was a fisherman before <his> conversion : returned to fishing after <his> conversion. And as Truth saith, No man putting his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God, why did he return to what he had abandoned ? But if the power of discretion be considered, it is readily seen : that evidently if the trade appeared <to be> without sin before <his> conversion : it was likewise without fault to return to it again after <his> conversion. For we know that Peter <was> a fisherman : but Matthew <was> a tax-collector. Now after his conversion Peter returned to fishing : but Matthew did not sit down again to the business of tax collecting. Because it is one thing to seek a living by fishing : and another to gain riches by tax-collecting. There are many trades : that are unable to be practiced without sins, either partially or not at all. Those therefore which are involved with sin : it is necessary that the soul not return to them after conversion.

Second Lesson.

IT may also be asked : why, when the disciples were labouring in the sea, after his resurrection the Lord stood on the shore : who before his resurrection walked on the waves of the sea in the sight of the disciples. The reason for which is quickly discerned : if the occasion of each is considered. For what doth the sea signify but the present world : which is dashed by the circumstances of the tumults and surging waves of corruptible life ? What is figured by the solidity of the shore, except that perpetual eternity of rest ? Because therefore the disciples as yet were among the waves of <this> mortal life : they laboured in the sea. But because our Redeemer had already passed beyond the corruption of the flesh : after his resurrection he stood on the shore. As if he would declare the mystery of his resurrection to the disciples in actions, saying, Now I appear not to you in the sea : because I am not with you in the tumult of the waves. Hence it is that in another place after his resurrection : he saith to these same disciples, These are the words which I spoke to you, while I was yet with you. For it was not that he was not with them : to whom <his> bodily presence appeared. But yet he now denied himself to be with them : from whose mortal bodies the flesh of <his> immortality stood apart. What is professed, he indeed disclosed, that he himself was not situated with them : this, to be sure shewn by the place where <his> body was, demonstrateth that while they were still at sea he was already by the shore.

Third Lesson.

NOW with the disciples there was great difficulty in fishing : so that at the Master's coming great sublimity of admiration might be manifest, who at once said, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and you shall find. It is read twice in the holy Gospel : that the Lord ordered that the nets should be let down for fishing. Before <his> passion evidently, and after <his> resurrection. But before our Redeemer should suffer and rise again, he ordered the net to be let down for fishing indeed : but whether it was to be let down on the right side or on the left he did not declare. Appearing to the disciples after the resurrection, however : he ordered <the net> to be let down on the right side. In that catch so many were taken : that the nets were broken. But in this many were caught, and the nets were not broken. Who doth not know that the good are figured by the right side, and the bad by the left ? Now that catch in which it is not particularly ordered on which side the net should be cast, signifieth the present Church, which gathereth the good together with the bad, nor chooseth those which it hauleth : because it knoweth that it is not able to choose. But this catch, after the resurrection of the Lord, was let down only on the right side : because only the Church of the elect, [130v.] which will have nothing of the works of the left side, shall come to see the glory of his brightness. But thou.

AT that time.
Mary stood

And that which followeth.

A Homily of Blessed Gregory, Pope.

(25.)⁴⁶

Mary Magdalen, that had been in the city, a sinner, loving the Truth, washeth away the stains of <her> offenses : and the voice of Truth is fulfilled which saith, Her many sins have been dismissed :
because she hath loved much. Indeed

she who previously had remained cold through sin : afterwards burned strongly by loving. For after she came to the tomb, and did not find the body of the Lord there : she believed that it had been taken away,
and reported so to the disciples.
They which were coming saw : and they believed it to be as the woman had said. And directly it is written of them, The disciples therefore departed to their home. And then is subjoined, But Mary stood at the sepulchre without, weeping. But thou.

R̃. 1. Mary Magdalene. Found on the immediately preceding Monday j. 1362.

Lesson ij.

IT must be pondered, how great a power of love had been kindled in the mind of this woman : who did not withdraw from the tomb of the Lord even when the disciples withdrew. She sought whom she had not found, she wept as she sought : and being inflamed with the fire of his love, she burned with desire for him whom she believed had been taken away. Whence it happened that she alone saw him : who remained that she might seek. For to be sure the power of good works : lieth in perseverance. And the voice of Truth saith, But he that shall persevere unto the end, he shall be saved. And in the precept of the law the tail of the victim is appointed to be offered in sacrifice. Now the tail : is the end of the body. And he maketh a good offering : which bringeth the sacrifice of a good work through to <its> due conclusion. Hence Joseph, amongst the rest of the brethren : is described as having had a tunic reaching the ankles. Now a tunic <reaching> the ankles : is a good work reaching <its> completion. But thou, O Lord.

Lesson iij.⁴⁸

MAry, as she was weeping, stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre. To be sure she had already seen the empty tomb : she had already reported that the Lord had been taken away. Why is it that again she stooped down, again she wanted to see ? For it sufficeth not for a lover to have looked once : because the power of love increaseth the effort of the search. Thus she sought a first time : and found little. She persevered in seeking : whence it came to pass that she found <him>. And this happened because desires increase when delayed : and through increase they grasp what they find.

And so she who thus loveth, who stoopeth down again to the tomb which she had already examined, let us see then the fruit of the search which redoubleth by the power of love in her. It continueth, She saw two angels in white, sitting, one at the head, and one at the feet, where the body of Jesus had been laid. Why is it that two angels were seen in the place of the Lord's body, one sitting at the head and another at the feet, except that in the Latin tongue messenger is called angel, and that from his passion it was to be announced that he was God before the ages and man at the end of the ages ? An angel sitteth as if at the head, when by the apostle John proclaimeth : that, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. And an angel sitteth as if at the feet, when he saith, The Word was made flesh : and dwelt among us.

Lesson from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew, final. (xxviij. 16-20.)

AT that time. The eleven disciples went into Galilee, unto the mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And seeing him, they adored. And that which followeth.

*A Homily of the Venerable Bede, Priest.
(iv. Second Book).⁵¹*

THE Gospel reading, dearly beloved brethren, which we have just heard, and according to the account, gleameth full of joy : because it describeth in plain language the triumph of our Redeemer and at the same time the gifts of our redemption.

And if we prefer to treat this at greater length : we shall learn the more pleasing fruit of the spiritual meaning contained within the literal sense. The word of God <is> indeed like the behaviour of spices, which the more finely examined, as if rubbed and ground : the greater the inner sweetness of the fragrance it rendereth. For it is plain and sweet to be heard by the devout, that the disciples went into Galilee, unto the mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And seeing him they adored. But it is not lacking in mystery : that after the resurrection the Lord appeared to the disciples, whether in Galilee or on a mountain. But thou.

℟̃. 1. With great power. This ℟̃. is found in the immediately preceding Tuesday j. 1376.

Lesson ij.

[131v.] Thus the Lord appeared on a mountain : that he might indicate that the body, which he had taken on at birth from the earth common to the human race : rising again, now raised above all earthly things, he had clothed with heavenly power. He appeared on the mountain : that he might admonish the faithful that if they desired to see the height of his resurrection : they should strive to pass over from the basest cravings to heavenly desires. To be sure the name Galilee, which containeth the saving mystery : is very well known from the abundant expositions of the fathers. But it is not irrelevant to often repeat by word : what it is necessary always to keep in mind. Galilee of course means : a crossing over made, or a revelation. And the interpretation of either name : leads to a single end. Accordingly we read above : the angel said to the women, Go, tell ye his disciples that he is risen : and behold he will go before you into Galilee ; there you shall see him. And now with the Evangelist recounting we know that the disciples went into Galilee : and seeing him they adored.

Third Lesson.

WHat is it, therefore, that Jesus preceedeth the disciples into Galilee that he may be seen by them : they follow, and seeing him they adore : except that Christ is risen from the dead, the firstfruits of them that sleep, for they which are Christ's follow him, and they themselves in their turn pass over to life from death. And seeing him there they adore : whom they contemplate in the form of his divinity <and> praise without end ? To which vision that agreeth : in that Galilee is also interpreted revelation. Then indeed we, with open face (as the Apostle attesteth) beholding the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image : all we which entirely reveal our way to him, and follow his footsteps with unfeigned faith. And seeing him, it saith, they adored : but some doubted. Now seeing <him> they knew the Lord, and because they had learned this one to be God : lowering <their> faces to the ground they adored. But in their minds there was a doubt not to be disregarded : for they believed that they saw not the revived body in which he suffered, but only the spirit which he surrendered when his passion was finished. Hence the gracious Master forthwith both strengthened in faith those which already believed : and those which as yet doubted, he summoned to the grace of faith : of course making known to all how much greatness of glory the humanity he had taken on for men, given to death and rising again, had reached.

All power is given to me (he saith) in heaven and in earth. For here he spake not of the divinity coeternal with the Father, but of the humanity he had assumed, who by taking up was made less, a little less than the angels : and in which rising from the dead, was crowned with glory and honour, and wast set over the works of the hands of the Father, with all things brought into subjection under his feet. But thou, O Lord.

AT that time. On The first day of the week Mary Magdalen cometh
early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and she saw the stone taken away from the sepulchre. And that which followeth.

A Homily of Blessed Gregory, Pope.

(22.)⁵⁷

THE lesson from the holy Gospel
which ye have just heard, brethren, is quite clear on the historical surface : but we must briefly inquire into its mysteries. Mary

Magdalen when it was yet dark : came to the tomb. According to the account the hour is recorded : but according to the mystical meaning we must seek. Now Mary was searching for the Creator of all things whom she had seen in the flesh : dead in the tomb. And because she found no trace of him : she believed him to have been taken away. Thus it was still dark : when she came to the tomb. She ran quickly : she reported to the disciples. But those ran more swiftly which had loved more than the others, of course Peter and John.

R. 1. Behold, the lion. This R. is found on the nearest preceding Wednesday. 1384.

Lesson ij.

Now the two ran together : but John ran ahead more swiftly than Peter. John came first to the tomb : but he did not presume to enter. Then Peter came after : and he went in. What, brethren, what doth this running signify ? Can it be that the description of this so subtle

Evangelist is be believed to be empty of mysteries ? Not at all. Nor indeed would John have said that he went before and did not enter : had he believed that a mystery was lacking in his trepidation. What therefore is signified by John except the Synagogue, what by Peter except the Church ? Nor is it to be wondered at if it is seen : that the Synagogue is regarded as represented by the younger, however the Church by the elder. For although for the worship of God the Synagogue was earlier than the Church of the Gentiles : yet in the reckoning of the world the multitude of Gentiles was earlier than the Synagogue, Paul attesting who saith, Because that was not the first which is spiritual, but that which is natural.

Third Lesson.

THe Church of the Gentiles therefore is signified by the elder, Peter : and by John, the younger, the Synagogue of the Jews. They both ran together, because from the rising of their time unto the going down, the Gentiles ran along a route equal and in common with the Synagogue, albeit not equal and in common in understanding. The Synagogue came first to the tomb, but did not enter : because although she received the commandments of the law, and heard the prophecies of the incarnation and passion of the Lord, yet she was unwilling to believe in him who had died. John indeed saw the linen cloths that were laid out, but yet he did not enter : because evidently the Synagogue recognized the sacraments of Scripture and yet put off entering by believing in the Lord's. Of whom long since and at length she had prophesied : she saw him present, and refused to accept <him>. A man to be despised : she refused to believe God had become mortal flesh. What is it then except that he ran more quickly : and yet stood still before the empty tomb ? Therefore Simon Peter came following him : and entered into the tomb. Because the Church of the Gentiles followed after : the mediator between God and men, the man Jesus Christ, and she knew that he was dead in the flesh, and <yet> believed him to be alive in God.
